INTRODUCTION

TO VASISHTHA.

THE Vâsishṭha Dharmaśâstra is, like that of Gautama, the last remnant of the Sûtras of a Vedic school, which, as far as our knowledge goes at present, has perished, together with the greater part of its writings. We owe the preservation of its Dharma-sûtra probably to the special law schools of India, which, attracted as it would seem by its title and the legend connecting it with Vasishṭha Maitrâvaruṇi, one of the most famous Ṛishis of the Rig-veda and a redoubtable champion of Brâhmanism, made it one of their standard authorities. The early existence of a legend according to which the Vâsishṭha Dharma-sûtra was considered either to be a work composed by the Ṛishi Vasishṭha, or at least to contain the sum of his teaching on the duty of man, is indicated by several passages of the work itself. For the Dharma-sûtra names Vasishṭha, or appeals to his authority on no less than three occasions. First, we find a rule on lawful interest, which is emphatically ascribed to Vasishṭha[1]. 'Learn the interest for a money lender,' the Sûtra says, 'declared by the word of Vasishṭha; five mâshas (may be taken) for twenty (kârshâpaṇas every month).' Again, at the end of a long string of rules[2] which contain the observances to be kept by sinners who undergo Kṛikkhra penances, Vasishṭha's name is brought forward as the authority for them, and the last words are, 'Thus speaks the divine Vasishṭha.' Finally, the concluding Sûtra of the whole work[3] gives

[1] Vâsishṭha Dharmaśâstra II, 51.

[2] Vâsishṭha Dharmaśâstra XXIV, 5.

[3] Vâsishṭha Dharmaśâstra XXX, 11. Similar invocations of teachers at the end of Sûtras occur frequently, e. g. Âśvalâyana Śrauta-sûtra XII, 15, 14; Rig-vidhâna V, 3, 4; Yâska, Nirukta, Roth, p. 216.

expression to the devotion felt by the author for the Rishi, 'Adoration to Vasishtha, Satayâtu, the son of Mitra and Varuna and of Urvasî.' The epithets used in this last passage conclusively show that the Vasishtha after whom the Dharma-sûtra is named, is the individual who, according to the Brâhmanical tradition, is the Rishi of a large portion of the seventh Mandala of the Rig-veda and the progenitor of the Vâsishtha clan of Brâhmans, and who in some hymns of the Rig-veda appears as the purohita or domestic priest of king Sudâs and the rival of Visvâmitra, and in other Sûktas as a half mythical being. For the verses Rig-veda VII, 33, 11–14 trace the origin of this Vasishtha to the two sons of Aditi, Mitra and Varuna, and to the Apsaras Urvasî, and contain the outline of the curious, but disgusting story of his marvellous birth, which Sâyana narrates more circumstantially in the commentary on verse 11. Moreover, the word Satayâtu, which in the Dharma-sûtra is used as an epithet of Vasishtha, occurs Rig-veda VII, 18, 21 in close connexion with the Rishi's name. Sâyana explains it in his commentary on the latter passage as 'the destroyer of many demons,' or, 'he whom many demons seek to destroy,' and takes it as an epithet of the sage Parâsara, who is named together with Vasishtha. It would, however, seem that, if the verse is construed on strictly philological principles, neither Sâyana's interpretation, nor that suggested by the Dharma-sûtra can be accepted, and that Satayâtu has to be taken as a proper name[1]. But, however that may be, it is not doubtful that we may safely infer from the expressions used in the last sentence of the Dharma-sûtra, that the Vasishtha to whom the invocation is addressed and the composition of the work is ascribed, either immediately or through the medium of pupils, is the individual named in the Rig-veda. The connexion of the Dharma-sûtra with one of the Rishis of the Rig-veda which is thus established, possesses a particular interest and importance, because it corroborates the statement of Govindasvâmin, the commentator of Baudhâyana, that the Institutes of Vasishtha were originally studied by and authoritative for the Bahv*ri*kas, the *Rig*vedins alone, and afterwards became an authority for all Brâhmans[1]. In the introduction to Gautama it has been shown that a similar assertion which Govinda makes with regard to the Gautama Dharma-sûtra can be corroborated by a considerable amount of external and internal evidence. It has been pointed out that not only the fact that the spiritual pedigrees of the *Kh*andoga schools enumerate several Gautamas, but also the partiality for texts of the Sâma-veda, which the Institutes of Gautama show on several occasions, strongly support the tradition that the Gautamîya Dharma*s*âstra originally was the exclusive property of a school of Sâmavedins. In the case of the Vâsish*th*a Dharma*s*âstra indications of the latter kind are, if not entirely wanting, at least very faint. The number of Vedic passages quoted is, no doubt, large; but few among them belong to the class of Mantras which are recited during the performance of *gri*hya rites, and must be taken from the particular recension of the Veda to which the performer belongs. Besides, the texts of this description which actually occur, do not bear the mark of a particular Veda or Sâkhâ. The numerous texts, on the other hand, which are quoted in support or explanation of the rules, are taken impartially from all the three ancient Vedas. For this reason it would be dangerous to use the references to a dozen *Rik*as in chapters XVII and XXVI, as well as to the legend of Suna*h*sepa, which is told only in works belonging to the Rig-

[1] See Sacred Books of the East, vol. ii, p. xlix, note 2. As Govindasvâmin's statements possess a considerable importance, I give here the whole commentary on Baudhâyana I, 1, 2, 6, according to my two MSS., C. I. and C. T.: ननु किमिति व्यवस्था यावता मूलश्रुतिरेषामविशेषेण कल्प्यते यथा होलिकादीनां यथा वा बोधायनीयं धर्मशास्त्रं कैश्चिदेव पठ्यमानं सर्वाधिकारं भवति तथा गोतमीयगोभिलीये छन्दोगैरेव पठ्येते [पठ्यंते C. veda, as a proof that the Vâsishtha Dharmaśâstra is the work of a Rigvedin. Under these circumstances the three passages, mentioning Vasishtha's name, and especially the last which identifies him with the Rishi of the Rig-veda, have a particularly great importance, as they are the only pieces of internal evidence which can be brought forward in favour of Govindasvâmin's valuable statement. But the latter is, even without any further corroboration, credible enough, because no reason is apparent why Govinda should have invented such a story, and because his assertion fully agrees with the well-established facts known about the other existing Dharma-sûtras, which all were composed not for the benefit of the Âryans in general, but in order to regulate the conduct of particular sections of the Brâhmanical community.

There is, however, one point in Govindasvâmin's statement which requires further elucidation. He says that the Bahvṛikas, i.e. the Rigvedins in general, formerly studied the Vâsishtha Dharmaśâstra. It might, therefore, be inferred that the work possessed equal authority among the Âśvalâyanîyas, the Śâṅkhâyanîyas, the Mândûkâyanas, and all the other schools of the Rig-veda, and that it belonged to the most ancient heirlooms of its adherents. That is, however, improbable for several reasons. For, first, neither the Âśvalâyanîyas nor the Śâṅkhâyanîyas of the present day study or attach any special importance to the Vâsishtha Dharmaśâstra. Secondly, if the Vâsishtha Dharmaśâstra had ever been the common authority on Dharma in all the different schools of the Rig-veda, it would be necessary to ascribe to it an antiquity which it clearly does not possess. All Sûtras were originally composed for a single school only. Where we find that the same Sûtra is adopted by several Karaṇas, as is the case with the Dharma-sûtra, which both the Âpastambîyas and the Hiraṇyakeśas study, and with the Kâyana-sûtra, which the Bhâradvâgas and the Hiraṇyakeśas have in common, it is evident that the later school did not care to compose a treatise of its own on a certain subject, but preferred to take over the composition of an earlier teacher. If, now, a Sûtra on a certain subject were acknowledged by all the schools of one Veda, it would follow that it must belong to the most ancient books of that Veda, and must have been adopted successively by all its later schools. In such a case the Sûtra must certainly show signs of its great antiquity. But if we look for the latter in the Vâsish*th*a Dharma-sûtra, the trouble will be in vain. Though that work contains a good deal that is archaic, yet, as will be shown presently, its numerous quotations from Vedic writings and older Dharma-sûtras clearly prove that it does not belong to the oldest productions of its class, but takes even among the still existing Institutes of the Sacred Law only a secondary rank. Under these circumstances the correct interpretation of Govindasvâmin's words will be, that according to the Brâhmanical tradition, known to him, some school of *Rig*vedins, the name of which he did not know, or did not care to give, originally possessed the Vâsish*th*a Dharma*s*âstra as its exclusive property, and that the work later, through the action of the special law schools, acquired general authority for all Brâhmans. It is a pity that no authentic information regarding the name of that school of *Rig*vedins has been handed down. But, considering the fact that Vedic schools are frequently named after Vedic *Ri*shis, it seems not improbable that it was called after the Vasish*th*a whose authority the Dharma-sûtra invokes, and that we may assume the former existence of a Vâsish*th*a school, a Sûtra-*k*ara*n*a, of the Rig-veda [1], founded perhaps by a teacher of the Vâsish*th*a gotra. This conjecture, which, it must be confessed, is not supported by any corroborative evidence from the Brâhmanical tradition, will explain why the title-pages of this and of the first part speak of a school of Vâsish*th*a.

The position of the Vâsish*th*a Dharma-sûtra in Vedic literature can be defined, to a certain extent, by an analysis of its numerous quotations from the Saṃhitâs, Brâhmaṇas, and the older Sûtras. By this means it will become evident that the work belongs to a period when the chief schools of the three ancient Vedas had been formed and some of the still existing Dharma-sûtras had been composed. Faint indications will be found which make it probable that the home of the school to which it belonged, lay in the northern half of India, north of the Narmadâ and of the Vindhyas. As regards the quotations from the Śruti, the revealed texts of the Hindus, they are chiefly taken from the Rig-veda and from three recensions of the Yagur-veda. Passages from the Rig-veda-saṃhitâ are quoted IV, 21; XVII, 3–4; and XXVI, 5–7. With respect to the quotations in the latter chapter it must, however, be noted that its genuineness is, as will be shown in the sequel, not above suspicion. A Brâhmaṇa of the Rig-veda seems to be referred to in XVII, 2, 32, 35. But the extracts, given there, agree only in part with the text of the Aitareya, and it is probable that they are taken from some lost composition of the same class. A curious Sûtra, II, 35, shows a great resemblance to the explanations of Vedic passages given by Yâska in the Nirukta[1]. The passage points either to a connexion of the author with the school of the Nairuktas or, at least, to an acquaintance with its principles. Among the schools of the Yagur-veda, that of the Kaṭhas is twice referred to by name, XII, 29; XXX, 5. But Professor Weber, who kindly looked for the quotations in the Berlin MS. of the Kâṭhaka, has not been able to find them. A third passage, I, 37, said to be taken from the Kâturmâsyas, i.e. the portion of a Saṃhitâ which treats of the Kâturmâsya sacrifices, actually occurs in the Kâṭhaka. But, as it is likewise found in the Kâturmâsya-kâṇḍa of the Maitrâyaṇîyas, it must remain uncertain from which of the two recensions of the Black Yagur-veda it has been quoted. The chapter on the duties of women, vers. 6–8, contains a long quotation which, in spite of some small discrepancies, seems to have been taken from the Taittirîya-saṃhitâ of the Black Yagur-veda. Passages of the Taittirîya Âraṇyaka are quoted or referred to X, 35 and XXIII, 23. The White Yagur-veda is mentioned several times as the Vâgasaneyi-śâkhâ or the Vâgasaneyaka. The former expression occurs III, 19 and XXIII, 13. The quotations, marked as taken from the Vâgasaneyaka, XII, 31, XIV, 46 are found in the Śatapatha-brâhmaṇa, and another passage of the same work is quoted I, 45, without a specification of the source. A very clear proof that the author of the Dharma-sûtra knew the Vâgasaneyi-saṃhitâ is furnished by the Mantra, given II, 34. The text, quoted there, occurs in three different Śâkhâs, that of the Vâgasaneyins, that of the Taittirîyas and the Atharva-veda, and in each shows a few variae lectiones. Its wording in the Vâgasaneyi-saṃhitâ literally agrees with the version, given in the Sûtra. The Sâma-veda is referred to III, 19, and particular Sâmans are mentioned in the borrowed chapter XXII, 9. A passage from the Nidâna, probably a work on Stomas and metres, which belonged to the Bhâllavins, an ancient school of Sâmavedins, occurs I, 14–16. An Upanishad, connected with the Atharva-veda, the Atharvaśiras, is mentioned in the borrowed chapter XXII, 9, and the existence of the Atharva-veda is pre-supposed, also, by 'the vows called Śiras,' which are alluded to in the suspicious chapter XXVI, 11, and are said to be peculiar to the Atharvavedins[1]. The chapters, which are undoubtedly genuine, contain no allusion to the fourth Veda.

[1] A school of Vâsish*th*as, belonging to the Sâma-veda, certainly existed in ancient times. I have formerly put forward a conjecture that the Vâsish*th*a Dharmasâstra might belong to that school (Digest of Hindu Law Cases, p. xxii, first edition). But Govindasvâmin's explicit statement makes it evident that it has to be abandoned.

As regards the older works on Dharma, the author of the Institutes of Vaśishṭha certainly knew and used a treatise, attributed to Yama; the Dharma-sûtras of Manu, Hârîta and Gautama, and, perhaps, that of Baudhâyana. With respect to two verses, which, as the Sûtra says, were proclaimed by Pragâpati, XIV, 24, 30, it is somewhat doubtful, if it is meant that they have been taken from a work, attributed to Pragâpati, or that they are merely utterances, supposed to have been made by that deity for the benefit of mankind. The latter view seems, however, the more likely one, as it is customary in the Smṛitis to ascribe the revelation of social institutions, ceremonies, and penances to Pragâpati, who, in the older works, occupies much the same position as Brahmâ, the creator, in the later religious systems. It is not impossible that some of the references to Yama, e. g. XI, 20, have to be explained in the same manner. But other passages, attributed to Yama, e. g. XVIII, 13–16, seem to have been taken from a work which was considered the production of the Dharmarâga. Of course, none of the Yamasmṛitis, which exist in the present day, can be meant. The quotations from Manu are numerous[1]. They have all been taken from a book attributed to a Manu, and possess a very high interest for the history of the present metrical Manusmṛiti. For the prose passage from the Mânava, given IV, 5, furnishes the proof that the author of the Vâsishṭha Dharmaśâstra quotes from a Dharma-sûtra attributed to a Manu, while other quotations show that the Mânava Dharma-sûtra contained, also, verses, some of which, e. g. XIX, 37, were Trishṭubhs, and that a large proportion of these verses has been embodied in Bhṛigu's version of the Manusmṛiti. Fifteen years ago[2] I first called attention to Vasishṭha's prose quotation from the Mânava, and pointed out that, if the MSS. of the Vâsishṭha Dharmaśâstra were to be trusted, a small piece of the lost Mânava Dharma-sûtra, on which the present Manusmṛiti is based, had been found. The incorrectness and the defective state of the materials which I then had at my disposal did not allow me to go further. Since that time several, comparatively speaking, good MSS. of the Institutes of Vasishṭha and many inferior ones have been found, and all, at least all those which I have examined, give the quotation in prose exactly in the same form. The fact that Vasishṭha gives, in IV, 5, a prose quotation from Manu may, therefore, be considered as certain[3]. Moreover several of the best MSS.

[1] They occur Vâsishṭha Dharmaśâstra I, 17; III, 2; IV, 5–8; XI, 23; XII, 16; XIII, 16; XIX, 37; XX, 18; XXIII, 43; XXVI, 8.

[2] Digest of Hindu Law Cases, p. xxxi, note, first edition.

[3] Such, I suppose, will be the opinion of all European scholars. Those Hindus show, by adding the particle 'iti' at the end of Sûtra 8, that the quotation from the Mânava is not finished with Sûtra 5, but includes the two verses given in Sûtras 6 and 7 and the second prose passage in Sûtra 8. Among the verses the first is found entire in the metrical Manusmṛiti, and the second has likewise a representative in that work, though its concluding portion has been altered in such a manner that the permission to slaughter animals at sacrifices has been converted into an absolute prohibition to take animal life. Sûtra 8, which again is in prose, has no counterpart in the metrical Manusmṛiti, as might be expected from its allowing 'a full-grown ox' or 'a full-grown he-goat' to be killed in honour of a distinguished Brâhmaṇa or Kshatriya guest. A closely corresponding passage is found in the Śatapatha-brâhmaṇa, and a verse expressing the same opinion in the Yâgñavalkya Smṛiti, the versification of a Dharma-sûtra of the White Yagur-veda. As the last part of the quotation resembles the text of the Brâhmaṇa and its language is very archaic, it is quite possible that, though belonging to the passage from the Mânava-sûtra, it contains a Vedic text, taken from some hitherto unknown Brâhmaṇa which Manu adduced in support of his opinion. On this supposition the arrangement of the whole quotation would be as follows. Sûtra 5 would give the original rule of the author of the Mânava in an aphoristic form; Sûtras 6–7 would repeat the same opinion in verse, the latter being probably Ślokas current among the Brâhmanical community; and Sûtra 8 would give the Vedic authority for the preceding sentences. This arrangement would be in strict conformity with the plan usually followed by the authors of Dharma-sûtras. But whether Sûtra 8 contains a second original aphorism of the Mânava Dharma-sûtra or a Vedic passage, it seems indisputable that the author of the Vâsishṭha Dharma-sûtra knew a treatise attributed to a teacher called Manu, which, like all other Dharma-sûtras, was partly written in aphoristic prose and partly in verse. The passage furnishes, therefore, the proof for Professor Max Müller's conjecture that our metrical Manusmṛiti, like all the older works of the same class, is based on the Dharma-sûtra of a Vedic Sûtra-karaṇa. In connexion with this subject it may be mentioned that the Institutes of Vasishṭha contain, besides the above-mentioned passages, no less than thirty-nine verses[1], which are not marked as quotations, but occur in Bhṛigu's metrical Manusaṃhitâ. Some of them present more or less important variae lectiones. Moreover, there are four verses which, though Vasishṭha attributes them to Hârîta and Yama[2], are included in our Manusmṛiti and treated as utterances of the father of mankind. The bearing of both these facts on the history of the Manusmṛiti is obvious. But the frequency of the references to or quotations from Manu which Vasishṭha makes, teaches another important lesson. Like the fact that Manu is the only individual author to whom Gautama refers[3], it shows that in ancient times Manu's name had as great a charm for the Brâhman teachers as it has for those of the present day, and that the old Mânava Dharma-sûtra was one of the leading works on the subject, or, perhaps, even held that dominant position which the metrical Manusmṛiti actually occupied in the Middle Ages and theoretically occupies in our days. It is interesting to observe that precisely the same inference can be drawn from the early Sanskrit inscriptions. If these speak of individual authors of Smṛitis, they invariably place Manu's name first[4].

Vasishṭha gives only one quotation from Hârîta, II, 6. Hârîta was one of the ancient Sûtrakâras of the Black Yagur-veda, who is known also to Baudhâyana. From a passage which Kṛishṇapaṇḍita quotes in elucidation of Vasish*th*a XXIV, 6, I conclude that Hârîta was a Maitrâya*n*îya[1]. The relation of the Vâsish*th*a Dharma-sûtra to Gautama and Baudhâyana has already been discussed in the introduction to the translation of the former work[2]. To the remarks on its connexion with Baudhâyana it must be added that the third Pra*s*na of the Baudhâyana Dharma-sûtra, from which Vasish*th*a's twenty-second chapter seems to have been borrowed, perhaps does not belong to the original work, but is a later, though presumably a very ancient, addition to the composition of the founder of the Baudhâyana school. The reasons for this opinion will be given below. If Baudhâyana's third Pra*s*na is not genuine, but has been added by a later teacher of that school, the interval between Baudhâyana and the author of the Vâsish*th*a Dharma-*s*âstra must be a very considerable one. I have, however, to point out that the inference regarding the priority of Baudhâyana to Vasish*th*a is permissible only on the supposition that Vasish*th*a's twenty-second chapter is not a later addition to the latter work, and that, though it is found in all our MSS., this fact is not sufficient to silence all doubts which might be raised with respect to its genuineness; for we shall see presently that other chapters in the section on penances have been tampered with by a later hand. It will, therefore, be advisable not to insist too strongly on the certainty of the conclusion that Vasish*th*a knew and used Baudhâyana's work.

In the introduction to his translation of the Vish*n*usm*r*iti[3], Professor Jolly has pointed out two passages of Vasish*th*a which, as he thinks, have been borrowed from Vish*n*u, and prove the posteriority of the Vâsish*th*a Dharma*s*âstra, if not to the Vish*n*usm*r*iti, at least to its original, the Kâ*th*aka Dharma-sûtra. He contends that the passage Vasish*th*a XXVIII, 10–15 is a versification of the Sûtras of Vish*n*u LVI, which, besides being clumsy, shows a number of corruptions and grammatical mistakes, and that Vasishtha XXVIII, 18–22 has been borrowed from Vishnu LXXXVII. Professor Jolly's assertion regarding the second passage involves, however, a little mistake. For the first two Slokas, Vasishtha XXVIII, 18–19, describe not the gift of the skin of a black antelope, which is mentioned in the first six Sûtras of Vishnu LXXXVII, but the rite of feeding Brâhmans with honey and sesamum grains, which occurs Vishnu XC, 10. The three verses, Vasishtha XXVIII, 20–22, on the other hand, really are the same as those given by Vishnu LXXXVII, 8–10. It is, however, expressly stated in the Vishnusmriti that they contain a quotation, and are not the original composition of the author of the Dharma-sûtra. Hence no inference can be drawn from the recurrence of the same stanzas in the Vâsishtha Dharma-sûtra. As regards the other passage, Vasishtha XXVIII, 10–15, Professor Jolly is quite right in saying that it is a clumsy versification of Vishnu's Sûtras, and it is not at all improbable that Vasishtha's verses may have been immediately derived from the Kâthaka. The further inference as to the priority of the ancient Kâthaka-sûtra to Vasishtha, which Professor Jolly draws from the comparison of the two passages, would also be unimpeachable, if the genuineness of Vasishtha's twenty-eighth chapter were certain. But that is unfortunately not the case. Not only that chapter, but the preceding ones, XXV–XXVII, in fact the whole section on secret penances, are, in my opinion, not only suspicious, but certainly betray the hand of a later restorer and corrector. Everybody who carefully reads the Sanskrit text of the Dharma-sûtra will be struck by the change of the style and the difference in the language which the four chapters on secret penances show, as compared with the preceding and following sections. Throughout the whole of the first twenty-four chapters and in the last two chapters we find a mixture of prose and verse. With one exception in the sixth chapter, where thirty-one verses form the beginning of the section on the rule of conduct, the author follows always one and the same plan in arranging his materials. His own rules are given first in the form of aphorisms, and after these follow the authorities for his doctrines, which consist either of Vedic passages or of verses, the latter being partly quotations taken from individual authors or works, partly specimens of the versified maxims current among the Brâhmans, and sometimes memorial verses composed by the author himself. But chapters XXV–XXVIII contain not a single Sûtra. They are made up entirely of Anushṭubh Slokas, and the phrases[1] 'I will now declare,' 'Listen to my words,' which are so characteristic of the style of the later metrical Smṛitis and of the Purâṇas, occur more frequently than is absolutely necessary. Again, in the first twenty-four and the last two chapters the language is archaic Sanskrit, interspersed here and there with Vedic anomalous forms. But in the four chapters on secret penances we have the common Sanskrit of the metrical Smṛitis and Purâṇas, with its incorrect forms, adopted in order to fit inconvenient words into the metre. Nor is this all. The contents of a portion of this suspicious section are merely useless repetitions of matters dealt with already in the preceding chapters, while some verses contain fragmentary rules on a subject which is treated more fully further on. Thus the description of the Kṛikkhra and Kândrâyaṇa penances, which has been given XXI, 20 and XXIV, 45, is repeated XXVII, 16, 21. Further, the enumeration of the purificatory texts XXVIII, 10–15 is merely an enlargement of XXII, 9. Finally, the verses XXVIII, 16–22 contain detached rules on gifts, and in the next chapter, XXIX, the subject is begun once more and treated at considerable length. Though it would be unwise to assume that all genuine productions of the old Sûtrakâras must, throughout, show regularity and consistency, the differences between the four chapters and the remainder of the work, just pointed out, are, it seems to me, sufficient to warrant the conclusion that they do not belong to the author of the Institutes. Under these circumstances it might be assumed that the whole section is simply an interpolation. But that would be going too far. For, as other Dharma-sûtras show, one or even several chapters on secret penances belonged to such works.

[1] See XXV, 1; XXVII, 10; XXVIII, 10, 20.

Moreover, in the section on women, Vasishtha V, 3–4, the author makes a cross-reference to the rahasyas, the section on secret penances, and quotes by anticipation half a Sloka which is actually found in chapter XXVIII. The inference to be drawn from these facts is, that the section on secret penances is not simply a later addition intended to supply an omission of the first writer, but that, for some reason or other, it has been remodelled. The answer to the question why this was done is suggested, it seems to me, partly by the state of the MSS. of the Vâsishtha Dharmasâstra, and partly by the facts connected with the treatment of ancient works by the Pandits, which my examination of the libraries of Northern India has brought to light[1]. MSS. of the Vâsishtha Dharmasâstra are very rare, and among those found only three are complete. Some stop with chapter X, others with chapter XXI, and a few in the middle of the thirtieth Adhyâya. Moreover, most of them are very corrupt, and even the best exhibit some Sûtras which are hopeless. These circumstances show clearly that after the extinction of the Vedic school, with which the work originated, the Sûtra was for some time neglected, and existed in a few copies only, perhaps even in a single MS. The materials on which the ancient Hindus wrote, the birch bark and the palm leaves, are so frail that especially the first and last leaves of a Pothî are easily lost or badly damaged. Instances of this kind are common enough in the Gaina and Kasmîr libraries, where the beginning and still more frequently the end of many works have been irretrievably lost. The fate of the Vâsishtha Dharmasâstra, it would seem, has been similar. The facts related above make it probable that the MS. or MSS. which came into the hands of the Pandits of the special law schools, who revived the study of the work, was defective. Pieces of the last leaves which remained, probably showed the extent of the damage done, and the Pandits set to work at the restoration of the lost portions, just as the Kasmîrian Sâhebrâm Pandit restored the Nîlamata-purâna for Mahârâga Ranavîrasimha. They, of course, used the verses which they still found on the fragments, and cleverly supplied the remainder from their knowledge of Manu and other Smritis, of the Mahâbhârata and the Purâṇas. This theory, I think, explains all the difficulties which the present state of the section on secret penances raises. Perhaps it may be used also to account for some incongruities observable in chapter XXX. The last two verses, XXX, 9–10, are common-places which are frequently quoted in the Mahâbhârata, the Harivaṃśa, the Pañkatantra, and modern anthologies. With their baldness of expression and sentiment they present a strong contrast to the preceding solemn passages from the Veda, and look very much like an unlucky attempt at filling up a break at the end of the MS. In connexion with this subject it ought, however, to be mentioned that this restoration of the last part of the Vâsishṭha Dharmaśâstra must have happened in early times, at least more than a thousand years ago. For the oldest commentators and compilers of digests on law, such as Vigñâneśvara [1], who lived at the end of the eleventh century A. D., quote passages from the section on secret penances as the genuine utterances of Vasishṭha. These details will suffice to show why I differ from Professor Jolly with respect to his conclusion from the agreement of the verses of Vasishṭha XXVIII, 10–15 with the Sûtras of Vishṇu LVI.

With the exception of the quotations, the Vâsishṭha Dharmaśâstra contains no data which could be used either to define its relative position in Sanskrit literature or to connect it with the historical period of India. The occurrence of the word Romaka, XVIII, 4, in some MSS., as the name of a degraded caste of mixed origin, proves nothing, as other MSS. read Râmaka, and tribes called Râma and Râmaṭha are mentioned in the Purâṇas. It would be wrong to assert on such evidence that the Sûtra belonged to the time when the Romans, or rather the Byzantines (Rômaioi), had political relations with India. Nor will it be advisable to adduce the fact that Vasishṭha

[1] Thus Vasishṭha XXVIII, 7 is quoted in the Mitâksharâ on Yâgñavalkya III, 298; XXVIII, 10–15 on Yâgñavalkya III, 309; and XXVIII, 18–19, 22 on Yâgñavalkya III, 310.

XVI, 10, 14, 15 mentions written documents as a means of legal proof, in order to establish the 'comparatively late' date of the Sûtra. For though the other Dharma-sûtras do not give any hint that the art of writing was known or in common use in their times, still the state of society which they describe is so advanced that people could not have got on without writing, and the proofs for the antiquity of the Indian alphabets are now much stronger than they were even a short time ago. The silence of Âpastamba and the other Sûtrakâras regarding written documents is probably due to their strict adherence to a general principle underlying the composition of the Dharma-sûtras. Those points only fall primarily within the scope of the Dharma-sûtras which have some immediate, close connexion with the Dharma, the acquisition of spiritual merit. Hence it sufficed for them to give some general maxims for the fulfilment of the guṇadharma of kings, the impartial administration of justice, and to give fuller rules regarding the half-religious ceremony of the swearing in and the examination of witnesses. Judicial technicalities, like the determination of the legal value of written documents, had less importance in their eyes, and were left either to the deśâkâra, the custom of the country, or to the Nîti and Artha-śâstras, the Institutes of Polity and of the Arts of common life. It would, also, be easy to rebut attempts at assigning the Vâsishṭha Dharma-sûtra to what is usually 'a comparatively late period' by other pieces of so-called internal evidence tending to show that it is an ancient work. Some of the doctrines of the Sûtra undoubtedly belong to an ancient order of ideas. This is particularly observable in the rules regarding the subsidiary sons, which place the offspring even of illicit unions in the class of heirs and members of the family, while adopted sons are relegated to the division of members of the family excluded from inheritance. The same remark applies to the exclusion of all females, with the exception of putrikâs or appointed daughters, from the succession to the property of males, to the permission to re-marry infant widows, and to the law of the Niyoga or the appointment of adult widows, which Vasish*th*a allows without hesitation, and even extends to the wives of emigrants. But as most of these opinions occur also in some of the decidedly later metrical Sm*ri*tis, and disputes on these subjects seem to have existed among the various Brâhmanical schools down to a late period, it would be hazardous to use them as arguments for the antiquity of the Sûtra.

The following points bear on the question where the original home of the Vedic school, which produced the Dharma-sûtra, was situated. First, the author declares India north of the Vindhyas, and especially those portions now included in the North-western Provinces, to be the country where holy men and pure customs are to be found, I, 8–16. Secondly, he shows a predilection for those redactions of the Veda and those Sûtras which belong to the northern half of India, viz. for the Kâ*th*aka, the Vâ*g*asaneyi-sâkhâ, and the Sûtras of Manu and Hârîta. Faint as these indications are, I think, they permit us to conclude that the Sûtra belongs to a *K*ara*n*a settled in the north.

As regards the materials on which the subjoined translation is based, I have chiefly relied on the Benares edition of the text, with the commentary of K*ri*shn*a*pa*nd*ita Dharmâdhikârî, and on a rough edition with the varietas lectionum from the two MSS. of the Bombay Government Collection of 1874–75[1], B. no. 29 and Bh. no. 30, a MS. of the Elphinstone College Collection of 1867–68, E. no. 23 of Class VI, and an imperfect apograph F. in my own collection, which was made in 1864 at Bombay. The rough edition was prepared under my superintendence by Vâmanâ*k*ârya *Gh*alkîkar, now teacher of Sanskrit in the Dekhan College, Pu*n*a. When I wrote the translation, the Bombay Government MSS. were not accessible to me. I could only use my own MS. and, thanks to the kindness of Dr. Rost, Colebrooke's MS., I. O. no. 913, from which the now worthless Calcutta editions have been derived either immediately or mediately. These materials belong to two groups. The Bombay MS. B., which comes from Benares, closely agrees with K*ri*shn*a*pa*nd*ita's text; and E., though purchased at Puṇa, does not differ much from the two. Bh., which comes from Bhuj in Kaṅkh, and my own MS. F. form a second group, towards which Colebrooke's MS., I. O. no. 913, also leans. Ultimately both groups are derived from one codex archetypus.

The first group of MSS. gives a fuller and in general a correcter text than the second. But it seems to me that the text of B., and still more Kṛishṇapaṇḍita's, has in many places been conjecturally restored, and that the real difficulties have been rather veiled than solved. I have, therefore, frequently preferred the readings offered by the second group, or based on them my conjectural emendations, which have all been given in the notes. To give a translation without having recourse to conjectural emendations was impossible, as a European philologist is unable to avail himself of those wonderful tricks of interpretation which permit an Indian Paṇḍit to extract some kind of meaning from the most desperate passages. In a few cases, where even the best MSS. contain nothing but a conglomerate of meaningless syllables or unconnected words, I have thought it advisable to refrain from all attempts at a restoration of the text, and at a translation. A critical edition of the Vâsishṭha Dharmaśâstra is very desirable, and I trust that Dr. A. Führer, of St. Xavier's College, Bombay, will soon supply this want. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita's commentary, for which he had not the aid of older vṛittis, shows considerable learning, and has been of great value to me. I have followed him mostly in the division of the Sûtras, and have frequently given his opinions in the notes, both in cases where I agree with him and in those where I differ from him, but think his opinion worthy of consideration.

In conclusion, I have to thank Professors R. von Roth, Weber, and Jolly, as well as Dr. L. von Schröder, for the verification of a number of Vedic quotations, which they kindly undertook for me, as I was unable to use my own books of reference during the translation of the work.

INTRODUCTION

TO

BAUDHÂYANA.

THE case of the Baudhâyana Dharma-sûtra is in many respects analogous to that of the Institutes of the Sacred Law, current in the schools of Âpastamba and Hiraṇyakeśin. Like the latter, it is the work of a teacher of the Black Yagur-veda, who composed manuals on all the various subdivisions of the Kalpa, and founded a Sûtra-karaṇa, which is said to exist to the present day[1]. The Brâhmanical tradition, too, acknowledges these facts, and, instead of surrounding Baudhâyana's work with a halo of myths, simply states that it was originally studied by and authoritative for the followers of the Taittirîya-veda alone, and later only became one of the sources of the Sacred Law for all Brâhmans[2]. Moreover, the position of Baudhâyana among the teachers of the Yagur-veda is well defined, and his home, or at least the home of his school, is known. But here the resemblance stops. For while the Sûtras of Âpastamba and Hiraṇyakeśin have been preserved in carefully and methodically arranged collections, where a certain place is assigned to each section of the Kalpa, no complete set of the Sûtras of Baudhâyana's school has, as yet, been found, and the original position of the detached portions which are obtainable is not quite certain. Again, while the works of Âpastamba and Hiraṇyakeśin seem to have been kept free from extensive interpolations, several parts of [1] I must here state that during my residence in India I have never met with a follower of Baudhâyana's school, and cannot personally vouch for its existence. But many Paṇḍits have assured me that many Baudhâyanîyas are to be found among the Telingana and Karṇâṭaka Brâhmans.

[2] See Govinda's statement, quoted above, p. xiii.

Baudhâyana's Sûtras have clearly received considerable additions from later hands.

According to the researches of Dr. A. Burnell[1], whose long residence in Southern India and intimate acquaintance with its Brâhmanical libraries have made him the first authority on the literature of the schools of the Taittirîya-veda, the Sûtras of Baudhâyana consist of six sections, viz. 1. the Srauta-sûtras, probably in nineteen Prasnas; 2. The Karmânta-sûtra in twenty Adhyâyas; 3. The Dvaidha-sûtra in four Prasnas; 4. The Grihya-sûtra in four Prasnas; 5. The Dharma-sûtra in four Prasnas; 6. The Sulva-sûtra in three Adhyâyas. The results of the search for Sanskrit MSS. in other parts of India, and especially in Western India, do not differ materially from those obtained by Dr. Burnell. The Grihya-sûtra, which in Western India occasionally bears the title Smârta-sûtra[2], contains, however, nine instead of four Prasnas. The MSS. of the Baudhâyana-sûtras, which contain the text alone, are all incomplete, mostly very corrupt and in bad order, and rarely give more than a small number of Prasnas on detached subjects. The copies in which the text is accompanied by a commentary are in a better condition. Thus the Kalpavivarana of Bhavasvâmin[3] extends over the whole of the Srauta-sûtra, and over the Karmânta and the Dvaidha-sûtras. It shows the proper sequence of the Prasnas on Srauta sacrifices, and that probably the Karmânta and the Dvaidha immediately followed the Srauta-sûtra. But there is no hint in the MSS. or in the commentaries how the Grihya, Dharma, and Sulva-sûtras were originally placed. With respect to these sections, it is only possible to judge from the analogy of the other extant sets of Kalpa-sûtras and from internal evidence. On these grounds it may be shown that the order, adopted by Dr. Burnell, is probably the correct one. For the beginning of the Gṛihya-sûtra[1] shows by its wording that it was not a separate treatise, but was immediately connected with some preceding Praśna. The analogy of the collections of the Âpastambîyas, the Hiraṇyakeśas, the Kaṭhas, and other schools permits us to infer that it stood after the Śrauta-sûtra. It is further clear that, in its turn, it was succeeded by the Dharma-sûtra. For two passages of the latter work, I, 2, 3, 15, and II, 8, 15, 9, clearly contain references to the Gṛihya-sûtra. In the former, the author gives the rule regarding the length of the staff to be carried by a student, as well as the general principle that the staff must be cut from a tree fit for sacrificial purposes. With respect to the latter clause he adds that 'the details have been given above.' As the Dharma-sûtra contains nothing more on this subject, it follows that the expression 'above' must refer to Gṛihya-sûtra II, 7, where the usual detailed rules regarding the employment of particular woods for the several varṇas are given. In the second passage Baudhâyana says that the rules for the performance of funeral sacrifices have been fully explained in the section on the Aṣṭakâhoma, which occurs Gṛihya-sûtra II, 17–18. It is, therefore, perfectly certain that Baudhâyana, just like Âpastamba, placed the Praśnas on the Sacred Law after those on the domestic ceremonies, and that the Dharma-sûtra was not a separate work. Under these circumstances it becomes highly probable that the Śulva-sûtra formed, as is the case in other sets of Kalpa-sûtras, the conclusion of the whole. Thus the only treatise, whose position remains doubtful, is the Pravarakhaṇḍa, the list of the Brâhmanical gotras and of their deified ancestors[2]. Possibly it may have stood at the end of the Śrauta-sûtra.

[1] See Burnell, Catalogue of a Collection of Sanskrit MS., pp. 24–26, 28, 34–35, and Tanjore Catalogue, pp. 18a–20b, and especially his remarks at pp. 18b and 20a.

[2] This title is found in the best copy known to me, Elphinstone College Collection of 1867–68, Class B. I, no. 5, which has been prepared from the MS. of Mr. Limaye at Ashṭe. The other copies of the work, found in Western India, e. g. no. 4 of the same collection and my own copy, are in a bad state, as they are derived from a MS. the leaves of which were out of order.

[1] According to the Elph. Coll. MS., Cl. I, B. 5, and my copy, it runs thus: यथो एतद्धुतः प्रहुत आहुतः शूलगवो बलिहरणं प्रत्यवरोहणमष्टकाहोम इति सप्त पाकयज्ञसँस्था इति ॥१॥ ता अनुव्याख्यास्यामः ॥२॥

[2] Burnell, Catalogue of a Collection of Sanskrit MSS., no. CXVIII.

The destruction of the continuity of Baudhâyana's Kalpa-sûtra has had the consequence which is commonly observable in other dismembered works, that several of its detached portions have received considerable additions from later and, as it would seem, from several hands. There can be no doubt that a small portion only of the nine Prasnas, found in the Western copies of the Grihya-sûtra, really belongs to Baudhâyana. For the description of the Grihya rites, which strictly follows the general plan laid down in the first Sûtra, is completed in two or three Prasnas[1]. Next follows a Prasna on the anukritis, rites resembling those comprised in the subdivisions treated before, and then a Prasna on prâyaskittas, or expiations of mistakes committed during, and of the neglect of, the performance of the Grihya-karmâni. The remaining Prasnas are filled with a medley of paribhâshâs, general rules, and of full descriptions of ceremonies, some of which have been given before, while others are added afresh. Many of the newly-added rites do not belong to the ancient Brâhmanical worship, but to the Paurânic religions, the service of Siva, Skanda, Nârâyana, and other deities, and some show an admixture of Tântric elements. In some of the later Prasnas, especially IV and V, the language closely resembles that of the first three, and shows the same stereotyped phrases and the same Vedic anomalous forms. But in other sections, particularly VI–IX, we find, instead of Sûtras, the common Anushtubh Sloka throughout, and expressions peculiar to the metrical Smritis and the Purânas. At the end of most Adhyâyas we read the phrase, ity âha Baudhâyanah, or bhagavân Baudhâyanah, 'thus speaks Baudhâyana, or the divine Baudhâyana.' Finally, while the first three Prasnas are divided into Kandikâs or Khandas, the following ones consist of Adhyâyas or chapters. These differences, as well as the fact that the most important Grihya rites, arranged according to a special plan, are done with in the first three Praśnas, necessarily lead to the conclusion that the whole remainder does not belong to Baudhâyana, but consists of so-called Pariśishṭas, which were composed by the adherents of his school. Further, the fact that the last six Praśnas do not show everywhere the same style and language, makes it probable that the additions were made at different times and by different persons.

[1] Elphinstone College Collection, no. 5, according to which all quotations have been made, gives three Prasnas, my own MS. two Prasnas. The number of the Khandas is, however, the same.

The Dharma-sûtra seems to have undergone exactly the same fate as the Gṛihya-sûtra. It will be obvious even to the readers of the translation that its fourth Praśna is a later addition. It consists of two parts. The first, which ends with the fourth Adhyâya, treats of penances, both public and secret ones. The second, Adhyâyas 5–8, describes the means of obtaining siddhi, the fulfilment of one's desires, and recommends for this purpose the offering of the Gaṇahomas after a previous sanctification of the worshipper by means of a course of austerities. The first part is perfectly superfluous, as the subject of penances has already been discussed in the first sections of the second Praśna, and again in chapters 4–10 of the third Praśna. Its rules sometimes contradict those given before, and in other cases, e.g. IV, 2, 10–12, are mere repetitions of previous statements. The introduction of the means of gaining siddhi, on the other hand, is without a parallel in other Dharma-sûtras, and the subject is entirely foreign to the scope of such works. Its treatment, too, shows that chapters 5–8 do not belong to the author of the bulk of the Dharma-sûtra. For the description of the preparatory 'restraints' or austerities contains somewhat more detailed rules for a number of penances, e.g. the Kṛikkhras and the Kândrâyaṇa, which have already been described in the preceding Praśnas. Moreover, the style and the language of the whole fourth Praśna are very different from those of the three preceding ones, and the differences observable are exactly the same as those between the first five and the last four Praśnas of the Gṛihya-sûtra. The epic Śloka nearly throughout replaces the aphoristic prose, and the common slipshod Sanskrit of the Purâṇas appears instead of the archaic forms. Finally, the fourth Praśna is divided into Adhyâyas, not into the Kaṇḍikâs or Khaṇḍas and Adhyâyas which are found in the first two Praśnas.

This latter peculiarity is also observable in the third Praśna, and raises a suspicion against the genuineness of that part also. For, though the third Praśna in style and language resembles the first two, it is hard to believe that the author should, for no apparent reason, suddenly have changed the manner of dividing his work towards its end. This suspicion is further strengthened by two other circumstances. First, Praśnas I–II really exhaust the discussion of the whole Dharma, and the third offers supplementary information only on some points which have been touched upon previously. Secondly, several Adhyâyas of Praśna III seem to have been borrowed from other works, or to be abstracts from them. Thus the tenth chapter has certainly been taken from the Gautamîya Dharmaśâstra, the sixth bears a very close and suspicious resemblance to Vishṇu XLVIII[1], and the third looks very much like a short summary of the doctrine of Vikhanas, whose lost Sûtra contained the original rule of the order of the Vaikhânasas or hermits, living in the forest. These circumstances justify, it seems to me, the assumption that Baudhâyana's original Dharma-sûtra consisted, like Âpastamba's, of two Praśnas only, and that it received, through followers of his school, two separate additions, first in very ancient times Praśna III, where the style of the master is strictly followed, and later Praśna IV, where the language and phraseology of the metrical Smṛitis are adopted. It ought to be noted that Govindasvâmin, too, does not take the whole of the four Praśnas for Baudhâyana's composition. With respect to several passages[2] where Baudhâyana's name is introduced in order to give weight to the rules, he says that the Sûtras may belong to 'a pupil.' I do not think that the criterion which he uses can be relied on in every case, because oriental authors without doubt occasionally speak of themselves as of third persons. But the fact that the commentator, though an orthodox Hindu, had misgivings as to the genuineness of portions of the work, is not without significance. It seems also that even the first two Praśnas are not quite free from interpolations. Thus the Kaṇḍikâs on the Tarpaṇa[1] are certainly much enlarged by additions, the verse at I, 5, 11, 36, a repetition of I, 5, 9, 5, and some prose quotations which are introduced by the words athâpy udâharanti, 'now they quote also,' standing usually before verses only, are at least suspicious. That the genuineness of many single passages should be doubtful, is no more than might be expected, not only on account of the separation of the Dharma-sûtra from the other parts of the Kalpa, but also because the work, as we shall see further on, remained for a long time without the protection of a commentary. The practical conclusion to be drawn from this state of things is that the greatest caution must be observed in using the Baudhâyana Dharma-sûtra for historical purposes, and that it will be advisable to draw no inferences regarding Baudhâyana's relation to other teachers and schools from the last two Praśnas, and not to trust too much to historical inferences drawn from single passages of the first two.

[1] See also Jolly, Sacred Books of the East, vol. vii, p. xix.

[2] E. g. Dharma-sûtra III, 5, 7.

The position which Baudhâyana occupies among the teachers of the Taittirîya-veda has already been discussed in the Introduction to Âpastamba. It has been shown that according to the Brâhmanical tradition preserved by Mahâdeva, the commentator of the Hiraṇyakeśi-sûtras, he composed the first Sûtra for the followers of his Śâkhâ. Internal and external evidence has also been adduced, proving that he certainly was more ancient than Âpastamba and Hiraṇyakeśin. It is now possible to bring forward some further facts bearing on these points. First, in the section on the Tarpaṇa, the libations of water offered to various deities, *Ṛ*shis, and the manes, II, 5, 9, 14, Kâṇva Baudhâyana receives his share immediately after the *Ṛ*shis of the Veda and before Âpastamba, the Sûtrakâra, and [1] Baudhâyana Dharma-sûtra II, 5, 8–9.

Satyâshâḍha Hiraṇyakeśin. The same order is observed in the distribution of the offerings at the Sarpabali, described in the Gṛihya-sûtra[1], where the following teachers of the Yagurveda are specially named, viz. Vaiśampâyana, Phuliṅgu, Tittiri, Ukha, Aukhya, Âtreya the author of the Pada-text, Kauṇḍinya the author of the commentary, Kâṇva Baudhâyana the author of the Pravaḳana, Âpastamba the author of the Sûtra, and Satyâshâḍha Hiraṇyakeśin. Neither of these two passages belongs to Baudhâyana. They are both clearly interpolations. But they show that Mahâdeva's statement, which makes Baudhâyana the first expounder of the Kalpa among the Taittirîyavedins, agrees with the tradition of the Baudhâyanîyas themselves. For not only the place allotted to Baudhâyana's name, but still more the title Pravaḳanakâra which he receives, show that the followers of his school placed him before and above all other teachers of the ritual. The term pravaḳana, which literally means 'proclaiming or recitation,' has frequently the technical sense of 'oral instruction,' and is applied both to the traditional lore contained in the Brâhmaṇas, and to the more systematic teaching of the Aṅgas[2]. If, therefore, a teacher is called the author of the Pravaḳana of a Śâkhâ, that can only mean that he is something more than a common Sûtrakâra, and is considered to be the originator of the whole system of instruction among its followers. The epithet Kâṇva, which Baudhâyana receives in both the passages quoted above, indicates that he belonged to the Vedic Gotra of the Kaṇvas. It deserves to be noted that Govindasvâmin, too, on I, 3, 5, 13, explains the name Baudhâyana by Kâṇvâyana[3].

[3] The discovery that Baudhâyana bore also the name Kâṇva makes it possible

The style of Baudhâyana's works furnishes, as Dr. Burnell has pointed out[1], another argument for their high antiquity. Compared with the Sûtras of Âpastamba and Hiraṇyakeśin they are much simpler in their arrangement, and the complete absence of that anxiety to save 'half a vowel' which characterises the fully developed Sûtra-style is very remarkable. The last point has been noticed by Govindasvâmin also. In commenting on I, 2, 3, 17–18, where Baudhâyana first permits students to beg food of men of all castes, and afterwards explains that he means Âryans who follow their lawful occupations, he says[2], '(If anybody should ask), "Why give two Sûtras, while one Sûtra, ('A student shall ask) Âryans who follow their lawful occupations,' would have sufficed?" (his objection will be) correct. For this teacher is not particularly anxious to make his book short.' In other cases we find a certain awkwardness in the distribution of the subject matter, which probably finds its explanation through the fact that Baudhâyana first attempted to bring the teaching of the Taittirîyas on the Dharma into a systematic form. Thus the rules on the law of inheritance are given without any apparent necessity and against the custom of the other Sûtrakâras in two different chapters, I, 5, 11, 9–16 and II, 2, 3, 1–44. The section on purification, too, is divided into two separate portions, I, 4, 6–10 and I, 6, 13–15, and the second, which treats of the purification of the vessels at sacrifices, properly ought to have been placed into the Śrauta-sûtra, not into the Dharma-sûtra. Again, the discussion of several topics is repeatedly interrupted by the introduction of rules belonging to different subjects, and Govindasvâmin's ingenuity is often taxed to the utmost in order to find the reason why certain Sûtras which apparently are unconnected with the main subject have been inserted. A third argument for the great antiquity of Baudhâyana's Sûtras, derived from the archaic character of some of his doctrines, has been discussed in the Introduction to Âpastamba[1]. The number of instances where Baudhâyana's rules are based on a more ancient order of ideas than Âpastamba's might be increased very considerably. But, as now the comparison of the two works is open to all students, I omit the cases contained in the two Dharma-sûtras, and content myself with adducing one more from the less accessible Gṛihya-sûtras. It is a well-known fact that the ancient Vedic ritual in certain cases admitted Śûdras, and particularly the Rathakâra or carpenter, who, according to all accounts, has Śûdra blood in his veins, to a participation in the Śrauta rites. The Taittirîya-brâhmaṇa even gives certain Mantras to be recited by the Rathakâra at the Agnyâdhâna sacrifice[2]. Now Baudhâyana, who, Dh. S. I, 9, 17, 6, derives the origin of the Rathakâras from a Vaiśya male and Śûdra female, apparently reckons him amongst the twice-born, and explicitly allows him to receive the sacrament of the initiation. He says, Gṛihya-sûtra II, 5, 8–9, 'Let him initiate a Brâhmaṇa in spring, a Kshatriya in summer, a Vaiśya in autumn, a Rathakâra in the rainy season; or all of them in spring[3].' But Âpastamba, who shows great hostility against the mixed castes, and emphatically denies the right of Śûdras to be initiated, gives the same rule regarding the seasons for the initiation both in his Gṛihya and Dharma-sûtras[4]. He, however, omits the Rathakâra in both cases. There can be no doubt that Âpastamba's exclusion of the carpenter, which agrees with the sentiments prevailing in modern Brâhmanical society, is an offshoot of a later doctrine, and as both he and Baudhâyana belong to the same vidyâva*m*sa, or spiritual family, this difference may be used as an argument for his posteriority to Baudhâyana. In connexion with this rule of Baudhâyana's it ought to be mentioned that even in the present day certain subdivisions of the modern Sutârs or carpenters actually wear the Brâhmanical thread, and, in spite of the adverse teaching of the *S*âstras, find Brâhmans willing to perform the ceremony of investiture for them.

While it thus appears not incredible that Baudhâyana really was the first Sûtrakâra of the Taittirîyas, the numerous quotations which his works contain, permit us to form an idea of the extent of the Vedic and profane literature known to him. Among the Vedic works which he adduces as authorities, or otherwise refers to, the three sections of the Taittirîya-veda, the Sa*m*hitâ, the Brâhma*n*a, and the Âra*n*yaka, naturally take the first place. For the Âra*n*yaka he seems to have used the Andhra version, as Dh. S. II, 10, 18, 7, 11 references to the seventy-first Anuvâka of the tenth Prapâ*th*aka occur. Two long passages, Dh. S. I, 2, 4, 3–8; II, 6, 11, 1–8, which apparently have been taken from the *S*atapatha-brâhma*n*a, testify to his acquaintance with the White Ya*g*ur-veda. Baudhâyana does not say expressly that he quotes from the Brâhma*n*a of the Vâ*g*asaneyins, but Govinda has no hesitation in pointing to the *S*a*t*apatha as their source. It is remarkable that the fact noticeable in Âpastamba's quotation from the *S*atapatha reappears here, and that the wording of the two quotations does not fully agree with the printed text of the Brâhma*n*a. The differences in the first passage are, no doubt, partly owing to corruptions and interpolations in Baudhâyana's text; but that cannot be said of the second[1]. References to the Sâma-veda and the Sâmans occur repeatedly, and the passage from the Nidâna of Bhâllavins regarding the geographical extent of true Brâh-

[1] Professor Eggeling has lately discussed the question of the discrepancies between Âpastamba's quotations from the Brâhma*n*a of the Vâ*g*asaneyins and the existing text. I can only agree with him that we must wait for a comparison of all those quoted, with both the recensions of the *S*atapatha, before we draw further inferences from the fact. See Sacred Books of the East, vol. xii, p. xl.

manical learning, which Vasish*th*a adduces, is given I, 1, 2, 11–12. From the Rig-veda a few expiatory hymns and verses, such as the Aghamarsha*ṇ*a and the Taratsamandîs, are quoted. The Atharva-veda is not referred to by name, but the existence of Âtharva*ṇ*a schools may be inferred from the mention made of the vows called *S*iras, II, 8, 14, 2. Among the authorities on the Sacred Law, mentioned in the Dharma-sûtra, Kâtya I, 2, 3, 46, Maudgalya II, 2, 4, 8, and Aupa*g*andhani II, 2, 3, 33, do not occur in other works of the same class[1]. Hârîta, who is mentioned II, 1, 2, 21, and who probably was a teacher of the Maitrâya*ṇ*îya school, is named by Vasish*th*a and Âpastamba also. The Gautama who is quoted I, 1, 2, 7 and II, 2, 4, 17, is, as has been shown in the Introduction to Gautama, most probably the author of the still existing Institutes of Gautama. To the arguments for the latter view, adduced there, I may add that two other passages of the Dharma-sûtra, II, 6, 11, 15 and 26, point to a close connexion between Baudhâyana's and Gautama's works. The former of the two Sûtras contains, with the exception of one small clause in the beginning, exactly the same description of the duties of a hermit in the forest as that given by Gautama III, 26–35. The second Sûtra states, just as Gautama's rule III, 36, that the venerable teacher (â*k*âryâ*h*) prescribes one order only, that of the householders. The reason given for this opinion differs, however, according to Baudhâyana, from that adduced in Gautama's text. The almost literal identity of the first long passage makes it not improbable that Baudhâyana borrowed in this instance also from Gautama without noting the source from which he drew. On the other hand, the argument drawn from the fact that the tenth Adhyâya of Pra*s*na III has been taken from Gautama's Sûtra loses its force since, as I have shown above, it is improbable that the third Pra*s*na formed part of Baudhâ-yana's original work. A metrical work on the Sacred Law seems to be quoted II, 2, 4, 14–15. For, as the second verse, adduced there, says that the penance for one who violated his Guru's bed has been declared above, it seems impossible to assume that the two Slokas belonged to the versified maxims of the Dharma current among the learned Brâhmans. If this quotation is not an interpolation, it proves that, side by side with the Dharma-sûtras, metrical treatises on the Sacred Law existed in very early times[1]. One quotation, finally, which gives a verse from the dialogue of the daughters of Usanas and Vrishaparvan seems to have been taken from an epic poem. The verse is actually found in the Mahâbhârata I, 78, 10, and again 34, where the altercation between Sarmishthâ and Devayânî forms part of the Yayâtyupâkhyâna. Considering what has been said above regarding the state of the text of the Dharma-sûtra, and our imperfect knowledge of the history of the Mahâbhârata, it would be hazardous to assert that the verse proves Baudhâyana's acquaintance with Vyâsa's great epic. It will be safer to wait for further proofs that it was known to the Sûtrakâras, before one bases far-going speculations on this hitherto solitary quotation.

[1] Possibly Kâ*s*yapa, whose name occurs in a *S*loka, I, 11, 21, 2, may also be an ancient teacher to whom Baudhâyana refers. In the *G*ri*h*ya-sûtra a teacher called *S*âlîki is repeatedly quoted, and once, I, 11 (end), his opinion is contrasted with that of Baudhâyana and of Â*k*ârya, i.e. Baudhâyana's teacher. The *G*ri*h*ya-sûtra refers also to Âtreya, Kâsakri*t*sna, and Bâdari.

The arguments which may be brought forward to show that Baudhâyana's home lay in Southern India are not as strong as those which permit us to determine the native country of Âpastamba. The portions of the Sûtras, known to me, contain no direct mention of the south except in the desa-nirṇaya or disquisition on the countries, Dharma-sûtra I, 1, 2, where certain peculiar customs of the southern Brâhmans are enumerated, and some districts of Southern India, e.g. Kaliṅga, are referred to as barbarous countries which must not be visited by Âryans. These utterances show an acquaintance with the south, but by no means prove that Baudhâyana lived there. A more significant fact is that Baudhâyana declares, I, 1, 2, 4, 'going to sea' to be a custom prevailing among the northern Brâhmans, and afterwards, II, 1, 22, places that act at the head of the Patanîyas, the more serious offences causing loss of caste. It is probable that by the latter rule he wished to show his standpoint as a southerner. But the most conclusive argument in favour of the southern origin of the Baudhâyanîyas is that they, like the Âpastambîyas and all other adherents of the Taittirîya schools, are entirely confined to the Dekhan, and are not found among the indigenous subdivisions of the Brâhmans in Central and Northern India. This fact is, if not explicitly stated, at least implied by the passage of the Mahârṇava quoted in the Introduction to Âpastamba[1]. It is proved by the present state of things, and by the evidence of the land grants of the southern dynasties, several of which have been made in favour of Baudhâyanîyas. Thus we find a grant of Bukkarâya, the well-known ruler of Vigayanagara[2], dated Sakasaṃvat 1276 or 1354–5 A.D., in which a Brâhmaṇa, studying the Baudhâyanîya-sûtra, is mentioned as the donee of a village in Maisûr. Again, in an inscription of Nandivarman Pallavamalla, which its editor, the Rev. Mr. Foulkes, places in the ninth century A.D.[3], a considerable number of Brâhmaṇas of the Pravaḳana-sûtra are named as recipients of the royal bounty, together with some followers of the Âpastambha[4] school. As we have seen that Baudhâyana is called in the Gṛihya-sûtra the Pravaḳanakâra, it is not doubtful that the Pravaḳana-sûtra of this inscription is the Sûtra of his school. The villages which the grantees received from Nandivarman were situated on the Pâlâr river in the Kṛttûr districts of the Madras Presidency. Besides, the interesting tradition which asserts that Mâdhava-Sâyaṇa, the great commentator of the Vedas, was a Baudhâyanîya[5] is another point which may be brought forward as evidence for the location of the school in Southern India. Further, it must not be forgotten that most and the best MSS. of Baudhâyana's Sûtras are found in Southern India. There are also some faint indications that the Ândhra country is the particular district to which Baudhâyana belonged. For his repeated references to voyages by sea and his rule regarding the duty payable on goods imported by sea show that he must have lived in a coast district where sea-borne trade flourished, and the fact that he uses the Ândhra recension of the Taittirîya Âra*n*yaka makes it probable that he was an inhabitant of the eastern coast.

My estimate of the distance between Baudhâyana and Âpastamba and of that between the latter and the historical period of India has been given in the Introduction to Âpastamba, pp. xxii and xliii, and I have nothing further to add on that subject. The oldest witness for the existence of the Srauta-sûtra of Baudhâyana is its commentator Bhavasvâmin, whom Dr. Burnell places in the eighth century A. D. The Dharma-sûtra is first quoted by Vigñânesvara, circiter 1080–1100 A.D. Several of the passages adduced by him are, however, not traceable in the MSS.

As regards the materials on which the translation is based, I had at my disposal six MSS. of the text and two copies of Govindasvâmin's commentary, the Bodhâyanîya-dharmavivara*n*a[1], one of which (C. I.) gives the text also. These MSS. belong to two chief groups, a northern and a southern one. The northern group contains two subdivisions. The first comprises (1) D., a MS. bought by me for the Government of Bombay at Ahmadâbâd (no. 6 of the Dekhan College collection of 1868–69), and about one hundred or one hundred and fifty years old; (2) P., an old MS. of my own collection, bought in 1865 at Pu*n*a; (3, 4) B. and Bh., two modern transcripts, made for me in Baroda and Bombay. Among these, D. alone is of real value, as P., B., and Bh. faithfully reproduce all its clerical errors and add a good many new ones. The second subdivision of the northern group is represented by K., a modern transcript, made for the Government of Bombay at Kolhâpur in the southern Marâṭha country (Elphinstone College collection of 1867–68, Class VI, no. 2). The MSS. of the northern group, which give the vulgata current since the times of Nîlakaṇṭha (1650 A.D.) and Mitramiśra (circiter 1700 A.D.) in Western and Central India, can be easily recognised by the omission of the third Adhyâya of Praśna IV, and by their placing IV, 5, 1 b–25 after IV, 7, 7. One of the chief differences between K. and the other MSS. of the northern group is the omission of II, 5, 8, 4–II, 6, 11, 15 in the latter. The southern group of MSS. is formed by M., a slovenly Devanâgarî transcript of a Grantha MS., no. $\frac{6\,1\,0}{1\,9\,2\,9}$ of the Madras Government collection[1], and by the text of C. I., a Devanâgarî copy of the MS. of Govindasvâmin's commentary, presented by Dr. Burnell to the India Office library[2]. The second copy of the commentary, C. T., a Telugu paper MS. from Tanjore, I owe to the kindness of Dr. Burnell.

[1] It ought to be noted that in the south of India the forms Bodhâyana and Bodhâyanîya are invariably used for Baudhâyana and Baudhâyanîya. But it seems to me that the southerners are in error, as the affix âyana requires vriddhi in the first syllable.

As might be expected, on account of the southern origin of the Baudhâyanîya school, M. gives on the whole the best form of the text. It also carefully marks the Kaṇḍikâs[3] in the first two Praśnas, ignoring the Adhyâyas altogether, and contains at the end of each Praśna the first words of each Kaṇḍikâ, beginning with the last and ending with the first, after the fashion which prevails in the MSS. of the Taittirîya Saṃhitâ, Brâhmaṇa, and Âraṇyaka. Very close to M. comes Govinda's copy, where, however, as in most northern MSS., the Adhyâyas alone are marked. It is, however, perfectly certain that in some very difficult passages, which are disfigured by ancient corruptions, he corrected the text conjecturally[4]. In a certain number of cases the northern MSS. present better and older readings than M. and C. I.[5] Under these circumstances it has not been possible to follow the commentary or M. throughout. Though they had to be made the basis, they had in many passages to be set aside in favour of readings of the northern group. In some cases I have also been obliged to make conjectural emendations, which have all been mentioned in the notes. Three Sûtras, I, 8, 16, 13–15, have been left untranslated, because the MSS. offer no safe basis for a conjectural restoration, and the commentary is defective.

[1] Taylor, Catalogue Raisonnée (!), I, p. 190. The clerical errors in my transcript are exceedingly numerous, and mostly owing to the faulty rendering of the value of the Grantha characters, which seem not to have been familiar to the copyist. There are also some small lacunae, and the last leaf has been lost.

[3] I alone am responsible for the title Kaṇḍikâ, given to the small sections. M. marks only the figures. D. and the better northern MSS. show only breaks at the end of the Kaṇḍikâs and their first words at the end of the Praśnas.

Govinda, who, as Dr. Burnell informs me, is said to be a modern writer, seems to have composed his vivarana without the aid of older vrittis. Though he apparently was well acquainted with the writings belonging to the Taittirîya-veda, with the ritual and with the common law-books, he has not succeeded in explaining all the really difficult passages. Sometimes he is clearly mistaken, and frequently he passes by in silence words or whole Sûtras, the sense or the general bearing of which is by no means certain. Though it would be ungrateful on my part to underrate the importance of his work for my translation, I cannot place him in the same rank with Haradatta, the commentator of Âpastamba and Gautama, and can only regret that no older commentary based on the living tradition of the Baudhâyanîyas has been available. If such a work were found, better readings and better explanations of many difficult passages would probably come to light. With the materials at my disposal the translation has been a work of some difficulty, and in trying to settle the text I have often experienced the feeling of insecurity which comes over the decipherer of a difficult inscription when the facsimiles are bad. The short Adhyâya on adoption, given in the appendix to the Dharma-sûtra, has been taken from the Smârta or Grihya-sûtra. It does not belong to Baudhâyana, but is frequently quoted by the writers on civil law, who wrote in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries of our era.

VASISHṬHA.

VASISHTHA.

CHAPTER I.

1. Now, therefore, the desire to know the sacred law for their welfare (should arise) in (initiated) men.

2. He who knows and follows the (sacred law is called) a righteous man.

3. He becomes most worthy of praise in this world and after death gains heaven.

4. The sacred law has been settled by the revealed texts and by the tradition (of the sages).

5. On failure of (rules given in) these (two sources) the practice of the *Sish*ṭas (has) authority.

6. But he whose heart is free from desire (is called) a *Sish*ṭa.

7. (Acts sanctioned by) the sacred law (are those) for which no (worldly) cause is perceptible.

I. 1. The word 'now' serves, in this as in analogous cases, various purposes. It marks the beginning of the book, serves as an auspicious invocation (maṅgala), and indicates that something else, the initiation, must precede the study of the sacred law. 'Therefore' means 'because, after initiation, the neophyte is to be taught the prescribed rules regarding personal purification.'—*Kr*ishṇapa*nd*ita. For the wording of the Sûtra compare the beginning of *G*aimini's Mîmâ*m*sâ-sûtras.

3–6. Gautama I, 1–4; XXVIII, 48.

7. The Sûtra contains a limitation of Sûtra 5. It indicates that the customs of the *Sish*ṭas, for which worldly motives are perceptible, have no authority, and are not to be followed. The principle enunciated is one inculcated by the Mîmâ*m*sakas (P. M. S.

8. The country of the Âryas (Âryâvarta) lies to the east of the region where (the river Sarasvatî) disappears, to the west of the Black-forest, to the north of the Pâripâtra (mountains), to the south of the Himâlaya.

9. (According to others it lies to the south of the Himâlaya) and to the north of the Vindhya range (being limited east and west by the two oceans).

10. Acts productive of spiritual merit, and customs which (are approved of) in that country, must be everywhere acknowledged (as authoritative);

11. But not different ones, (i.e. those) of (countries where) laws opposed (to those of Âryâvarta prevail).

I, 3, 3–4). See also Âpastamba I, 1, 4, 5–10; I, 4, 12, 8; and Introduction, p. xxvii. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita has misunderstood the Sûtra. He reads, against the MSS., agṛihyamâṇakâraṇo 'dharmaḥ, 'unlawful acts are those for which no motive, i.e. no sacred source such as the Vedas, is perceptible.'

8. The region where the river Sarasvatî disappears is the Pattiâlâ district in the Pañgâb. The Pâripâtra mountains belong to the great Vindhya range, and are probably the hills in Mâlvâ. The position of the Kâlakavana or Black-forest is not accurately known. But it must probably be sought in Bihâr. All the MSS. as well as Kṛishṇapaṇḍita read in this Sûtra prâgâdarśanât instead of prâgadarśanât, 'to the east of the region where the river Sarasvatî disappears.' This circumstance gains some importance by the fact that the Mahâbhâshya on Pâṇini II, 4, 10, quotes the same definition of the Âryâvarta, giving, however, instead of adarśanât prâgâdarśât, 'to the east of Âdarśa, i.e. the Âdarśa mountains.' It seems to me not improbable that our Sûtra, too, had originally prâgâdarśât, and that some Pandit who knew nothing about the Âdarśa hills, but remembered Manu II, 21, and Baudhâyana I, 1, 25, where the word vinaśanât, 'the disappearance of the Sarasvatî,' undoubtedly occurs, added the syllable na and forgot to correct the â, after prâg.

9. The translation follows Kṛishṇapaṇḍita's commentary, which recommends itself on account of the analogous definition of Âryâvarta given by Manu II, 22.

11. My translation follows the text given by Kṛishṇapaṇḍita and

12. Some (declare the country of the Âryas to be situated) between the (rivers) Gaṅgâ and Yamunâ.

13. Others (state as) an alternative, that spiritual pre-eminence (is found) as far as the black antelope grazes.

14. Now the Bhâllavins quote also (the following) verse in the Nidâna:

15. 'In the west the boundary-river, in the east

B., and the explanation of the former, because it seems to me that the general sense which they give, is the correct one. I feel, however, not certain that the word pratilomakadharmâ*n*âm, 'of those countries where opposite laws prevail,' is more than a careless correction. The majority of the MSS. read pratilomakakshadharmâ*n*a*ḥ* (kalpadharmâ*n*a*ḥ*), which by itself is difficult of explanation. But, as the text of the next Sûtra contains an apparently superfluous phrase, I fear, we shall have to admit that the text is here disfigured by corruptions, which with our present MSS. it is impossible to remove with certainty.

12. K*ṛ*ishn*a*pa*nd*ita reads this Sûtra 'etad âryâvartam ityâ*k*akshate gaṅgâyamunayor antaretyeke,' and takes it as one sentence, the subject of which is 'eke.' I feel no doubt that this explanation is utterly untenable, and that the first four words have nothing to do with this Sûtra, the second part of which occurs also in the Baudhâyana Dharma-sûtra I, 1, 27. My opinion is that they originally belonged to Sûtra 11, though the state of the MSS. at my disposal does not allow me to say how Sûtra 11 has to be corrected. The general sense of Sûtra 12 is, however, perfectly certain.

13. Manu II, 23; Yâ*g*ñavalkya I, 2. It deserves to be noted that the black antelope (black-buck), Oryx cervicapra, selects for its home the well-cultivated, rich plains of India only, and is entirely wanting in the sandy, mountainous or forest districts, which are now, just as in ancient times, the portion of the aboriginal tribes.

14. Regarding the Bhâllavins, see Max Müller, History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature, pp. 193, 364. K*ṛ*ishn*a*pa*nd*ita thinks that Nidâna means de*s*anir*n*aya, 'the disquisition on the countries,' which is the title of a section which occurs in most modern compilations on law. But it will be safer to take it as the name of a Vedic work, identical with or similar to that quoted in *S*aunaka's B*ṛ*haddevatâ, Weber, Hist. Ind. Lit., p. 81.

15. Sindhur vidhâra*n*î or vidhara*n*î, as B. reads, cannot be the region where the sun rises,—as far as the black antelope wanders (between these two limits), so far spiritual pre-eminence (is found).'

16. 'Those religious acts which men, deeply versed in the knowledge of the three Vedas and acquainted with the sacred law, declare to be lawful, (are efficient) for purifying oneself and others.'

17. Manu has declared that the (peculiar) laws of countries, castes, and families (may be followed) in the absence of (rules of) the revealed texts.

18. Sinful men are, he who sleeps at sunrise or at sunset, he who has deformed nails or black teeth, he whose younger brother was married first, he who married before his elder brother, the husband of a younger sister married before the elder, the husband of an elder sister whose younger sister was married first, he who extinguishes the sacred fires, (and) he who forgets the Veda through neglect of the daily recitation.

taken with Kṛishṇapaṇḍita, as 'the ocean,' because in the latter sense sindhu is a masculine. It must be a boundary-river, probably the Sarasvatî. By sûryasyodana, 'the region where the sun rises,' the udayagiri or 'mountain of the east' may possibly be meant.

16. This verse, too, is marked as a quotation by the concluding word iti, though it is not necessary that it should be taken as a quotation from the Nidâna. Here, and in the sequel verses ending in iti are marked as quotations by hyphens.

17. Manu VII, 203; VIII, 41; Gautama XI, 20. Gâti, 'castes,' which sometimes, and perhaps as appropriately, has been translated by 'tribes,' denotes in my opinion those numerous subdivisions of the four great varṇas, which we now find all over India, and which can be shown to have existed for a very long time. Usually the word 'caste' is also applied to them.

18. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita explains vîrahâ, 'he who extinguishes the sacred fires,' by 'the destroyer of his sons or of his spiritual clients'

19. They state that there are five mortal sins (mahâpâtaka),

20. (Viz. violating) a Guru's bed, drinking (the spirituous liquor called) surâ, slaying a learned Brâhmaṇa, stealing the gold of a Brâhmaṇa, and associating with outcasts,

21. Either by (entering into) spiritual or matrimonial (connexion with them).

22. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'He who during a year associates with an outcast becomes (likewise) an outcast; not by sacrificing for him, by teaching him or by (forming) a matrimonial (alliance with him), but by using the same carriage or seat.'

23. A minor offence causing loss of caste (upapâtaka, is committed by him) who (after beginning an Agnihotra sacrifice) forsakes the sacred fires, and by him who offends a Guru, by an atheist, by him who takes his livelihood from atheists, and by him who sells the Soma (plant).

24. Three wives (are permitted) to a Brâhmaṇa according to the order of the castes, two to a Kshatriya, one to a Vaiśya and to a Śûdra.

(yagamâna); but the rules given below, XX, 11, and XXI, 27, in the section on penances, confirm the explanation given above.

20. Vishṇu XXXV, 1–2. Guru means here the father, see below, XX, 15.

21. Vishṇu XXXV, 3–5. Spiritual connexion, i. e. becoming the teacher or priest of an outcast, or his pupil or spiritual client (yagamâna).

22. Identical with Manu XI, 181. It must be understood that spiritual or matrimonial connexion with an outcast causes immediate degradation, as Vishṇu states expressly.

23. Vishṇu XXXVII, 6, 31; Gautama XXI, 11. Regarding the precise meaning of pratigahnuyât, 'offends,' see below, XXI, 27.

24–25. Manu III, 13; Yâgñavalkya I, 57; Pâraskara Gṛihya-sûtra I, 4, 8–11.

25. Some declare (that twice-born men may marry) even a female of the Śûdra caste, like those (other wives), without (the recitation of) Vedic texts.

26. Let him not act thus.

27. For in consequence of such (a marriage) the degradation of the family certainly ensues, and after death the loss of heaven.

28. There are six marriage-rites,

29. (Viz.) that of Brahman (brâhma), that of the gods (daiva), that of the Ṛishis (ârsha), that of the Gandharvas (gândharva), that of the Kshatriyas (kshâtra), and that of men (mânusha).

30. If the father, pouring out a libation of water, gives his (daughter) to a suitor, that (is called) the Brâhma-rite.

31. If (the father) gives his daughter, decking her with ornaments, to an officiating priest, whilst a sacrifice is being performed, that is called the Daiva-rite.

32. And (if the father gives his daughter) for a cow and a bull, (that is called) the Ârsha-rite.

33. If a lover takes a loving female of equal caste, that (is called) the Gândharva-rite.

34. If they forcibly abduct (a damsel), destroying (her relatives) by strength (of arms), that (is called) the Kshâtra-rite.

35. If, after making a bargain (with the father, a suitor) marries (a damsel) purchased for money, that (is called) the Mânusha-rite.

36. The purchase (of a wife) is mentioned in the following passage of the Veda, 'Therefore one hundred (cows) besides a chariot should be given to the father of the bride.'

37. (It is stated) in (the following passage of) the *K*âturmâsyas, 'She (forsooth) who has been bought by her husband (commits sin, as) afterwards she unites herself with strangers.'

38. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'Lost learning comes back; when the family is lost all is lost. Even a horse becomes estimable on account of its pedigree; therefore men marry wives descended from an (unblemished) family.

39. The three (lower) castes shall live according to the teaching of the Brâhma*n*a.

36. *S*âṅkhâyana G*ri*hya-sûtra I, 14; Pâraskara G*ri*hya-sûtra I, 8, 18; Âpastamba II, 6, 13, 12. Though Vasish*th*a's quotation is less complete than Âpastamba's, still the following Sûtras show that he knew the conclusion of the passage, and does not take it as an authority for the sale of a daughter.

37. K*ri*shn*a*pa*n*d*i*ta makes a mistake by connecting the word '*k*âturmâsyeshu' with the next Sûtra. He is right in saying that 'the *K*âturmâsyas' is the name of a book. It is, however, not a separate work, but the kâ*n*d*a* or section of a Vedic work treating of the *K*âturmâsya sacrifices (see Max Müller, Hist. Anc. Sansk. Lit., p. 355). The particular work from which our quotation has been taken, is either the Maitrâyâ*n*îya Sa*m*hitâ, or the Kâ*th*aka. For, as Dr. von Schroeder informs me, Maitrâyâ*n*îya Sa*m*hitâ I, 10, 11 reads 'an*r*ita*m* vâ eshâ karoti yâ patyu*h* krîtâ satyathânyai*s* *k*arati,' and the title of the kâ*n*d*a* is *K*âturmâsyâni. Professor Weber, Ind. Stud. V, 407, has found the same words in the *K*âturmâsya section of the Kâ*th*aka XXXVI, 5. In the translation I have added the beginning of the passage which Vasish*th*a omits, according to the Maitrâyâ*n*îya Sa*m*hitâ.

39–41. Gautama XI, 25–27.

40. The Brâhmaṇa shall declare their duties,

41. And the king shall govern them accordingly.

42. But a king who rules in accordance with the sacred law, may take the sixth part of the wealth (of his subjects),

43. Except from Brâhmaṇas.

44. It has been declared in the Veda, 'But he obtains the sixth part of (the merit which Brâhmaṇas gain by) sacrifices and charitable works.'

45. (It is further stated in the Veda), 'The Brâhmaṇa makes the Veda rich; the Brâhmaṇa saves from misfortune; therefore the Brâhmaṇa shall not be made a source of subsistence. Soma is his king.'

46. Further (another passage says), 'After death bliss (awaits the king who does not oppress Brâhmaṇas).'

42. Vishṇu III, 22–25. Though the ambiguous word dhana, 'wealth,' is used in the text, it seems not doubtful that Vasishṭha alludes to the land-tax, which generally consists of one sixth of the produce.

43. Vishṇu III, 26.

44. Vishṇu III, 27–28. Pûrta, 'the merit gained by charitable works,' i. e. by planting trees, digging wells, and so forth. The words 'iti ha,' placed at the end of the Sûtra, indicate that it is a quotation, and that vigñâyate, 'it is declared in the Veda,' has to be understood from Sûtra 46. Gautama XI, 11, too, alleges that the rule is based on a Vedic passage.

45. Śatapatha-brâhmaṇa V, 4, 2, 3. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita's division of the quotation into several Sûtras is unnecessary. His explanation of anâdya, which he takes to mean 'the first of all,' is wrong. He asserts that the Brâhmaṇa is said 'to make the Veda rich,' because by sacrificing and so forth he fulfils its object and protects it. But the phrase is probably corrupt. If it is said that Soma is the king of the Brâhmaṇas, the object is to indicate that an earthly king is not their master, see Gautama XI, 1.

Chapter II.

1. There are four castes (var*n*a), Brâhma*n*as, Kshatriyas, Vai*s*yas, and *S*ûdras.

2. Three castes, Brâhma*n*as, Kshatriyas, and Vai*s*yas, (are called) twice-born.

3. Their first birth is from their mother; the second from the investiture with the sacred girdle. In that (second birth) the Sâvitrî is the mother, but the teacher is said to be the father.

4. They call the teacher father, because he gives instruction in the Veda.

5. They quote also (the following passage from the Veda) to the same (effect): 'Of two kinds, forsooth, is the virile energy of a man learned in the Vedas, that which (resides) above the navel and the other which below (the navel) descends downwards. Through that which (resides) above the navel, his offspring is produced, when he initiates Brâhma*n*as, when he teaches them, when he causes them to offer oblations, when he makes them holy. By that which resides below the navel the children of his body are produced. Therefore they never say to a *S*rotriya, who teaches the Veda, "Thou art destitute of offspring."'

II. 1–2. Vish*n*u II, 1–2; Manu X, 4.

3. Identical with Manu II, 169[a], 170[a], and Vish*n*u XXVIII, 37–38. The Sâvitrî or the verse addressed to Savit*ri* is found Rig-veda III, 62, 10.

4. Gautama I, 10; Manu II, 171.

5. The reading tathâpyudâharanti, which several of my MSS. give, seems to me preferable to Kr*i*shnapa*n*dita's udâharati. Kr*i*shnapa*n*dita explains sâdhu karoti, 'makes them holy,' by adhyâtmam upadi*s*ati, 'teaches them transcendental knowledge.'

6. Hârîta also quotes (the following verse): 'No religious rite can be performed by a (child) before he has been girt with the sacred girdle, since he is on a level with a Śûdra before his (new) birth from the Veda.'

7. (The above prohibition refers to all rites) except those connected with libations of water, (the exclamation) Svadhâ, and the manes.

8. Sacred learning approached a Brâhmaṇa (and said to him), 'Preserve me, I am thy treasure, reveal me not to a scorner, nor to a wicked man, nor to one of uncontrolled passions: so (preserved) I shall become strong.'

9. 'Reveal me, O Brâhmaṇa, as to the keeper of thy treasure, to him whom thou shalt know to be pure, attentive, intelligent, and chaste, who will not offend thee nor revile thee.'

10. '(That man) who fills his ears with truth, who frees him from pain and confers immortality upon him, (the pupil) shall consider as his father and mother; him he must never grieve nor revile.'

11. 'As those Brâhmaṇas who, after receiving instruction, do not honour their teacher by their speech, in their hearts or by their acts, will not be profitable to their teacher, even so that sacred learning (which they acquired) will not profit them.'

6. Vishṇu XXVIII, 40. Instead of Kṛishṇapaṇḍita's 'yâvadvedo na gâyate,' 'yâvadvede na gâyate,' which occurs in several MSS. and in the parallel passages of Manu II, 172 and other Smṛitis, must be read.

7. Gautama II, 5. The rites referred to are the funeral rites.

8-9. Vishṇu XXIX, 9-10, and introduction, p. xxiii; Nirukta II, 4.

10. Vishṇu XXX, 47.

12. 'As fire consumes dry grass, even so the Veda, asked for, (but) not honoured, (destroys the enquirer). Let him not proclaim the Veda to that man, who does not show him honour according to his ability.'

13. The (lawful) occupations of a Brâhmaṇa are six,

14. Studying the Veda, teaching, sacrificing for himself, sacrificing for others, giving alms, and accepting gifts.

15. (The lawful occupations) of a Kshatriya are three,

16. Studying, sacrificing for himself, and bestowing gifts;

17. And his peculiar duty is to protect the people with his weapons; let him gain his livelihood thereby.

18. (The lawful occupations) of a Vaiśya are the same (as those mentioned above, Sûtra 16),

19. Besides, agriculture, trading, tending cattle, and lending money at interest,

20. To serve those (superior castes) has been fixed as the means of livelihood for a Śûdra.

21. (Men of) all (castes) may wear their hair arranged according to the customs fixed (for their family), or allow it to hang down excepting the lock on the crown of the head.

13. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita wrongly connects the word brâhmaṇasya with the next Sûtra. For this and the next seven Sûtras, compare Vishṇu II, 4–14.

14. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita by mistake leaves out the word 'dânam.'

20. I read 'teshâm parikaryâ,' with the majority of the MSS., instead of Kṛishṇapaṇḍita's 'teshâṃ ka parikaryâ.'

21. In illustration of this Sûtra Kṛishṇapaṇḍita quotes a verse of Laugâkshi, which states that Brâhmaṇas belonging to the Vasishṭha family wore the top-lock on the right side of the head, and the members of the Atri family allowed it to hang down on

22. Those who are unable to live by their own lawful occupation may adopt (that of) the next inferior (caste),

23. But never (that of a) higher (caste).

24. (A Brâhmaṇa and a Kshatriya) who have resorted to a Vaiśya's mode of living and maintain themselves by trade (shall not sell) stones, salt, hempen (cloth), silk, linen (cloth), and skins,

25. Nor any kind of dyed cloth,

26. Nor prepared food, flowers, fruit, roots, perfumes, substances (used for) flavouring (food); nor water, the juice extracted from plants; nor Soma, weapons, poison; nor flesh, nor milk, nor preparations from it, iron, tin, lac, and lead,

27. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'By (selling) flesh, lac, and salt a Brâhmaṇa at once becomes an outcast; by selling milk he becomes (equal to) a Śûdra after three days.'

28. Among tame animals those with uncloven hoofs, and those that have an abundance of hair, (must not be sold), nor any wild animals, (nor) birds, nor beasts that have tusks (or fangs).

29. Among the various kinds of grain they mention sesamum (as forbidden).

both sides, while the Bhṛigus shaved their heads, and the Âṅgirasas wore five locks (kûdâ) on the crown of the head. Cf. Max Müller, Hist. Anc. Sansk. Lit., p. 53.

22. Vishṇu II, 15.

24. For this and the following four Sûtras, see Gautama VII, 8–21.

26. Rasâḥ, 'substances used for flavouring,' i. e. 'molasses, sugar-cane, sugar, and the like.'—Kṛishṇapaṇḍita. See also note on Gautama VII, 9.

27. Identical with Manu X, 92.

29. Vishṇu LIV, 18; Âpastamba I, 7, 20, 13. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita wrongly connects this Sûtra with the preceding one.

30. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'If he applies sesamum to any other purpose, but food, anointing, and charitable gifts, he will be born again as a worm and, together with his ancestors, be plunged into his own ordure.'

31. Or, at pleasure, they may sell (sesamum), if they themselves have produced it by tillage.

32. For that purpose he shall plough before breakfast with two bulls whose noses have not been pierced.

33. (If he ploughs) in the hot season, he shall water (his beasts even in the morning).

34. The plough is attended by strong males, provided with a useful share and with a handle (to be held) by the drinker of Soma; that raises (for him) a cow, a sheep, a stout damsel, and a swift horse for the chariot.

35. The plough is attended by strong males, i. e. is attended by strong men and bullocks, provided with a useful share—for its share is useful (because) with the share it raises, i. e. pierces deep—and provided with a handle for the drinker of Soma,—for Soma reaches him,—possessing a handle for him. That raises a cow, a sheep, goats, horses, mules, donkeys and camels, and a stout damsel, i. e. a beautiful, useful maiden in the flower of her youth.

36. For how could the plough raise (anything for him) if he did not sell grain?

30. Manu X, 91. 31. Manu X, 90.

34. Vâgasaneyi-saṃhitâ XII, 71. The translation follows the explanation given in the next Sûtra as closely as possible, though the latter is without doubt erroneous. The purpose for which Vasishṭha introduces it, is to show that a Vedic text permits agriculture to a Brâhmaṇa who offers Soma-sacrifices.

37. Substances used for flavouring may be bartered for (other) substances of the same kind, be it for one more valuable or for one worth less.

38. But salt must never (be exchanged) for (other) substances used for flavouring (food).

39. It is permitted to barter sesamum, rice, cooked food, learning, and slaves (each for its own kind and the one for the other).

40. A Brâhmaṇa and a Kshatriya shall not lend (anything at interest acting like) usurers.

41. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'He who acquiring property cheap, gives it for a high price, is called a usurer and blamed among those who recite the Veda.'

42. '(Brahman) weighed in the scales the crime of killing a learned Brâhmaṇa against (the crime of) usury; the slayer of the Brâhmaṇa remained at the top, the usurer sank downwards.'

43. Or, at pleasure, they may lend to a person who entirely neglects his sacred duties, and is exceedingly wicked,

44. Gold (taking) double (its value on repayment, and) grain trebling (the original price).

37–39. Gautama VII, 16–21.

40. Manu X, 117. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita reads with MS. B., vârdhushiṃ na dadyâtâm, and explains it by vṛiddhiṃ naiva prayogayetâm, 'they shall not take interest.' I read with the other MSS. vârdhushî, and translate that term by 'usurers.' Below, Sûtra 42, vârdhushi is used likewise in this its usual sense.

43. Manu X, 117.

44–47. Vishṇu VI, 11–17; Colebrooke I, Dig. LXVI, where 'silver and gems' have been added after gold, and rasâḥ, 'flavouring substances,' been translated by 'fluids.' The translation differs also in other respects, because there the Sûtras stand by themselves, while here the nouns in Sûtras 44 and 47 are governed by the preceding dadyâtâm, 'they may lend.' They, i. e. a Brâhmaṇa

45. (The case of) flavouring substances has been explained by (the rule regarding) grain,

46. As well as (the case of) flowers, roots, and fruit.

47. (They may lend) what is sold by weight, (taking) eight times (the original value on repayment).

48. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'Two in the hundred, three and four and five, as has been declared in the Smṛiti, he may take as interest by the month according to the order of the castes.'

49. 'But the king's death shall stop the interest on money (lent);'

50. 'And after the coronation of (a new) king the capital grows again.'

and a Kshatriya. The rule, of course, refers to other castes also, and to those cases where no periodical interest is taken, but the loan returned in kind.

47. The Ratnâkara quoted by Colebrooke loc. cit. takes 'what is sold by weight' to be 'camphor and the like.' Kṛishṇapaṇḍita thinks that 'clarified butter, honey, spirituous liquor, oil, molasses, and salt' are meant. But most of these substances fall under the term rasâḥ, 'flavouring substances.' The proper explanation of the words seems to be, 'any other substance not included among those mentioned previously, which is sold by weight.'

48. Vishṇu VI, 2, and especially Manu VIII, 142. The lowest rate of interest is to be taken from the highest caste, and it becomes greater with decreasing respectability. According to Kṛishṇapaṇḍita and the commentators on the parallel passage of Vishṇu, Manu, and other Smṛitis, this rule applies only to loans for which no security is given—a statement which is doubtlessly correct.

49–50. Both the reading and the sense of this verse, which in some MSS. is wanting, are somewhat doubtful. I read with my best MSS.,

râgâ tu mṛitabhâvena dravyavṛiddhiṃ vinâśayet |
punâ râgâbhishekeṇa dravyamûlaṃ ka vardhate ||

and consider that it gives a rule, ordering all money transactions to be stopped during the period which intervenes between the death of a king and the coronation of his successor. I am, however, unable to point out any parallel passages confirming this

51. 'Hear the interest for a money-lender declared by the words of Vasishṭha, five mâshâs for twenty (kârshâpaṇas may be taken every month); thus the law is not violated.'

CHAPTER III.

1. (Brâhmaṇas) who neither study nor teach the Veda nor keep sacred fires become equal to Śûdras;

2. And they quote a verse of Manu on this (subject), 'A twice-born man, who not having studied the Veda applies himself to other (and worldly study), soon falls, even while living, to the condition of a Śûdra, and his descendants after him.'

3. '(A twice-born man) who does not know the view. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita's text shows two important various readings, 'bhṛitibhâvena' and 'râgâbhîshikena,' which I think are merely conjectures, unsupported by the authority of MSS. He explains the verse as follows: 'The king shall destroy, i. e. himself not take, the interest on money by giving [it away] as a salary. But, after thus giving away interest received, he may increase his capital by [an extra tax imposed on] the cultivators, i. e. take from them the highest rate, consisting of one-fourth of the produce.'

51. Gautama XII, 29; Colebrooke I, Dig. XXIV. The rule given in this Sûtra refers, as Kṛishṇapaṇḍita correctly states, to loans, for which security is given. The rate is $1\frac{1}{4}$ per cent for the month, or 15 per annum; see the note to Gautama loc. cit. Manu, VIII, 140, especially mentions that this rate is prescribed by Vasishṭha.

III. 1. I read Śûdrasadharmâṇaḥ, 'equal to Śûdras,' instead of śûdrakarmâṇaḥ, which occurs in MS. B. only. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita explains the latter reading by śûdravatkarma yeshu te śûdravatteshvâkaraṇîyamityarthaḥ, 'shall be treated like Śûdras.' But the verses quoted in the following Sûtras show that the former reading is the better one.

2. Identical with Manu II, 168.

3. This and the following nine verses are, as the word 'iti,' which the best MSS. give at the end of Sûtra 12, quotations.

Veda (can)not be (called) a Brâhmaṇa, nor he who lives by trade, nor he who (lives as) an actor, nor he who obeys a Śûdra's commands, nor (he who like) a thief (takes the property of others), nor he who makes his living by the practice of medicine.'

4. 'The king shall punish that village where Brâhmaṇas, unobservant of their sacred duties and ignorant of the Veda, subsist by begging; for it feeds robbers.'

5. 'Many thousands (of Brâhmaṇas) cannot form a (legal) assembly (for declaring the sacred law), if they have not fulfilled their sacred duties, are unacquainted with the Veda, and subsist only by the name of their caste.'

6. 'That sin which dunces, perplexed by ignorance and unacquainted with the sacred law, declare (to be duty) shall fall, increased a hundredfold, on those who propound it.'

7. 'What four or (even) three (Brâhmaṇas) who have completely studied the Vedas proclaim, that must be distinctly recognised as the sacred law, not (the decision) of a thousand fools.'

8. 'Offerings to the gods and to the manes must always be given to a Śrotriya alone. For gifts

Anṛik, 'who does not know the Veda,' means, literally, 'unacquainted with the Ṛig-veda.'

5. This verse, which is identical with Manu XII, 114, and the next two are intended to show that a Brâhmaṇa who neglects the study of the Veda, is unfit to decide points of the sacred law, which are not settled either by the Smṛiti or the Śruti, and become a member of a parishad or 'Pañk.'

6. The verse contains a better version of Manu XII, 115.

7. Regarding the term Vedapâraga, see Gautama V, 20, note. Itareshâm, 'fools,' means literally, 'different from (those who have mastered the Vedas).'

bestowed on a man unacquainted with the Veda, reach neither the ancestors nor the gods.'

9. 'If a fool lives even in one's house and a (Brâhmaṇa) deeply learned in the Veda lives at a great distance, the learned man shall receive the gift. The sin of neglecting (a Brâhmaṇa is not incurred) in (the case of) a fool.'

10. 'The offence of neglecting a Brâhmaṇa cannot be committed against a twice-born man who is ignorant of the Veda. For (in offering sacrifices) one does not pass by a brilliant fire and throw the oblations into ashes.'

11. 'An elephant made of wood, an antelope made of leather, and a Brâhmaṇa ignorant of the Veda, those three have nothing but the name (of their kind).'

12. 'Those kingdoms, where ignorant men eat the food of the learned, will be visited by drought; or (some other) great evil will befall (them).'

13. If anybody finds treasure (the owner of) which is not known, the king shall take it, giving one sixth to the finder.

14. If a Brâhmaṇa who follows the six (lawful) occupations, finds it, the king shall not take it.

9–10. Regarding the crime of 'neglecting a Brâhmaṇa,' see Manu VIII, 392–393, where fines are prescribed for neglecting to invite to dinner worthy neighbours and Śrotriyas.

10. A learned Brâhmaṇa resembles a sacrificial fire, see e. g. below, XXX, 2–3; Âpastamba I, 1, 3, 44.

11. Manu II, 157. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita and MS. B. give the ungrammatical construction which occurs in Manu and other Dharmaśâstras, while the other MSS. read more correctly, 'yaśka kâshṭhamayo h. yaśka ḳarmamayo m.' &c.

13–14. This rule agrees exactly with Gautama X, 45; see also Vishṇu III, 56–61. The matter is introduced here in order to show the prerogative of a learned Brâhmaṇa. Regarding the six lawful occupations, see above, II, 13–14.

15. They declare that the slayer commits no crime by killing an assassin.

16. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'An incendiary, likewise a poisoner, one who holds a weapon in his hand (ready to kill), a robber, he who takes away land, and he who abducts (another man's) wife, these six are called assassins (âtatâyin).'

56. Vishṇu XXIII, 56–57. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita takes upakaraṇa, 'heaping (pure earth) on (the defiled spot),' to mean 'lighting a fire on it' or 'digging it up.' 4. Vishṇu II, 17.

5. Mânavam, 'the Mânava (Sûtra),' means literally 'a work proclaimed by Manu' (manunâ proktam). It is probable that the work referred to by Vasiṣṭha is the lost Dharma-sûtra of the Mânava Śâkhâ, which is a subdivision of the Maitrâyaṇîyas, and on which the famous metrical Mânava Dharmaśâstra is based. The words of the Sûtra may either be a direct quotation or a summary of the opinion given in the Mânava-sûtra. I think the former supposition the more probable one, and believe that not only Sûtra 5, but also Sûtras 6–8 have been taken bodily from the ancient Dharma-sûtra. For Sûtra 6 agrees literally with a verse of the metrical Manusmṛiti, and at the end of Sûtra 8 several MSS. have the word iti, the characteristic mark that a quotation is finished, while the language of Sûtra 8 is more antiquated than Vasiṣṭha's usual style. If my view is correct, it follows that the lost Mânava Dharma-sûtra consisted, like nearly all the known works of this class, partly of prose and partly of verse.

6. Identical with Manu V, 41; Vishṇu LI, 64; and Śâṅkhâyana Gṛihya-sûtra II, 16, 1. I take pitṛidaivata, against Kullûka's and Kṛishṇapaṇḍita's view, as a bahuvrîhi compound, and dissolve it by pitaro daivatam yasmiṃstat, literally 'such (a rite) where the manes are the deities.' The other explanation, '(rites)

7. Manu V, 48, and Vishṇu LI, 71, where, however, the conclusion of the verse has been altered to suit the ahiṃsâ-doctrines of the compilers of the metrical Smṛitis. The reason why slaughter at a sacrifice is not slaughter in the ordinary sense may be gathered from Vishṇu LI, 61, 63.

1. A woman is not independent, the males are her masters. It has been declared in the Veda, 'A female who neither goes naked nor is temporarily unclean is paradise.'

2. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'Their fathers protect them in childhood, their husbands protect them in youth, and their sons protect them in age; a woman is never fit for independence.'

3. The penance (to be performed) by a (wife) for being unfaithful to her husband has been declared in the (section on) secret penances.

'pus,' instead of yûpa, 'a sacrificial post.' The reading is, however, wrong, because the parallel passages of most Smṛitis enjoin that a man who has touched a sacrificial post shall bathe. The cause of the mistake is probably a mere clerical error. The MSS. repeat the last word of this chapter, apa ityapaḥ. The reason is not, as Kṛishṇapaṇḍita imagines, that the author wishes to indicate the necessity of bathing when one touches a person who has touched some impure thing or person. It is the universal practice of the ancient authors to repeat the last word of a chapter in order to mark its end, see e. g. Gautama note on I, 61. If it is neglected in the earlier chapters of the Vâsishṭha Dharma-sûtra, the badness of the MSS. is the cause.

V. 1. Vishṇu XXV, 12. The second clause ought to have been given as a separate Sûtra. 'A female who no longer goes naked,' i. e. one who has reached the age of puberty. Amṛitam, 'is paradise,' i. e. procures bliss in this life and heaven after death through her children.

2. Vishṇu XXV, 13. Identical with Manu IX, 3.

3. 'The penance which has been ordained in case a wife is unfaithful to her husband, i. e. goes to a lover and so forth, must be performed in secret, i. e. in solitary places.'—Kṛishṇapaṇḍita. The explanation is clearly erroneous. Rahasyeshu cannot mean 'in secret' or 'in secret places.' It might refer either to a work or works called Rahasyâni or to the rahasyâni prâyaścittâni. As

7. For it has been declared in the Veda, 'When Indra had slain (Vritra) the three-headed son of Tvashtri, he was seized by Sin, and he considered himself to be tainted with exceedingly great guilt. All beings cried out against him (saying to him), the next Sûtra contains a half-verse taken from the section on secret penances, XXVIII, 4, it is evident that Vasishtha here makes a cross-reference. Similar cross-references occur further on.

4. Yâgñavalkya I, 72, and below, XXVIII, 4.

5. Vishnu XXII, 72.

6. Taitt. Samh. II, 5, 1, 6–7. I read with the majority of the MSS., grahânna nirîksheta instead of grihân na nirîksheta, which latter phrase Krishnapandita renders by 'she shall not look out of the house.' My reading is confirmed by his quotation from the Smritimañgarî, where grahânâm nirîkshanam, 'looking at the planets, i. e. the sun, moon,' &c., is forbidden. 'A large vessel,' i. e. an earthen jar.—Krishnapandita.

7. Taitt. Samh. II, 5, 1, 2–5. The name 'slayer of a learned Brâhmana' is applied to Indra, because Vritra is said to have been deeply versed in the Vedas. Regarding the 'proper season of women,' see Manu III, 46–48. In the clause 'That guilt of Brâhmana-murder appears,' &c., I read âvir bhavati with the majority of the MSS. For the prohibition to accept food from a rágasvalâ, see Vishnu LI, 16–17.

'O thou slayer of a learned Brâhmaṇa! O thou slayer of a learned Brâhmaṇa!' He ran to the women for protection (and said to them), 'Take upon yourselves the third part of this my guilt (caused by) the murder of a learned Brâhmaṇa.' They answered, 'What shall we have (for doing thy wish)?' He replied, 'Choose a boon.' They said, 'Let us obtain offspring (if our husbands approach us) during the proper season, at pleasure let us dwell (with our husbands) until (our children) are born.' He answered, 'So be it.' (Then) they took upon themselves (the third part of his guilt). That guilt of Brâhmaṇa-murder appears every month as the menstrual flow. Therefore let him not eat the food of a woman in her courses; (for) such a one has put on the shape of the guilt of Brâhmaṇa-murder.

8. (Those who recite the Veda) proclaim the following (rule): 'Collyrium and ointment must not be accepted from her; for that is the food of women. Therefore they feel a loathing for her (while she is) in that (condition, saying), "She shall not approach."'

9. 'Those (Brâhmaṇas in) whose (houses) menstruating women sit, those who keep no sacred fire,

The MSS. give the following readings in the second clause: tasmât tasmai ka (B. Bh. E. F.), tatra na (F.), medhamupâgâd (Bh. F.), medha upâgâd (E.), seyamupâgâd (B.) Kṛishṇapaṇḍita follows as usually MS. B. His explanation of the whole Sûtra is erroneous. 'That is the food of women,' i. e. that is as necessary to women as their food, because to beautify themselves is one of their duties.

9. The meaning of the Sûtra is that a Brâhmanical beggar must not accept any alms from Brâhmaṇas whose wives are in their

CHAPTER VI.

1. (To live according to) the rule of conduct is doubtlessly the highest duty of all men. He whose soul is defiled by vile conduct perishes in this world and in the next.

2. Neither austerities, nor (the study of) the Veda, nor (the performance of) the Agnihotra, nor lavish liberality can ever save him whose conduct is vile and who has strayed from this (path of duty).

3. The Vedas do not purify him who is deficient in good conduct, though he may have learnt them all together with the six Aṅgas; the sacred texts depart from such a man at death, even as birds, when full-fledged, leave their nest.

4. As the beauty of a wife causes no joy to a blind man, even so all the four Vedas together with the six Aṅgas and sacrifices give no happiness to him who is deficient in good conduct.

courses, who keep no sacred fire, and do not attend to the duty of Veda-study. Regarding sinners of the latter two kinds, see also Âpastamba I, 6, 18, 32–33.

VI. 1. Manu IV, 155. The word âkâra, which has been variously translated by 'conduct,' 'rule of conduct,' and 'good conduct,' includes the observance of all the various rules for every-day life, taught in the Smṛitis, and the performance of the prescribed ceremonies and rites.

4. I read with MSS. Bh. and E., shaḍaṅgâstvakhilâḥ sayagñâḥ. The reading of MS. B., which Kṛishṇapaṇḍita adopts, shaḍaṅgâḥ sakhilâḥ, means, 'together with the six Aṅgas, (and) the Khila (spurious) portions of the Veda.'

5. The sacred texts do not save from sin the deceitful man who behaves deceitfully. But that Veda, two syllables of which are studied in the right manner, purifies, just as the clouds (give beneficent rain) in the month of Isha.

6. A man of bad conduct is blamed among men, evils befal him constantly, he is afflicted with disease and short-lived.

7. Through good conduct man gains spiritual merit, through good conduct he gains wealth, through good conduct he obtains beauty, good conduct obviates the effect of evil marks.

8. A man who follows the rule of conduct established among the virtuous, who has faith and is free from envy, lives a hundred years, though he be destitute of all auspicious marks.

5. Isha is another name for Âśvina, the month September–October. Though the rainy season, properly so called, is over in September, still heavy rain falls in many parts of India, chiefly under the influence of the beginning north-east monsoon, and is particularly important for the Rabi or winter crops. I think, therefore, that it is not advisable to take, as Kṛishṇapaṇḍita does, yathâ ishe 'bdâḥ both with the first and the second halves of the verse, and to translate, 'As the clouds (in general remain barren) in the month of Isha, even so the texts of the Veda do not save from evil the deceitful man who behaves deceitfully. But that Veda, two syllables of which have been studied in the right manner, sanctifies, just as the clouds in the month of Isha, (which shed a few drops of rain on the day of the Svâti conjunction, produce pearls).' 'In the right manner,' i.e. with the due observance of the rules of studentship.

7. Manu IV, 156. By the 'inauspicious marks' mentioned in this verse, and the 'auspicious marks' occurring in the next, the various lines on the hands and feet &c. are meant, the explanation of which forms the subject of the Sâmudrika Śâstra.

8. Identical with Manu IV, 158; Vishṇu LXXI, 92.

9. But a man who knows the sacred law shall perform in secret all acts connected with eating, the natural evacuations and dalliance with (his wife); business to be accomplished by speech or intellect, likewise austerities, wealth, and age, must be most carefully concealed.

10. And a man shall void both urine and fæces, facing the north, in the day-time, but at night he shall do it turning towards the south; for (if he acts) thus, his life will not be injured.

11. The intellect of that man perishes who voids urine against a fire, the sun, a cow, a Brâhmaṇa, the moon, water, and the morning or evening twilights.

12. Let him not void urine in a river, nor on a path, nor on ashes, nor on cowdung, nor on a ploughed field, nor on one which has been sown, nor on a grass-plot, nor in the shade (of trees) that afford protection (to travellers).

13. Standing in the shade (of houses, clouds, and so forth), when it is quite dark, and when he fears for his life, a Brâhmaṇa may void urine, by day and by night, in any position he pleases.

14. (Afterwards) he shall perform the necessary (purification) with water fetched for the purpose (from a tank or river, and with earth).

15. For a bath water not fetched for the purpose (may also be used).

17. Five kinds of earth must not be used, viz. such as is covered by water, such as lies in a temple, on an ant-hill, on a hillock thrown up by rats, and that which has been left by one who cleaned himself.

18. The organ (must be cleaned by) one (application of) earth, the (right) hand by three, but both (feet) by two, the anus by five, the one (i.e. the left hand) by ten, and both (hands and feet) by seven (applications of earth).

19. Such is the purification ordained for householders; it is double for students, treble for hermits, but quadruple for ascetics.

20. Eight mouthfuls are the meal of an ascetic, sixteen that of a hermit, but thirty-two that of a householder, and an unlimited quantity that of a student.

21. An Agnihotrin, a draught-ox, and a student, those three can do their work only if they eat (well); without eating (much), they cannot do it.

23. The qualities by which a (true) Brâhmaṇa may be recognised are, the concentration of the mind, austerities, the subjugation of the senses, liberality, truthfulness, purity, sacred learning, compassion, worldly learning, intelligence, and the belief (in the existence of the deity and of a future life).

24. One may know that bearing grudges, envy, speaking untruths, speaking evil of Brâhmaṇas, backbiting, and cruelty are the characteristics of a Śûdra.

25. Those Brâhmaṇas can save (from evil) who are free from passion, and patient of austerities, whose ears have been filled with the texts of the Veda, who have subdued the organs of sensation and action, who have ceased to injure animated beings, and who close their hands when gifts are offered.

26. Some become worthy receptacles of gifts through sacred learning, and some through the practice of austerities. But that Brâhmaṇa whose stomach does not contain the food of a Śûdra, is even the worthiest receptacle of all.

27. If a Brâhmaṇa dies with the food of a Śûdra in his stomach, he will become a village pig (in his next life) or be born in the family of that (Śûdra).

28. For though a (Brâhmaṇa) whose body is nourished by the essence of a Śûdra's food may

24. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita connects brâhmaṇadûshaṇam, translated above by 'speaking evil of Brâhmaṇas,' with śûdralakshaṇam, and renders the two words thus, 'the characteristics of a Śûdra which degrade a Brâhmaṇa.'

25. 'Close their hands,' i. e. are reluctant to accept.

daily recite the Veda, though he may offer (an Agnihotra) or mutter (prayers, nevertheless) he will not find the path that leads upwards.

29. But if, after eating the food of a Śûdra, he has conjugal intercourse, his sons will belong to the giver of the food, and he shall not ascend to heaven.

30. They declare that he is worthy to receive gifts, who (daily) rises to recite the Veda, who is of good family, and perfectly free from passion, who constantly offers sacrifices in the three sacred fires, who fears sin, and knows much, who is beloved among the females (of his family), who is righteous, protects cows, and reduces himself by austerities.

31. Just as milk, sour milk, clarified butter, and honey poured into an unburnt earthen vessel, perish, owing to the weakness of the vessel, and neither the vessel nor those liquids (remain),

32. Even so a man destitute of sacred learning, who accepts cows or gold, clothes, a horse, land, (or) sesamum, becomes ashes, as (if he were dry) wood.

33. He shall not make his joints or his nails crack,

34. Nor shall he make a vessel ring with his nails.

43. 'Those Brâhmaṇas, in whose families the study of the Veda and of its supplements is hereditary, and who are able to adduce proofs perceptible by the senses from the revealed texts, must be known to be Śishṭas.'

44. 'He is a (true) Brâhmaṇa regarding whom no one knows if he be good or bad, if he be ignorant or deeply learned, if he be of good or of bad conduct.'

CHAPTER VII.

1. There are four orders,

2. Viz. (that of) the student, (that of) the householder, (that of) the hermit, and (that of) the ascetic.

3. A man who has studied one, two, or three Vedas without violating the rules of studentship, may enter any of these (orders), whichsoever he pleases.

See Vish*n*u XXVIII, 44–45; Gautama III, 7–8.

1. (A student who desires to become) a householder shall bathe, free from anger and elation, with the permission of his teacher, and take for a wife a young female of his own caste, who does neither belong to the same Gotra nor has the same Pravara, who has not had intercourse (with another man),

7. But a Brâhmaṇa who stays for one night only is called a guest. For (the etymological import of the word) atithi (a guest) is 'he who stays for a short while only.'

8. A Brâhmaṇa who lives in the same village (with his host) and a visitor on business or pleasure (are) not (called guests. But a guest), whether he arrives at the moment (of dinner) or at an inopportune time, must not stay in the house of a (householder) without receiving food.

13. And all creatures by (giving them) food according to his ability.

14. A householder alone performs sacrifices, a householder alone performs austerities, and (therefore) the order of householders is the most distinguished among the four.

15. As all rivers, both great and small, find a resting-place in the ocean, even so men of all orders find protection with householders.

16. As all creatures exist through the protection afforded by their mothers, even so all mendicants subsist through the protection afforded by householders.

1. Let an ascetic depart from his house, giving a promise of safety from injury to all animated beings.

2. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'That ascetic who wanders about at peace with all creatures, forsooth, has nothing to fear from any living being.'

3. 'But he who becomes an ascetic and does not promise safety from injury to all beings, destroys the born and the unborn; and (so does an ascetic) who accepts presents.'

4. 'Let him discontinue the performance of all religious ceremonies, but let him never discontinue the recitation of the Veda. By neglecting the Veda he becomes a Śûdra; therefore he shall not neglect it.'

5. '(To pronounce) the one syllable (Om) is the best (mode of reciting the) Veda, to suppress the breath is the highest (form of) austerity; (to subsist on) alms is better than fasting; compassion is preferable to liberality.'

30. To avoid backbiting, jealousy, pride, self-consciousness, unbelief, dishonesty, self-praise, blaming others, deceit, covetousness, delusion, anger, and envy is considered to be the duty of (men of) all orders.

31. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita believes that this Sûtra again refers to ascetics. But that is hardly possible, as ascetics are not allowed to wear a sacrificial thread (see above, Sûtra 18). I think that it is meant to emphatically assert that a Brâhmaṇa who is free from the shortcomings enumerated in the preceding Sûtra, and who follows the rule of conduct, will obtain salvation, whether he passes through the order of Saṃnyâsins or not.

9. (Outside the house) he shall throw (some food) on the ground for the dogs, Kândâlas, outcasts, and crows.

5. Vishnu LIX, 14; LXVII, 23, 27. Krishnapandita does not take 'agrabhâga' as a technical term, but explains it by 'a first portion, sufficient for a dinner, or as much as one is able to spare.'

7. Vishnu LXVII, 39. The majority of the MSS. read bâlavriddhataruṇapradâtâs [tato]. Krishnapandita corrects the last word to pradâtâ, while the editor of the Calcutta edition writes prabhritîṃs [tato]. Both conjectures are inadmissible. As the same phrase occurs once more, below, XIX, 23 (where Krishnapandita writes pradâtâraḥ), I think that it is not permissible to change the text. Pradâtâḥ must be the correct reading, and a technical name for a class of female relatives. Etymologically it may mean 'those who have been perfectly cleansed.' But I am unable to trace its precise technical import, and have left it untranslated.

10. Gautama V, 25, and note. 'A Śûdra, i. e. one who is his servant.'—Krishnapandita. It is, however, possible, that a visitor of the Śûdra caste is meant; see Âpastamba II, 2, 4, 19–20.

11. Vishnu LXVII, 41.

12. A fresh meal for which all (the same materials as for the first) are used (may be prepared), if a guest comes after the Vaiśvadeva has been offered. For such a (guest) he shall cause to be prepared food (of a) particularly (good quality).

13. For it has been declared in the Veda, 'A Brâhmaṇa guest enters the house resembling the Vaiśvânara fire. Through him they obtain rain, and food through rain. Therefore people know that the (hospitable reception of a guest) is a ceremony averting evil.'

14. Having fed the (guest), he shall honour him.

15. He shall accompany him to the boundary (of the village) or until he receives permission (to return).

16. Let him present (funeral offerings) to the manes during the dark half of the month (on any day) after the fourth.

17. After issuing an invitation on the day preceding (the Śrâddha, he shall feed on that occasion) three ascetics or three virtuous householders, who are Śrotriyas, who are not very aged, who do not follow forbidden occupations, and neither (have been his) pupils, nor are (living as) pupils in his house.

18. He may also feed pupils who are endowed with good qualities.

19. Let him avoid men neglecting their duties,

21. 'At a funeral sacrifice the fragments (of the meal) must not be swept away until the end of the day. For streams of nectar flow (from them, and the manes of) those who have received no libations of water drink (them).'

22. 'But let him not sweep up the fragments (of the meal) before the sun has set. Thence issue rich streams of milk for those who obtain a share with difficulty.'

'neglecting their duties,' is doubtful. I have followed Kṛishṇapaṇḍita, who quotes the Mârkaṇḍeya Purâṇa in support of his view. The word occurs in the same connexion, Vishṇu LXXXII, 27, where it is rendered by 'naked.' Possibly it may refer to ascetics who go entirely naked.

20. The Sûtra gives an exception to the preceding rule.

21. I read '*sk*yotante hi' instead of '*sk*yotante vai.'

22. 'Those who receive a share with difficulty,' i. e. the manes of uninitiated children, mentioned in the next verses.

26. 'Therefore let him not offer it (to the Brâhmaṇas) without holding (a spoon) in his hand; or let him stand, holding the dish (with both hands, until) leavings of both kinds (have been produced).'

27. 'He shall feed two (Brâhmaṇas) at the offering to the gods, and three at the offering to the manes, or a single man on either occasion; even a very wealthy man shall not be anxious (to entertain) a large company.'

28. 'A large company destroys these five (advantages), the respectful treatment (of the invited guests, the propriety of) time and place, purity and (the selection of) virtuous Brâhmaṇa (guests); therefore he shall not (invite a large number).'

29. 'Or he may entertain (at a Śrâddha) even a single Brâhmaṇa who has studied the whole Veda, who is distinguished by learning and virtue, and is free from all evil marks (on his body).'

26. Manu III, 224. The meaning of the last clause seems to be that the sacrificer shall stand before the Brâhmaṇas until they have done eating.

27. Identical with Manu III, 125; see also Vishṇu LXXIII, 3. The offering to the gods is the Vaiśvadeva offering which precedes the Śrâddha.

28. Identical with Manu III, 126. 29. Manu III, 129.

30. '(But) how can the oblation to the gods be made if he feeds a single Brâhmaṇa at a funeral sacrifice? Let him take (a portion) of each (kind of) food that has been prepared (and put it) into a vessel;'

31. 'Let him place it in the sanctuary of a god and afterwards continue (the performance of) the funeral sacrifice. Let him offer that food in the fire or give it (as alms) to a student.'

32. 'As long as the food continues warm, as long as they eat in silence, as long as the qualities of the food are not declared (by them), so long the manes feast on it.'

33. 'The qualities of the food must not be declared as long as the (Brâhmaṇas who represent the) manes are not satiated. Afterwards when they are satisfied, they may say, "Beautiful is the sacrificial food."'

34. 'But an ascetic who, invited to dine at a sacrifice of the manes or of the gods, rejects meat, shall go to hell for as many years as the slaughtered beast has hairs.'

35. 'Three (things are held to) sanctify a funeral sacrifice, a daughter's son, the midday, and sesamum grains; and they recommend three (other things) for it, purity, freedom from anger and from precipitation.'

36. 'The eighth division of the day, during which the sun's (progress in the heavens) becomes slow, one must know to be midday; what is (then) given to the manes lasts (them) for a very long time.'

38. 'A child that is born from (intercourse immediately) after offering a Srâddha or partaking of a funeral repast, is unable to acquire sacred learning and becomes short-lived.'

39. 'The father and the grandfather, likewise the great-grandfather, beset a descendant who is born to them, just as birds (fly to) a fig tree;'

40. '(Saying), "He will offer to us funeral repasts with honey and meat, with vegetables, with milk and with messes made of milk, both in the rainy season and under the constellation Maghâ*h*."'

41. 'The ancestors always rejoice at a descendant who lengthens the line, who is zealous in performing funeral sacrifices, and who is rich in (images of the) gods and (virtuous) Brâhma*n*a (guests).'

42. 'The manes consider him to be their (true) descendant who offers (to them) food at Gayâ, and (by the virtue of that gift) they grant him (blessings), just as husbandmen (produce grain) on well-ploughed (fields).'

43. He shall offer (a Srâddha) both on the full moon days of the months Srâva*n*a and Âgrahâya*n*a and on the Anvash*t*akî.

39–40. Vish*n*u LXXVIII, 51–53.

41. 'Who lengthens the line,' i. e. who himself begets sons. Read instead of nuyanta*m* pit*r*ikarma*n*i (v. l. muyanta*m* and tri-panta*h*), 'udyata*m*.'

42. Vish*n*u LXXXV, 4, 66–67.

43. Srâva*n*a, i. e. July–August; Âgrahâya*n*a, i. e. Mârgasîrsha or November–December. Anvash*t*akî means the day following the Ash*t*akâ, or eighth day, i. e. the ninth day of the dark halves of Mârgasîrsha, Pausha, Mâgha, and Phâlguna. The form of the word is usually anvash*t*akâ.

44. There is no restriction as to time, if (particularly suitable) materials and (particularly holy) Brâhmaṇas are at hand, or (if the sacrificer is) near (a particularly sacred) place.

45. A Brâhmaṇa must necessarily kindle the three sacred fires.

46. He shall offer (in them) the full and new moon sacrifices, the (half-yearly) Âgrayaṇa Iṣṭi, the Kâturmâsya-sacrifice, the (half-yearly) sacrifices at which animals are slain, and the (annual) Soma-sacrifices.

47. For all this is (particularly) enjoined (in the Veda), and called by way of laudation 'a debt.'

48. For it is declared in the Veda, 'A Brâhmaṇa is born, loaded with three debts,' (and further, 'He owes) sacrifices to the gods, a son to the manes, the study of the Veda to the Ṛishis; therefore he is free from debt who has offered sacrifices, who has begotten a son, and who has lived as a student (with a teacher).'

75. Let him not initiate such men, nor teach them, nor sacrifice for them; let them not form matrimonial alliances (with such outcasts).

76. A man whose Sâvitrî has not been performed, may undergo the Uddâlaka-penance.

77. Let him subsist during two months on barley-gruel, during one month on milk, during half a month on curds of two-milk whey, during eight days on clarified butter, during six days on alms given without asking, (and) during three days on water, and let him fast for one day and one night.

78. (Or) he may go to bathe (with the priests) at the end of an Aśvamedha (horse-sacrifice).

79. Or he may offer a Vrâtya-stoma.

74. Vishṇu XXVII, 27. Sâvitrî, literally 'the Rik sacred to Savitṛi' (Rig-veda III, 62, 10), means here 'the initiation,' see Gautama I, 12 note.

75. Âpastamba I, 1, 1, 28. The plural vivâhayeyuḥ, 'let them (not) form matrimonial alliances,' indicates that orthodox Brâhmaṇas must neither give their daughters to Patitasâvitrîkas nor take the daughters of such persons.

Chapter XII.

1. Now, therefore, the duties of a Snâtaka (will be explained).

2. Let him not beg from anybody except from a king and a pupil.

3. But let him ask, if pressed by hunger, for some (small gift) only, a cultivated or uncultivated field, a cow, a goat or a sheep, (or) at the last extremity, for gold, grain or food.

4. But the injunction (given by those who know the law) is, 'A Snâtaka shall not be faint with hunger.'

5. Let him not dwell together with a person whose clothes are foul;

6. (Let him not cohabit) with a woman during her courses,

7. Nor with an unfit one.

8. Let him not be a stay-at-home.

XII. 1. 'Now' marks the beginning of a new topic. 'Therefore,' i. e. because the duties of a Snâtaka have to be taught after those of a student.

2. Manu IV, 33; Gautama IX, 63.

3. Manu X, 113–114. 4. Manu IV, 34; Vishṇu III, 79.

5. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita, whom I have followed in the translation of this Sûtra, thinks that it indicates the obligation of wearing clean clothes, see e. g. Vishṇu LXXI, 9. It seems to me, however, probable that its real sense is, 'Let him not cohabit with a woman during her courses,' and that the next Sûtra has to be read nâragasvalayâ, 'Nor with one of immature age.'

7. 'An unfit one,' i. e. 'one of low caste' (hînâ).—Kṛishṇapaṇḍita. Probably a sick wife is meant, Gautama IX, 28.

8. Gautama IX, 53. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita gives besides the above interpretation of the Sûtra from Haradatta's Gautamîyâ Mitâksharâ, another one, according to which it means, 'Let him not forsake his own family and enter another one (by adoption and so forth).' A third

9. Let him not step over a stretched rope to which a calf (or cow) is tied.

10. Let him not look at the sun when he rises or sets.

11. Let him not void excrements or urine in water,

12. Nor spit into it.

13. Let him ease himself, after wrapping up his head and covering the ground with grass that is not fit to be used at a sacrifice, and turning towards the north in the day-time, turning towards the south at night, sitting with his face towards the north in the twilight.

14. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'But Snâtakas shall always wear a lower garment and an upper one, two sacrificial threads, (shall carry) a staff and a vessel filled with water.'

15. 'It is declared, that (a vessel becomes) pure (if cleaned) with water, or with the hand, or with a stick, or with fire. Therefore he shall clean (his) vessel with water and with his (right) hand.'

16. 'For Manu, the lord of created beings, calls (this mode of cleaning) encircling it with fire.'

18. Let him eat his food facing the east.

20. And let him not make a noise (while eating).

21. Let him approach his wife in the proper season, except on the Parva days.

22. Let him not commit a crime against nature (with her).

23. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'The ancestors of a man who commits an unnatural crime with a wedded wife, feed during that month on his semen. All unnatural intercourse is against the sacred law.'

24. It is also declared in the Kâṭhaka, '(When) the women (asked) Indra, "May even those among us, who are soon to be mothers, (be allowed to) cohabit with their husbands," he granted that wish.'

25. Let him not ascend a tree.

26. Let him not descend into a well.

27. Let him not blow the fire with his mouth.

28. Let him not pass between a fire and a Brâhmaṇa,

29. Nor between two fires;

30. Nor between two Brâhmaṇas; or (he may do it) after having asked for permission.

31. Let him not dine together with his wife. For it is declared in the Vâǵasaneyaka, 'His children will be destitute of manly vigour.'

37. Let him carry a staff of bamboo,

38. And (wear) two golden earrings.

39. Let him not wear any visible wreath excepting a golden one;

40. And let him disdain assemblies and crowds.

41. Now they quote also (the following verse):: 'To deny the authority of the Vedas, to carp at the teaching of the *Ri*shis, to waver with respect to any (matter of duty), that is to destroy one's soul.'

42. Let him not go to a sacrifice except if he is chosen (to be an officiating priest. But) if he goes, he must, on returning home, turn his right hand (towards the place).

different explanation, 'Provided (the estate) may not have been expended in acts of merit,' is given Dattakaćandrikâ V, 17–18. It is doubtlessly erroneous, for 'the estate' is nowhere mentioned in the preceding Sûtras.

CHAPTER XVI.

1. Now (follow the rules regarding) legal proceedings.

2. Let the king (or) his minister transact the business on the bench.

3. When two (parties) have a dispute, let him not be partial to one of them.

20. Gautama XX, 10–14. I read 'puṇyahradât,' instead of 'pûrṇâhradât,' as the MSS. and Kṛishṇapaṇḍita have. The passage of the Veda referred to occurs Rigveda X, 9, 1.

21. I. e. the person readmitted shall receive all the various sacraments just like a new-born child.

XVI. 2. Vishṇu III, 72–73. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita gives a second explanation of the Sûtra, which also appears admissible, 'Let the king transact the business on the bench, taking counsel (with learned Brâhmaṇas as assessors);' see Vishṇu III, 72.

3. Translated as above the Sûtra is nearly equivalent to Gautama

4. Let him reason properly regarding an offence; finally the offence (will become evident thereby).

5. He who properly reasons regarding an offence, in accordance with the sum of the science of the first two castes, is equitable towards all created beings.

6. And let him protect what has been gained;

7. (Likewise) the property of infants (of the) royal (race).

XI, 5. But the phrase 'when two parties have a dispute' may also indicate, as Kṛishṇapaṇḍita suggests, that the king or judge shall not promote litigation, see Gautama XIII, 27. As Kṛishṇapaṇḍita states, the Sûtra may, however, mean also, 'When one case is being argued, let him not begin another (without finishing the first);' see Manu VIII, 43. Owing to the particular nature of the Sûtra style and the inclination of the Brâhmanical mind to double-entendres, I do not think it improbable that the author may have intended, both in this and in the preceding Sûtras, that his words should be interpreted in two ways.

4. Gautama XI, 23–24. I divide the words of the text, as follows, 'yathâsanam (i. e. yathâ-âsanam) aparâdhohî; antena aparâdhaḥ,' and interpolate syât at the end of the first clause.

5. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita wrongly divides this Sûtra into two, and wrongly adopts the reading of MSS. B. and E., consequently he obtains a sense only by the most astonishing tricks of interpretation. I read with MSS. Bh. and F., yathâsanam aparâdhohyâdyavarṇayor vidyântataḥ, to which the reading of I. O. 913 âdyavarṇayor vidhânataḥ points also. The meaning of the expression, 'according to the sum of the science of the first two castes,' I take to be according to the rules of sacred learning and of the mîmâṃsâ, which is peculiar to the Brâhmaṇas and of logic (ânvîkshikî) and polity (daṇḍanîti), which are peculiar to or at least recommended to the particular attention of the Kshatriyas.

6. I read with MSS. Bh. and F., saṃpannaṃ ka rakshayet. I consider this Sûtra to contain an admonition addressed to the king for himself; see Manu VII, 99. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita and B. read sapattraṃ ka rakshayet, 'Let him protect that which is attested by writings,' i. e. the donations of former kings, attested by writings; see Vishṇu III, 83.

7. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita thinks that the rule refers to the property of

8. (Likewise the property) of persons unfit to transact legal business (minors, widows, and so forth).

9. But if (a minor) comes of age, his property must be made over to him.

10. 'It is declared in the Smṛiti that there are three kinds of proof which give a title to (property, viz.) documents, witnesses, and possession; (thereby) an owner may recover property which formerly belonged to him (but was lost).'

11. From fields through which (there is a right of) road (a space sufficient for the road) must be set apart, likewise a space for turning (a cart).

12. Near new-built houses (and) other things (of the same description there shall be) a passage three feet broad.

13. In a dispute about a house or a field, reliance (may be placed on the depositions of) neighbours.

14. If the statements of the neighbours disagree, documents (may be taken as) proof.

the infant children of a hostile king who has been conquered and slain. It is, however, not improbable that it has a wider sense, and exhorts the king to look after the property of the children of his predecessor and of deceased feudal barons.

8–9. Gautama X, 48; Vishṇu III, 65.

10. Yâgñavalkya II, 22.

11. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita quotes in illustration of this Sûtra the following passage of Saṅkha and Likhita: 'In a field through which (there is a right of) road, (space) for the road must be set apart, and on the king's high-road a space sufficient for turning a chariot.'

12. Arthântareshu, 'near other things (of the same description),' means, according to Kṛishṇapaṇḍita, 'near pleasure-gardens and the like.' No doubt, buildings of all kinds, fenced or walled gardens, and so forth are meant. I read tripâdamâtram.

13. Manu VIII, 258, 262; Yâgñavalkya II, 150, 152, 154.

15. If conflicting documents are produced, reliance (may be placed) on (the statements of) aged (inhabitants) of the village or town, and on (those of) guilds and corporations (of artisans or traders).

16. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'Property inherited from a father, a thing bought, a pledge, property given to a wife after marriage by her husband's family, a gift, property obtained for performing a sacrifice, the property of reunited coparceners, and wages as the eighth.'

17. Whatever belonging to these (eight kinds of property) has been enjoyed (by another person) for ten years continuously (is lost to the owner).

18. They quote also (a verse) on the other side: 'A pledge, a boundary, and the property of minors, an (open) deposit, a sealed deposit, women, the property of a king, (and) the wealth of a Srotriya are not lost by being enjoyed (by others).'

19. Property entirely given up (by its owner) goes to the king.

20. If it be otherwise, the king with his ministers and the citizens shall administer it.

15. Manu VIII, 259.

16. In translating anvâdheya by 'property given to a wife by her husband or his family after marriage,' I have followed Krishnapandita's explanation. It may, however, mean also 'a deposit to be delivered to a third person' (anvâhita or anvâdhi). Pratigraha, 'a gift,' is elsewhere explained as 'property promised, but not actually given.'

21. A king will be superior even to Brahman if he lives surrounded by servants (who are keen-eyed) like vultures.

22. But a king will not be exalted if he lives surrounded by servants (who are greedy) like vultures.

23. Let him live surrounded by servants (who are keen-eyed) like vultures, let him not be a vulture surrounded by vultures.

24. For through his servants blemishes become manifest (in his kingdom),

25. (Such as) theft, robbery, oppression, and (so forth).

26. Therefore let him question his servants beforehand.

27. Now (follow the rules regarding) witnesses:

30. Let him make women witnesses regarding women; for twice-born men twice-born men of the same caste (shall be witnesses), and good Śûdras for Śûdras, and men of low birth for low-caste men.

31. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'A son need not pay money due by a surety, anything idly promised, money due for losses at play or for spirituous liquor, nor what remains unpaid of a fine or a toll.'

35. (Men) may speak an untruth at the time of marriage, during dalliance, when their lives are in danger or the loss of their whole property is imminent, and for the sake of a Brâhmaṇa; they declare that an untruth spoken in these five cases does not make (the speaker) an outcast.

36. Those who give partial evidence in a judicial proceeding for the sake of a relative or for money, deprive the ancestors of their spiritual family and those of their natural family of their place in heaven.

36. This verse, too, is corrupt, though the general sense is not doubtful. I read svaganasyârthe yadi vârthahetoḥ pakshâśrayeṇaiva vadanti kâryam—te śabdavaṃśasya kulasya pûrvân svargasthitâṃstânapi pâtayanti. CHAPTER XVII.

1. The father throws his debts on the (son) and obtains immortality if he sees the face of a living son.

2. It is declared in the Veda, 'Endless are the worlds of those who have sons; there is no place for the man who is destitute of male offspring.'

3. There is a curse (in the Veda), 'May our enemies be destitute of offspring.'

4. There is also (the following) passage of the Veda, 'May I obtain, O Agni, immortality by offspring.'

5. 'Through a son he conquers the worlds, through a grandson he obtains immortality, but through his son's grandson he gains the world of the sun.'

6. There is a dispute (among the wise; some say), 'The son belongs to the husband of the wife;' (and some say), 'The son belongs to the begetter.'

7. With respect to this (matter) they quote also on both sides verses like the following:

8. (Some say), 'If (one man's) bull were to beget a hundred calves on another man's cows, they would belong to the owner of the cows; in vain would the bull have spent his strength.'

9. (Others say), 'Carefully watch the procreation of your offspring, lest strangers sow seed on your soil; in the next world the son belongs to the begetter; (by carelessness) a husband makes (the possession of) offspring in vain.'

10. If amongst many brothers who are begotten by one father, one have a son, they all have offspring through that son; thus says the Veda.

11. If among many wives of one husband, one have a son, they all have offspring through that son; thus says the Veda.

12. Twelve (kinds of) sons only are noticed by the ancients.

13. The first (among these is the son) begotten by the husband himself on his legally married wife.

14. The second is the son of a wife (who is begotten) on failure of the (first) on a (wife or widow duly) authorised (thereto, by a kinsman).

15. The third is an appointed daughter.

The curious fact that Vasishṭha here calls the appointed daughter a son may perhaps be explained by a custom which, though rarely practised, still occurs in Kaśmîr, and by which a brotherless maiden is given a male name. A historical instance of this kind is mentioned in the Râgatarangiṇî, where it is stated that Kalyâṇadevî, princess of Gauḍa and wife of king Gayâpîḍa, was called by her father Kalyâṇamalla. When I collated this passage with the help of a Kaśmîrian, I was told that a certain Brâhmaṇa, still living in Śrinagar, had changed the

16. It is declared in the Veda, 'A maiden who has no brothers comes back to the male ancestors (of her own family); returning she becomes their son.'

17. With reference to this (matter there is) a verse (to be spoken by the father when appointing his daughter), 'I shall give thee a brotherless damsel, decked with ornaments; the son whom she may bear, shall be my son.'

18. The fourth is the son of a remarried woman.

19. She is called remarried (punarbhû) who leaving the husband of her youth, and having lived with others, re-enters his family;

20. And she is called remarried who leaving an impotent, outcast or mad husband, or after the death of her husband takes another lord.

21. The fifth is the son of an unmarried damsel.

22. They declare that the son whom an unmarried damsel produces through lust in her father's house, is the son of his maternal grandfather.

name of his only child, a daughter called Amrî, to the corresponding masculine form, Amargû, in order to secure to himself through her the same spiritual benefits as if he had a son. It seems to me not improbable that Vasishtha's Sûtra alludes to the same legal fiction, and that he recommends in the first instance that the father is to make his daughter a son by changing her name, and next to secure for himself her son, by the verse quoted Sûtra 17.

24. (A male child) secretly born in the house is the sixth.

25. They declare that these (six) are heirs and kinsmen, preservers from a great danger.

26. Now among those (sons) who are not heirs, but kinsmen, the first is he who is received with a pregnant bride.

27. (The son of a damsel) who is married pregnant (is called) a son received with the bride (sahodha).

28. The second is the adopted son,

30. (The son) bought is the third.

31. That is explained by (the story of) Sunahsepa.

I believe that, as the letters ka and va are constantly mistaken by the copyists the one for the other, the original reading was kikrâya. 34. That is (likewise) explained by (the story of) Sunaḥsepa.

He did not agree to their (request. Then) they made him make (this) agreement, "He shall be the son of him whom he chooses." Viśvâmitra was the Hotṛi priest at that (sacrifice). He became his son.'

36. The son cast off is the fifth.

37. (He is called so) who, cast off by his father and his mother, is received (as a son).

38. They declare that the son of a woman of the Śûdra caste is the sixth. These (six) are kinsmen, not heirs.

39. Now they quote also (the following rule): 'These (last-mentioned) six (sons) shall take the heritage of him who has no heir belonging to the first-mentioned six (classes).

40. Now (follow the rules regarding) the partition of the (paternal) estate among brothers:

49. The son of the Kshatriya wife two shares,

56. After the completion of six months she shall bathe, and offer a funeral oblation to her husband. (Then) her father or her brother shall assemble the Gurus who taught or sacrificed (for the deceased) and his relatives, and shall appoint her (to raise issue to her deceased husband).

57. Let him not appoint a (widow who is) mad, ill-conducted, or diseased,

58. Nor one who is very aged.

59. Sixteen years (after maturity is the period for appointing a widow);

60. Nor (shall an appointment be made) if the (male entitled to approach the widow) is sickly.

61. Let him approach (the widow) in the muhûrta sacred to Pragâpati, (behaving) like a husband, without (amorously) dallying with her, and without abusing or ill-treating her.

62. Let her obtain (the expenses for) food, raiment, baths, and unguents from (the estate of) her former (husband).

63. They declare that a son begotten on (a widow who has) not been (duly) appointed, belongs to the begetter.

56. Gautama XVIII, 4–7. The Gurus intended are the teacher, sub-teachers (upâdhyâya), and officiating priests.

57. Avasâm, 'ill-conducted,' may also mean 'out of her mind through grief or any other passion.' The former explanation has been adopted by Krishnapandita, whom I have followed above.

67. A maiden who has attained puberty shall wait for three years.

68. After three years (have passed), she may take a husband of equal caste.

69. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'But if through a father's negligence a maiden is here given away after the suitable age has passed, she who was waiting (for a husband) destroys him who gives her away, just as the fee which is paid too late to the teacher (destroys the pupil).'

70. 'Out of fear of the appearance of the menses let the father marry his daughter while she still runs about naked. For if she stays (in the house) after the age of puberty, sin falls on the father.'

64. Gautama XVIII, 13. 'To both the males connected with the appointment,' i. e. to the deceased husband for whose sake the appointment is made, and to the natural father of the child, to whom the widow is made over.

65. Colebrooke, Mitâkharâ II, 1, 11. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita thinks that the Sûtra forbids an appointment which is made with the intention to secure the estate or a share of the estate of the natural father, from whom the kshetraga son inherits also (Yâgñavalkya II, 127). But it seems equally probable that it is intended to prevent a widow from agreeing to an appointment in order to obtain control over her husband's estate.

66. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita thinks that the rule refers to all cases of appointment.

67–68. Vishṇu XXIV, 40, and note.

70. Gautama XVIII, 23.

71. 'As often as the courses of a maiden, who is filled with desire, and demanded in marriage by men of equal caste, recur, so often her father and her mother are guilty of (the crime of) slaying an embryo; that is a rule of the sacred law.'

72. 'If the betrothed of a maiden die after she has been promised to him verbally, and by (a libation of) water, but before she was married with (the recitation of) sacred texts, she belongs to her father alone.'

73. 'If a damsel has been abducted by force, and not been wedded with sacred texts, she may lawfully be given to another man; she is even like a maiden.'

74. 'If a damsel at the death of her husband had been merely wedded by (the recitation of) sacred texts, and if the marriage had not been consummated, she may be married again.'

75. The wife of an emigrant shall wait for five years.

76. After five years (have passed), she may go (to seek) her husband.

77. If for reasons connected with spiritual or with money matters she be unwilling to leave her home, she must act in the same manner as if (her husband were) dead.

78. In this manner a wife of the Brâhmaṇa caste who has issue (shall wait) five years, and one who has no issue, four years; a wife of the Kshatriya caste who has issue, five years, and one who has no issue, three years; a wife of the Vaiśya caste who

79. After that among those who are united (with her husband) in interest, or by birth, or by the funeral cake, or by libations of water, or by descent from the same family, each earlier named person is more venerable than the following ones.

80. But while a member of her family is living, she shall certainly not go to a stranger.

81. Let the Sapiṇḍas or the subsidiary sons divide the heritage of him who has no heir of the first-mentioned six kinds.

82. On failure of them the spiritual teacher and a pupil shall take the inheritance.

83. On failure of those two the king inherits.

84. But let the king not take (the estate) of a Brâhmaṇa.

85. For the property of a Brâhmaṇa is a terrible poison.

86. 'Poison they do not call the (worst) poison; the property of a Brâhmaṇa is said to be the (most destructive) poison. Poison destroys only one person, but the property of a Brâhmaṇa (him who takes it) together with sons and grandsons.'

79. The persons intended are, (1) brothers united in interest with her husband and other coparceners, (2) separated brothers of the husband, (3) separated blood-relations of the husband within six degrees, (4) separated blood-relations of the husband within fourteen degrees, and (5) persons bearing the same family name or, in the case of Brâhmaṇas, descended from the same *Ṛ*shi.

81. Gautama XXVIII, 21; Vishṇu XVII, 10. The subsidiary sons are those mentioned above, 26–38, who under ordinary circumstances do not inherit; see also above, Sûtra 39, and Gautama XXVIII, 34.

3. (That of a Śûdra and) of a female of the Vaiśya caste, an Antyâvasâyin.

4. They declare that the (son) begotten by a Vaiśya on a female of the Brâhmaṇa caste becomes a Râmaka,

5. (The son begotten by the same) on a female of the Kshatriya caste, a Pulkasa.

6. They declare that the (son) begotten by a Kshatriya on a female of the Brâhmaṇa caste becomes a Sûta.

7. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'One may know by their deeds those who have been begotten secretly, and to whom the stigma of springing from unions in the inverse order of the castes attaches, because they are destitute of virtue and good conduct.'

4. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita reads Romaka, 'a Roman,' for Râmaka, and the B. MS. supports him. The other MSS., including I. O. 913, give the reading adopted above. I prefer it, as there is no reason to assume that the Vâsishṭha Dharmaśâstra belongs to the late period when the Hindus had become aware of the existence of the Roman empire. On the other hand, it may be urged that Romaka is a correction which would easily suggest itself to a Pandit, who was unable to find a parallel passage in which the word Râmaka occurs.

9. (The son of a Brâhmaṇa and) of a Śûdra woman (is) a Pârasava.

10. They declare that the condition of a Pârasava is that of one who, though living, is (as impure) as a corpse.

11. Some call that Śûdra race a burial-ground.

12. Therefore (the Veda) must not be recited in the presence of a Śûdra.

13. Now they quote also the (following) verses, which Yama proclaimed:

'The wicked Śûdra-race is manifestly a burial-ground. Therefore (the Veda) must never be recited in the presence of a Śûdra.'

14. 'Let him not give advice to a Śûdra, nor what remains from his table, nor (remnants of) offerings (to the gods); nor let him explain the holy law to such a man, nor order him (to perform) a penance.'

15. 'He who declares the law to such a man, and he who instructs him in (the mode of) expiating (sin), sinks together with that very man into the dreadful hell, (called) Asaṃvṛita.'

16. 'If ever a worm is produced in an open wound (on his body), he shall purify himself by the Prâgâpatya penance, and give gold, a cow, (and) a garment as presents (to Brâhmaṇas).'

18. For a Śûdra-wife who belongs to the black race, (is espoused) for pleasure, not in order to fulfil the law.

CHAPTER XIX.

1. The particular duty of a king is to protect (all) beings; by fulfilling it (he obtains) success (in this world and in the next).

2. Those learned (in the sacred law) declare that to be free from fear and pity is, indeed, a life-long sacrificial session (sattra, to be performed by the king).

3. Therefore let him appoint a domestic priest to (perform the rites) obligatory on the order of householders.

4. It is declared in the Veda, 'A realm where a Brâhmaṇa is appointed domestic priest, prospers;'

5. For thus both (the special duties of a king and those of a householder) will be fulfilled,

6. And (the king alone is) unable (to do both).

7. Let the king, paying attention to all the laws of countries, (subdivisions of) castes (gâti) and families, make the four castes (varṇa) fulfil their (respective) particular duties.

The verse belongs rather to the section on penances, and seems to have been entered here merely because it stood in Yama's text with the other two, and the author, to use a homely Indian comparison, 'did not disdain to catch a fish, though he went to fetch water.'

9. But punishment must be awarded in cases of assault and abuse after (due consideration of) the particular place and time (where and when the offence was committed), of the duties, age, learning (of the parties), and the seat (of the injury),

10. In accordance with (the precepts of) the (sacred) records and with precedents.

11. Let him not injure trees that bear fruit or flowers.

12. (But) he may injure them in order to extend cultivation and (for sacrifices).

13. The measures and weights of objects necessary for households must be guarded (against falsification).

14. Let him not take property for his own use from (the inhabitants of) his realm.

8. Vish*n*u III, 37.

9. Gautama XII, 51. K*r*ish*n*apa*nd*ita has two Sûtras instead of one, and reads the second hi*m*sâkrośayo*h* kalpa*h*. The majority of the MSS. have, however, kalpâ(h), which I consider to be a mistake for kalpya*h*, 'must be awarded.'

11. Vish*n*u V, 55–56. The meaning of the Sûtra is that the king is to punish those who commit such acts.

12. The explicit permission to cut down trees for sacrificial purposes is given Vish*n*u LI, 63.

13. Manu VIII, 403.

14–15. The translation of these two Sûtras is not certain, because the words nîhâra and naihârika are not found elsewhere in the sense which has been attributed to them here, Still I think it very probable that K*r*ish*n*apa*nd*ita's explanation nirhâra and nirhâre sâdhu is right, and that the king is exhorted not to take the property of his subjects by force, but to levy taxes according to the value or the measure of the articles sold.

16. . . . . .

17. On the march against the enemy the army which consists of companies of ten, shall be able to perform a double (duty).

18. In every (camp) there shall be places where water is distributed.

19. Let him make one hundred men at the least engage in battle.

20. The wives (of slain soldiers) shall be provided for.

21. . . . . .

22. A ferry shall be taken away (from a river) in which there is no water.

23. A Śrotriya is free from taxes, (and so are) a servant of the king, one who has no protector,

16. The Sûtra has been left out, as the text is corrupt, and I am unable to suggest any emendation. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita's explanation is not worth giving.

17. 'The army which consists of companies of ten,' i. e. the lowest subdivision of which consists of ten parts, viz. one elephant, one chariot, two horsemen, and three foot soldiers. Such a body is called a patti. The larger divisions, like the senâmukha, 'battalion,' &c., are formed by three, nine, or twenty-seven pattis. Though I am unable to adduce any positive proof for it, vâha must, according to the connexion in which it stands, be a synonym of patti. 'The double duty' of the army is, according to Kṛishṇapaṇḍita, marching and fighting.

21. The Sûtra is utterly corrupt, and cannot be restored with the help of the MSS. at my disposal. It probably referred to the amount of duties to be levied on goods sold in the market.

22. The meaning of the Sûtra seems to be, that on those rivers, where the water either runs off or is very low during the dry season, the ferrymen must not be allowed to exact a toll from people crossing without their help. Such a rule would not be superfluous, as most Indian rivers are perfectly fordable between December and June, but impassable without boats in the other five months.

23. Âpastamba II, 10, 26, 10, 12–17; Manu VIII, 394. Kṛishṇa-one who has left (the order of householders), an infant, a very aged man, a young man (who studies), and pradâtâs;

24. (Moreover widows) who return to their former (family), unmarried maidens, and the wives of servants,

25. He who swims with his arms (across a river in order to escape payment of a toll at a ferry) shall pay one hundred times (the amount due).

26. No taxes (shall be paid) on the usufruct of rivers, dry grass, forests, (places of) combustion, and mountains;

27. Or those who draw their subsistence from them may pay (something),

28. But he shall take a monthly tax from artisans.

29. And when a king has died, let him give what is required for the occasion.

pa*n*dita correctly points out that, though according to I, 43, all Brâhma*n*as are to be free from taxes, the Srotriya or Vaidik is mentioned once more in order to show that a king, however distressed, must not take anything from him (Manu VII, 133). Kr*i*shn*a*pa*n*dita reads instead of pradâtâs, pradâtâra*h*, 'very liberal men.' Manu loc. cit. exempts 'those who confer great benefits on priests of eminent learning' from paying taxes. His emendation would, therefore, be acceptable if the word pradâtâ*h* did not occur in the same connexion above, XI, 7.

24. Âpastamba II, 10, 26, 11.

25. I read with the majority of the MSS. bâhubhyâmuttara*ñ*kha-taguna*m* dadyât.

26. Kr*i*shn*a*pa*n*dita explains dâha, '(places of) combustion,' by agni, 'fire.' I am not certain what he means thereby. To me it seems most probable that Vasish*th*a intends 'a place of cremation' (dâhasthala), though it is just possible to refer the expression to the jungle fires, which the aboriginal tribes light in the forests, in order to sow their Nâglî in the ground manured by the ashes.

28. Gautama X, 31.

29. Kr*i*shn*a*pa*n*dita refers this and the following five Sûtras to

30. It is hereby explained that (his) mother (must receive) maintenance.

31. Let the king maintain the paternal and maternal uncles of the chief-queen,

32. As well as her other relatives.

33. The wives of the (deceased) king shall receive food and raiment,

34. Or if they are unwilling, they may depart.

35. Let the king maintain eunuchs and madmen,

36. Since their property goes to him.

37. Now they quote also a verse proclaimed by Manu, which refers to duties and taxes, 'No duty (is paid) on a sum less than a Karshâpaṇa, there is no tax on a livelihood gained by art, nor on an infant, nor on a messenger, nor on what has been received as alms, nor on the remnants of property left after a robbery, nor on a Śrotriya, nor on an ascetic, nor on a sacrifice.'

the case where a king has conquered a foreign country; compare also Vishṇu III, 47–48. I think that Sûtras 30–31 conclusively show that these rules are intended to regulate the conduct of a king on the death of his predecessor and his own accession to the throne.

34. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita thinks that the queens unwilling to accept a bare subsistence may go wherever they like. I think the word used in the text points rather to their becoming ascetics.

35. This rule refers apparently to eunuchs and insane persons left with money, but without near relatives, with whom they are united in interest. Vishṇu III, 65.

37. I translate the one word śulka by 'duties and taxes.' The term has a great many different meanings in the law books, and is in this verse apparently used in two senses. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita is of a different opinion, and thinks that the persons named are free from paying a śulka in case they trade. The chief objection is that trading ascetics and Śrotriyas are not known to the ancient writers, though they are common enough in modern India.

38. A thief becomes free from guilt by entering (the royal presence) after (his deed and asking to be punished).

39. But according to some (lawyers) he (who is caught) with weapons in his hands, with stolen goods in his possession, or covered with wounds is proved (to be a criminal).

40. In case (a criminal) worthy of punishment is allowed to go free, the king shall fast during one (day and one) night;

41. (And) his domestic priest during three (days and) nights.

42. If an innocent man is punished, the domestic priest (shall perform) a Krikkhra penance;

43. (And) the king (shall fast) during three (days and) nights.

44. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'The slayer of a learned Brâhmaṇa casts his guilt on him who eats his food; an adulterous wife on her (negligent) husband; a student and a sacrificer on an (ignorant) teacher (and officiating priest); and a thief on the king (who pardons him).'

45. 'But men who have committed offences and have received from kings the punishment (due to them), go pure to heaven, and (become) as holy as the virtuous.'

46. 'The guilt falls on the king who pardons an

38. This Sûtra apparently alludes to a penitent thief who confesses his crime and asks for punishment; see below, XX, 41.

39. Manu IX, 270; Nârada V, 29–33 (Jolly). As given in the MSS. and by Kṛishṇapaṇḍita, the Sûtra is doubtlessly corrupt. I read vraṇasampanno vyapadishṭaḥ.

offender. If he causes him to be slain, he destroys sin in accordance with the sacred law.'

47. 'It is ordained that kings become at once pure (by bathing) when they have done acts causing death. They are likewise (pure while engaged in business) not causing death. Time is the reason for that.'

48. And with reference to this (matter) they quote a verse proclaimed by Yama, 'No taint of impurity, forsooth, falls on kings, on those engaged in practising vows, or on those engaged in the performance of sacrificial session (sattra); for (the first) are seated on the throne of Indra, (and the others) are always equal to Brahman.'

CHAPTER XX.

1. A penance (shall be performed) for an offence committed unintentionally.

2. Some (declare that it shall be performed) also for (a fault) committed intentionally.

3. 'The spiritual teacher corrects the learned; the king corrects the evil-minded; but Yama, the son of Vivasvat, forsooth, punishes those who offend secretly.'

4. And among those (sinful persons), let him who slept at sunrise stand during the (following) day and recite the verse sacred to Savitri.

47. Vishnu XXII, 48; Manu V, 94.

48. Identical with Manu V, 93. 'Those engaged in practising vows' are, according to Kullûka and Krishnapandita, students learning the Veda.

XX. 1-2. Manu XI, 45; Yâgñavalkya III, 226.

4. 'Among those,' i.e. the sinful men (enasvinah) enumerated above, I, 18; Vishnu LIV, 11.

5. Let him who slept at sunset remain in a sitting posture during the (next) night, likewise (reciting the Gâyatrî).

6. But let a man with deformed nails or black teeth perform a K*rikkh*ra penance of twelve days' duration.

7. He whose younger brother married first shall perform a K*rikkh*ra penance during twelve days, marry and take to himself even that (woman whom his brother wedded).

8. Now he who has taken a wife before his elder brother shall perform a K*rikkh*ra penance and an Atik*rikkh*ra penance, give (his wife) to that (elder brother), marry again, and take (back) the same (woman whom he wedded first).

9. The husband of a younger sister married before her elder sister shall perform a K*rikkh*ra penance during twelve days, marry and take to him that (elder sister).

10. The husband of an elder sister married after the younger one shall perform a K*rikkh*ra penance and an Atik*rikkh*ra penance, give (his wife) to that (husband of the younger sister and marry again).

5–10. Manu XI, 201.

6. Regarding the K*rikkh*ra penance, see below, XXI, 20.

7–8. Vish*n*u LIV, 16. According to K*r*ish*n*apa*nd*ita both brothers shall perform penances. The elder brother shall marry after his penance is finished. The younger one shall offer his wife to the elder, in order to atone for the slur put upon the elder. The latter shall accept her for form's sake and return her to the younger brother, who must once more wed her. Regarding the Atik*rikkh*ra penance, see below, XXIV, 2.

10. Vish*n*u LIV, 16. K*r*ish*n*apa*nd*ita thinks that he should marry another wife, but adds that others say that, after offering his wife to the husband of the younger sister and receiving his permission, he should wed her once more.

11. We shall declare below (the penance prescribed for) him who extinguishes the sacred fire.

12. He who has forgot the Veda (by neglecting to recite it daily), shall perform a Krikkhra penance of twelve days' duration, and again learn it from his teacher.

13. He who violates a Guru's bed shall cut off his organ, together with the testicles, take them into his joined hands and walk towards the south; wherever he meets with an obstacle (to further progress), there he shall stand until he dies.

14. Or, having shaved all his hair and smeared his body with clarified butter, he shall embrace the heated (iron) image (of a woman). It is declared in the Veda that he is purified after death.

15. The same (expiation is prescribed if the offence was committed) with the wife of the teacher, of a son, and of a pupil.

16. If he has had intercourse with a female (who is considered) venerable in the family, with a female friend, with the female friend of a Guru, with an Apapâtra female, or with an outcast, he shall perform a Krikkhra penance during three months.

17. The same (penance must be performed) for eating food given by a Kândâla or by an outcast. Afterwards the initiation (must be performed) once more; but the tonsure and the rest may be omitted.

16. Krishnapandita explains sakhîm, 'a female friend,' by 'a woman who has affection (for the offender), i. e. a sister and so forth.' Apapâtras are low-caste people, whose vessels must not be used; see Âpastamba I, 1, 3, 25, note.

18. And with reference to this (matter) they quote a verse proclaimed by Manu, 'The tonsure, (the tying on of) the sacred girdle, (the wearing of) a staff, and the begging of alms, these acts may be omitted on a second initiation.'

19. If (a Brâhmaṇa) intentionally (drinks) other spirituous liquor than that distilled from rice, or if he unintentionally (drinks) spirituous liquor extracted from rice (surâ), he (must perform) a K*rikkh*ra and an Atik*rikkh*ra, and, after eating clarified butter, be initiated again.

20. The same (expiation is prescribed) for swallowing ordure, urine, and semen.

21. If a Brâhmaṇa drinks water which has stood in a vessel used for (keeping) spirituous liquor, he becomes pure by drinking, during three days, water (mixed with a decoction) of lotus, Udumbara, Bilva, and Palâśa (leaves).

22. But a Brâhmaṇa who repeatedly (and intentionally partakes) of liquor extracted from rice, shall drink (liquor of) the same (kind) boiling hot. 'He becomes pure after death.'

23. We will declare (who must be considered) the slayer of a learned Brâhmaṇa (bhrûṇahan). He is called Bhrûṇahan who kills a Brâhmaṇa or destroys an embryo (the sex of) which is unknown.

The first (saying), 'I offer my hair to Death, I feed Death with my hair;' the second (saying), 'I offer my skin to Death, I feed Death with my skin;' the third (saying), 'I offer my blood to Death, I feed Death with my blood;' the fourth (saying), 'I offer my flesh to Death, I feed Death with my flesh;' the fifth (saying), 'I offer my sinews to Death, I feed Death with my sinews;' the sixth (saying), 'I offer my fat to Death, I feed Death with my fat;' the seventh (saying), 'I offer my bones to Death, I feed Death with my bones;' the eighth (saying), 'I offer my marrow to Death, I feed Death with my marrow.'

27. (Or) let him (fight) for the sake of the king, or for the sake of Brâhmaṇas, and let him die in battle with his face turned (to the foe).

28. It is declared in the Veda, '(A murderer) who remains thrice unvanquished or is thrice defeated (in battle) becomes pure.'

29. 'A sin which is openly proclaimed becomes smaller.'

see e. g. Âśvalâyana I, 13. The Sûtra is marked as a quotation, and probably belongs to some Vedic work.

28. Âpastamba I, 9, 24, 21.

29. Taken by itself the Sûtra would seem to refer to the maxim that a free confession reduces the guilt of the offender (Manu XI, 228). But on account of the next Sûtra it is necessary to assume, with Kṛishṇapaṇḍita, that half the guilt of a crime, of which another man justly accuses an offender, falls on the accuser, while the

30. To this (effect) they quote also (the following verse): 'By saying to an outcast, "O thou outcast!" or to a thief, "O thou thief!" a man incurs a guilt as great as (that of the offender). (If he) falsely (accuses anybody of such offences), his guilt will be twice as great.'

31. In like manner having slain a Kshatriya, he shall perform (a penance) during eight years,

32. For (killing) a Vaiśya during six (years),

33. For (killing) a Śûdra, during three (years),

34. For killing a female of the Brâhmaṇa caste who is an Âtreyî, and a Kshatriya or a Vaiśya, engaged in a sacrifice (the same penance must be performed as for killing a learned Brâhmaṇa).

35. We will explain (the term) Âtreyî. They declare that she who has bathed after temporary uncleanness is an Âtreyî.

36. 'For if (the husband) approaches her at that (time), he will have offspring.'

30. Gautama XXI, 17–18.

31. Vishṇu L, 12. The text is here evidently defective. The Sûtra or Sûtras left out must have contained the description of another penance for the murder of a Brâhmaṇa, which is mentioned in nearly all the Smṛitis (see Vishṇu L, 1–6, 15, and the parallel passages). Its chief conditions are, that the murderer is to live separate for twelve years, and to subsist on alms given by people who are acquainted with his crime. Without such an additional rule this and the following Sûtras are utterly unintelligible.

32. Vishṇu L, 13.

33. Vishṇu L, 14.

34. Vishṇu L, 7, 9.

36. The author means to say that the word âtreyî is derived from atra, 'at that time,' and the verb i, 'to approach.' The etymology is worthy of the Nirukta.

37. (For killing a female of the Brâhmaṇa caste) who is not an Âtreyî, (the penance prescribed) for the murder of a Kshatriya (must be performed),

38. (For killing) a female of the Kshatriya caste, (the penance prescribed) for the murder of a Vaiśya,

39. (For killing) a female of the Vaiśya caste, (the penance prescribed) for the murder of a Śûdra.

40. (For killing) a female of the Śûdra caste (let him perform) during one year (the penance prescribed for the murder of a Brâhmaṇa).

41. If a man has stolen gold belonging to a Brâhmaṇa, he shall run, with flying hair, to the king, (exclaiming) 'Ho, I am a thief; sir, punish me!' The king shall give him a weapon made of Udumbara wood; with that he shall kill himself. It is declared in the Veda that he becomes pure after death.

42. Or (such a thief) may shave off all his hair, anoint his body with clarified butter, and cause himself to be burnt from the feet upwards, in a fire of dry cowdung. It is declared in the Veda that he becomes pure after death.

43. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'Hear, (how) the bodies of those who having committed various crimes died a long time ago, and were (afterwards) born again, are (marked);'

37–40. Gautama XXII, 17.

41. Vishṇu LII, 1–2. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita remarks that Śûlapâṇi explains audumbaram, 'made of Udumbara wood,' by 'made of copper,' and that the weapon intended is a club. The last remark is probably true, as the parallel passages of the other Smṛitis state that the thief is to take a club to the king, with which he is to be struck.

42. Âpastamba I, 9, 25, 6.

44. 'A thief will have deformed nails, the murderer of a Brâhmaṇa will be afflicted with white leprosy, but he who has drunk spirituous liquor will have black teeth, and the violator of his Guru's bed will suffer from skin diseases.'

45. Property received from outcasts, after forming alliances with them either by (teaching) the Veda (and by sacrificing) or by marriage, must be relinquished. Let him not associate with such (men).

46. It is declared in the Veda that (he who has associated with outcasts) becomes pure by reciting the Saṃhitâ (of his Veda), proceeding in a northerly direction and fasting.

47. They quote also (a verse) to this (effect), 'A sinner is liberated from guilt by tormenting his body, by austerities, and by reciting the Veda; he becomes also free by bestowing gifts. That has been declared in the Veda.'

Chapter XXI.

1. If a Śûdra approaches a female of the Brâhmaṇa caste, (the king) shall cause the Śûdra to be tied up in Vîraṇa grass and shall throw him into a fire. He shall cause the head of the Brâhmaṇî to be shaved, and her body to be anointed with butter; placing her naked on a black donkey, he shall cause her to be conducted along the highroad. It is declared that she becomes pure (thereby).

44. Manu XI, 49; Vishṇu XLV, 4, 5, 6.

45. Vishṇu LIV, 28. 46. Manu XI, 194.

XXI. 1–5. Gautama XXIII, 15. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita reads, instead of prâsyet, 'he shall throw,' prâśyet, and explains it by dâhayet, 'he shall cause to be burnt.' It must be understood that these

2. If a Vaiśya approaches a female of the Brâhmaṇa caste, (the king) shall cause the Vaiśya to be tied up in Lohita grass and shall throw him into a fire. He shall cause the head of the Brâhmaṇî to be shaved, and her body to be anointed with butter; placing her naked on a yellowish donkey, he shall cause her to be conducted along the highroad. It is declared in the Veda that she becomes pure (thereby).

3. If a Kshatriya approaches a female of the Brâhmaṇa caste, (the king) shall cause the Kshatriya to be tied up in leaves of Śara grass and shall throw him into a fire. He shall cause the head of the Brâhmaṇî to be shaved, and her body to be anointed with butter; placing her naked on a white donkey, he shall cause her to be conducted along the highroad. It is declared in the Veda that she becomes pure (thereby).

4. A Vaiśya who offends) with a female of the Kshatriya class (shall be treated) in the same manner,

5. And a Śûdra (who offends) with females of the Kshatriya or Vaiśya castes.

6. If (a wife) has been mentally unfaithful to her husband, she shall live on barley or rice boiled in milk during three days, and sleep on the bare ground. After the three days (have expired), the (husband) shall offer eight hundred burnt-oblations, (reciting) the Sâvitrî (and the Mantra called) Śiras, while she is immersed in water. It is declared in the Veda that she becomes pure (thereby).

extreme punishments are to be inflicted in particularly bad cases only.

6. 'Afterwards in order to purify her who is immersed in water, i. e. has plunged into water, he shall offer eight hundred, i. e. (such)

7. If (a wife) has held an (improper) conversation (with another man), she must perform the same penance during a month. After (the expiration of) the month, (the husband) shall offer four times eight hundred burnt-oblations, (reciting) the Sâvitrî (and the Mantra called) Śiras, while she is immersed in water. It is declared in the Veda that she becomes pure (thereby).

8. But if (a wife) has actually committed adultery, she shall wear during a year a garment smeared with clarified butter, and sleep on a mat of Kuśa grass, or in a pit filled with cowdung. After (the expiration of) the year, (the husband) shall offer eight hundred burnt-oblations, (reciting) the Sâvitrî (and the Mantra called) Śiras, while she is immersed in water. It is declared in the Veda that she becomes pure (thereby).

9. But if she commits adultery with a Guru, she is forbidden (to assist her husband) in (the fulfilment of) his sacred duties.

10. But (these) four (wives) must be abandoned, (viz.) one who yields herself to (her husband's) pupil or to (his) Guru, and especially one who attempts a number of burnt-oblations with the Śiras, i. e. (the words) "Om, ye waters, who are splendour, juice, and ambrosia," &c., which are joined to the Gâyatrî.'—Kṛishṇapaṇḍita. The Śiras, or 'head,' is again mentioned below, XXV, 13; see also Vishṇu LV, 9. This and the following two rules refer to offences committed with males of equal caste.

9. Yâgñavalkya I, 70. Colebrooke IV, Dig. LXXVI, where a different reading, vyavâyatîrthagamanadharmebhyaḥ, has been adopted, and the Sûtra has been combined with the next. The first clause may also be translated, 'If she actually commits adultery, (and especially) if she converses with a Guru.'

the life of her lord, or who commits adultery with a man of a degraded caste.

11. That woman of the Brâhmaṇa caste who drinks spirituous liquor, the gods will not admit (after death) to the same abode with her husband; losing all spiritual merit she wanders about in this world and is born again as a leech or a pearl-oyster.

12. The wives of Brâhmaṇas, Kshatriyas, and Vaiśyas who commit adultery with a Śûdra may be purified by a penance in case no child is born (from their adulterous intercourse), not otherwise.

13. (Those who have committed adultery) with a man of lower caste shall perform a Kṛikkhra penance, succeeded by one, two, or three Kâṇdrâyaṇas.

14. Faithful wives who are constantly pure and truthful (reside after death) in the same abodes with their husbands; those who are unfaithful are born as jackals.

15. Half the body of the husband falls if his wife

11. Colebrooke IV, Dig. CXIII, where śûkarî, 'a sow,' is read instead of śuktikâ, 'a pearl-oyster.'

13. Manu XI, 178. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita states correctly that kâṇdrâyaṇottaram, 'succeeded by one, two, or three Kâṇdrâyaṇas,' may also mean 'following one, two, or three Kâṇdrâyaṇas,' and that the number of Kâṇdrâyaṇas to be performed depends on the caste of the person with whom the adultery was committed. Thus a Brâhmaṇî must perform one Kṛikkhra and one Kâṇdrâyaṇa for adultery with a Kshatriya, one Kṛikkhra and two Kâṇdrâyaṇas for adultery with a Vaiśya, and one Kṛikkhra and three Kâṇdrâyaṇas for adultery with a Śûdra. His view that the rule refers to wives who commit the sin without intent or against their will, is open to doubt. It is probably an alternative, to be adopted in lighter cases, for the public punishment prescribed above, XXI, 1–3. Regarding the Kâṇdrâyaṇa, see below, XXIV, 44.

drinks spirituous liquor. No purification is prescribed for the half which has fallen.

16. If a Brâhmaṇa unintentionally commits adultery with the wife of a Brâhmaṇa, (he shall perform) a K*rikkh*ra penance in case (the husband) fulfils the religious duties (of his caste), and an Atik*rikkh*ra penance in case (the husband) does not fulfil his religious duties.

17. The same (penances are prescribed) for Kshatriyas and Vaiśyas (for adultery with women of their respective castes).

18. If he kills a cow, let him perform, during six months, a K*rikkh*ra or a Taptak*rikkh*ra, dressed in the raw hide of that (cow).

19. The rule for these two (penances is as follows):

20. 'During three days he eats in the day-time (only), and during the (next) three days at night (only), he subsists during (another) period of three days on food offered without asking, and (finally) he fasts during three days.' That is a K*rikkh*ra penance.

21. 'Let him drink hot water during three days; let him drink hot milk during the (next) three days; after drinking during (another) period of three days hot clarified butter, he shall subsist on air during the (last) three days.' That is a Taptak*rikkh*rā penance.

26. But (the same penance must be performed) for each single (slain animal) that possesses bones.

27. He who extinguishes the (sacred) fires shall perform a Krikkhra penance of twelve days, and cause them to be kindled again (by priests engaged for the occasion).

32. A hermit, on violating the rules of his order, shall perform a K*rikkh*a penance of twelve days' duration, and continue (the observances obligatory on him) in a great forest.

33. Ascetics, (offending in the same manner) as hermits, shall perform for a protracted period (the vow of regulating the quantity of their food according to) the growth of the moon, and shall again be initiated, in accordance with (the rules of) the Institutes applicable to them.

Chapter XXII.

1. Now, indeed, man (in) this (world) speaks an untruth, or sacrifices for men unworthy to offer a sacrifice, or accepts what ought not to be accepted, or eats forbidden food, or practises what ought not to be practised.

31. Vish*n*u LIV, 17.

33. The penance prescribed appears to be similar to the *K*ândrâya*n*a. The offender must eat one mouthful on the first lunar day, two on the second, and so forth. But it is not clear for how long a period the rule is to be observed. The Sûtra is interesting as it furnishes corroborative evidence for Pâ*n*ini's statement (IV, 3, 110) that Bhikshu-sûtras which contained the rules applicable to Bhikshus formerly existed.

XXII. 1. As this chapter is almost identical with and probably copied from Baudhâyana III, 10, and Gautama XIX, the division of the Sûtras has not been made in accordance with K*r*ishna-pa*n*dita's commentary, but agrees with that of the chapter in Gautama's Dharma*s*âstra. The notes to the translation of the

3. (Some) declare that he shall not do it,

5. (The correct view is, that) he shall perform (a penance), because it is enjoined in the revealed texts,

6. 'He who offers a horse-sacrifice conquers all sin, he destroys the guilt of the murder of a Brâhmaṇa.'

7. (Moreover), 'Let an Abhiśasta offer a Gosava or an Agnishṭut-sacrifice.'

8. Reciting the Veda, austerity, a sacrifice, fasting, giving gifts are the means for expiating such a (blamable act).

latter work must be consulted for the explanation of the more difficult passages.

5–7. The text appears here to be corrupt. After Sûtra 5, Baudhâyana III, 10, 6 (Gautama XIX, 7), Punaḥ stomena yageta punaḥ savanamâyântîti vigñâyate, 'It is declared in the Veda, "Let him offer a Punaḥstoma-sacrifice, (those who offer it) again come to partake of (the libations of) Soma,"' has been left out. This omission caused the insertion of the words tasmâkkhrutinidarśanât [darśanât, Bh. F.], ('because it is enjoined in the revealed texts,') at the end of Sûtra 5. The proof that the sixth Sûtra of Baudhâyana has been accidentally omitted is furnished by the fact that several MSS. of Vasishṭha read iti ka after yo 'śvamedhena yagate (Vas. XXII, 6). This ka has no meaning, except if another Vedic passage preceded Sûtra 6. In order to escape this difficulty, Kṛishṇapaṇḍita writes yo 'śvamedhena yagata iti, and begins the next Sûtra with iti ka, which he explains by 'moreover.'

9. Kṛishṇapaṇḍita gives before 'Vedântas' another word vedâdayaḥ, which he explains by 'the Vedas, Smṛitis, and Purâṇas.'

10. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'He who performs once in each season the offerings to Vai*s*vânara and Vraṭapati and the Pavitresh*ṭi* sanctifies ten ancestors.'

11. To live on milk alone, as if one were fasting, to eat fruit only, (to live on) barley gruel prepared of a handful of grain, to eat gold, to drink Soma (are modes of subsistence which) purify.

12. All mountains, all rivers, holy lakes, places of pilgrimage, the dwellings of *Ri*shis, cowpens, and temples of the gods (are) places (which destroy sin).

13. A year, a month, twenty-four days, twelve days, six days, three days, a day and a night are the periods (for penances).

14. These (acts) may be optionally performed when no (particular penance) has been prescribed,

15. (Viz.) for great sins difficult (penances), and for trivial faults easy ones.

16. The K*rikkh*ra and the Atik*rikkh*ra (as well as) the *K*ândrâya*n*a are penances for all (offences).

Chapter XXIII.

4. If, before returning home (from his teacher, a student) voluntarily defiles himself, sleeps in the day-time, or practises any other vow (than that of studentship), the same (penance must be performed).

5. If he has committed a bestial crime, he shall give a white bull (to a Brâhma*n*a).

6. The guilt incurred by a bestial crime with a cow, has been explained by the (rule regarding) the killing of a female of the Sûdra caste.

7. A student breaks his vow by performing funeral rites,

8. Excepting those of his mother and his father.

9. If a (student) is sick, he may eat, at his pleasure, all that is left by his teacher as medicine.

10. If (a student) who is employed by his teacher (to perform some duty), meets with his death, (the teacher) shall perform three K*rikkh*ra penances.

10. Yâ*gñ*avalkya III, 283. 'Meets with his death,' e. g. is killed by a wild animal or a snake, while collecting fuel in the forest.

11. If a student eats meat which has been given to him as leavings (by his teacher), he shall perform a K*rikkh*ra penance of twelve days' duration, and afterwards finish his vow.

12. The same (penance must be performed) if he eats food given at a Śrâddha or by a person who is impure on account of a recent death or birth.

13. It is declared in the Veda, that honey given without asking does not defile (a student) of the Vâ*g*asaneyi-śâkhâ.

14. For him who committing suicide becomes an Abhiśasta, his blood-relations (sapi*nd*a) shall not perform the funeral rites.

15. He is called a suicide who destroys himself by means of wood, water, clods of earth, stones, weapons, poison, or a rope.

16. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'The twice-born man who out of affection performs the last rites for a suicide, shall perform a K*â*ndrâya*n*a penance together with a Taptak*rikkh*ra.'

17. We shall describe the K*â*ndrâya*n*a below.

13. This Sûtra may also mean, 'It is declared that, according to the Vâ*g*asaneyaka, honey given (to a student) without his asking for it does not defile him.' But a parallel passage of Devala, which K*rishn*apa*nd*ita quotes, makes, I think, the version given above appear preferable. In either case the passage is explained by the fact that, according to the Śatapatha-brâhma*n*a, Śvetaketu, one of the great teachers of the White Ya*g*ur-veda, strongly pleaded for the use of honey; see Weber, Indische Studien X, 123 seq.

20. Or, following the same rule, he may also frequently recite the Gâyatrî;

21. Or, having kindled a fire, he may offer clarified butter with the Kûshmâṇḍas.

22. 'And the guilt (of) all (offences) excepting mortal sins is removed thereby.'

23. Now he may also sip water in the morning, thinking of (the Mantra), 'May fire and wrath and the lords of wrath protect me,' &c., and meditating on his sin; (then) he may mutter the Vyâhṛitis that end with satya (truth), prefixing (the syllable) Om (to each), or he may recite the Aghamarshaṇa.

30. Vishṇu LI, 3–4; Gautama XXIII, 4–5; Manu XI, 157. The Sûtra is badly corrupted in Kṛishṇapaṇḍita's edition. I read kaṅka instead of vaṅka, leave out vâyasa after bhâsa, and change kâkolûkânâṁ sâdane to kâkolûkamâṁsâdane. The latter change is absolutely necessary; firstly, because the penances for killing dogs and men have been given above; secondly, because the word mânusha requires a noun which it qualifies at the end of the compound; thirdly, because the penance which is prescribed, fasting until the entrails are empty, is absurd for murder, but appropriate for eating forbidden food; and fourthly, because the parallel passages of other Smṛitis actually do prescribe it for eating the flesh of excessively impure animals and for cannibalism. The change of amâ to ânâ is a very common mistake in Devanâgarî MSS.

made by outcasts or *Kâṇḍâ*las, they shall sit silent and fasting during three days;

35. Or if they repeat that (text of the Gâyatrî) at least one thousand times, they become pure; thus it is stated in the Veda.

36. By this rule (the penance to be performed by) those who teach or sacrifice for vile men has been explained. It is declared in the Veda that they become pure by also relinquishing the fees (which they received).

37. By this same (rule the penance prescribed for) an Abhisasta, (one accused of a heinous crime,) has been explained.

38. (If he has been accused of) killing a learned Brâhma*ṇa*, let him subsist during twelve days on water (only), and fast during (another) twelve days.

39. If he has falsely accused a Brâhma*ṇa* of a crime which causes loss of caste, or of a minor offence which does not cause loss of caste, he shall subsist during a month on water (only), and constantly repeat the (*Rik*as called) *Ś*uddhavatîs;

40. Or he may go to bathe (with the priests) at (the conclusion of) a horse-sacrifice.

41. By this (rule the penance for) intercourse with a female of the *Kâṇḍâ*la caste has been declared.

42. Now (follows the description of) another K*rikkh*ra penance, applicable to all (men), where (the rule given above) has been altered.

four days (must be passed) in the same manner. Wishing to show favour to the Brâhmaṇas, Manu, the chief among the pillars of the law, has thus described the Śisukṛikkhra (the hard penance of children) for infants, aged, and sick men.

44. Now follows the rule for (the performance of) the Kândrâyaṇa (lunar penance).

45. On the first day of the dark half (of the month) let him eat fourteen (mouthfuls), let him diminish the (number of) mouthfuls (each day by one), and continue in this manner until the end of the fortnight. In like manner let him eat one mouthful on the first day of the bright half, and (daily) increasing (the number of) mouthfuls, continue until the end of the fortnight.

46. Meanwhile let him sing Sâmans, or mutter the Vyâhṛitis.

47. A month during which he thus performs a Kândrâyaṇa, the Ṛishis have called by way of laudation, 'a means of purification' (pavitra). It is prescribed as an expiation of all (offences) for which no (special penance) has been mentioned.

Chapter XXIV.

1. Now (follows the description of) an Atikṛikkhra penance.

2. Let him eat as much as he can take at one (mouthful, and follow the rules given) above for a Kṛikkhra, (viz.) to eat during three days in the morning, (during another three days) in the evening, (during further three days) food given without asking, and to fast during the last three days. That is an Atik*rikkh*ra.

3. A K*rikkh*ra penance (during the performance of which one) subsists on water (only is called) a K*rikkh*râtik*rikkh*ra.

4. The peculiar observances (prescribed during the performance) of K*rikkh*ra penances (are as follows):

5. 'Having cut his nails, (the performer) shall cause his beard and all his hair to be shaved off, excepting the eyebrows, the eyelashes, and the lock at the top of the head; (wear) one garment only; he shall eat blameless food; what one obtains by going to beg once (is called) blameless food; he shall bathe in the morning, at noon, and in the evening; he shall carry a stick (and) a waterpot; he shall avoid to speak to women and Sûdras; carefully keeping himself in an upright or sitting posture, he shall stand during the day, and remain seated during the night.' Thus speaks the divine Vasish*th*a.

6. Let him not instruct in these Institutes of the sacred law anybody but his son or a pupil who stays (in his house at least) for a year.

7. The fee (for teaching it) is one thousand (pa*n*as), (or) ten cows and a bull, or the worship of the teacher.

Chapter XXV.

1. I will completely explain the purification of those whose guilt has not been made public, both from great crimes and for minor offences.

3. Gautama XXVI, 20; see also Vish*n*u XLVI, 13–14.

4–5. Gautama XXVI, 6, 8; Vish*n*u XLVII, 24–25.

6. The MSS. read in the beginning of this Sûtra, satayânudeti or satayâtudeta, while K*r*ish*n*apa*n*dita, probably as a guess, writes satapâ nudati. I do not think that his correction is satisfactory, and propose in its stead, sa tadyadetad (dharmaśâstram).

2. A penance prescribed in (the section on) secret (penances) is for an Agnihotrin, an aged and a learned man, who have subdued their senses; but other men (must perform the expiations) described above.

3. Those constantly engaged in suppressing their breath, reciting purificatory texts, giving gifts, making burnt-oblations, and muttering (sacred texts) will, undoubtedly, be freed from (the guilt of) crimes causing loss of caste.

4. Seated with Kusa grass in his hands, let him repeatedly suppress his breath, and again and again recite purificatory texts, the Vyâhritis, the syllable Om, and the daily portion of the Veda.

5. Always intent on the practice of Yoga, let him again and again suppress his breath. Up to the ends of his hair and up to the ends of his nails let him perform highest austerity.

6. Through the obstruction (of the expiration) air is generated, through air fire is produced, then through heat water is formed; hence he is internally purified by (these) three.

7. Neither through severe austerities, nor through the daily recitation of the Veda, nor through offering sacrifices can the twice-born reach that condition which they attain by the practice of Yoga.

8. Through the practice of Yoga (true) knowledge is obtained, Yoga is the sum of the sacred law, the practice of Yoga is the highest and eternal austerity; therefore let him always be absorbed in the practice of Yoga.

XXV. 4. Read prânâyâmân in the text.

5. The MSS. read at the end of this verse, tapas tapyatam uttamam, while Krishnapandita gives tapas tapyât tu uttamam. The correct reading is probably tapas tapyatu uttamam.

9. For him who is constantly engaged in (reciting the syllable) Om, the seven Vyâhṛitis, and the three-footed Gâyatrî no danger exists anywhere.

10. The Vedas likewise begin with the syllable Om, and they end with the syllable Om, the syllable Om is the sum of all speech; therefore let him repeat it constantly.

11. The most excellent (portion of the) Veda, which consists of one syllable, is declared to be the best purificatory text.

12. If the guilt of all sins did fall on one man, to repeat the Gâyatrî ten thousand times (would be) an efficient means of purification.

13. If, suppressing his breath, he thrice recites the Gâyatrî together with the Vyâhṛitis together with the syllable Om and with the (text called) Śiras, that is called one suppression of breath.

Chapter XXVI.

1. If, untired, he performs three suppressions of his breath according to the rule, the sins which he committed during a day and a night are instantly destroyed.

2. Seated during the evening prayer, he removes by (three) suppressions of his breath all guilt which he incurred during the day by deeds, thoughts, or speeches.

3. But standing during the morning prayer, he removes by (three) suppressions of his breath all guilt which he incurred during the night by deeds, thoughts, or speeches.

4. But sixteen suppressions of breath, accompanied by (the recitation of) the Vyâh*ri*tis and the syllable Om, repeated daily, purify after a month even the slayer of a learned Brâhma*n*a.

5. Even a drinker of spirituous liquor becomes pure, if he mutters the (hymn seen) by Kutsa, 'Apa na*h* *so*su*k*ad agham,' and (the hymn seen) by Vasish*th*a (which begins with the word) 'Prati,' the Mâhitra (hymn), and the *Ś*uddhavatîs.

6. Even he who has stolen gold becomes instantly free from guilt, if he once mutters (the hymn beginning with the words) 'Asya vâmasya' and the *Ś*ivasa*m*kalpa.

7. The violator of a Guru's bed is freed (from sin) if he repeatedly recites the (hymn beginning) 'Havish pântam agaram' and that (beginning) 'Na tam a*m*ha*h*' and mutters the hymn addressed to Purusha.

8. Or plunging into water he may thrice mutter the Aghamarsha*n*a. Manu has declared that the (effect is the) same as if he had gone to bathe at a horse-sacrifice.

9. An offering consisting of muttered prayers is ten times more efficacious than a sacrifice at which animals are killed; a (prayer) which is inaudible (to others) surpasses it a hundred times, and the mental (recitation of sacred texts) one thousand times.

10. The four Pâkayagñas and those sacrifices which are enjoined by the rules of the Veda are all together not equal in value to the sixteenth part of a sacrifice consisting of muttered prayers.

11. But, undoubtedly, a Brâhmaṇa reaches the highest goal by muttering prayers only; whether he perform other (rites) or neglect them, he is called a Brâhmaṇa who befriends all creatures (maitra).

12. The sins of those who are intent on muttering prayers, of those who offer burnt-oblations, of those who are given to meditation, of those who reside in sacred places, and of those who have bathed after performing the vows called Śiras, do not remain.

13. As a fire, fanned by wind, burns brighter, and (as its flame grows) through offerings (of butter), even so a Brâhmaṇa who is daily engaged in

9. Manu II, 85; Vishṇu LV, 19. The term ârambhayagña, translated by 'an offering at which animals are slain,' is taken by Kṛishṇapaṇḍita to mean pâṭhayagña, 'an offering consisting of Vedic mantras recited aloud.' The word may be taken in several ways, but the various reading vidhiyagña in Manu's verse induces me to adopt the translation given above.

10. Identical with Manu II, 86, and Vishṇu LV, 20. Regarding the four Pâkayagñas, see Professor Jolly's note on Vishṇu. In my opinion the four classes of rites huta, ahuta, prahuta, and prâśita are meant.

muttering sacred texts shines with a brilliant lustre.

14. The destruction of those who fulfil the duty of daily study, who constantly restrain themselves, who mutter prayers and offer sacrifices has never been known (to happen).

15. Let him who is desirous of purification repeat, though he be charged with all sins, the divine (Gâyatrî), at the most one thousand times, or one hundred times as a medium (penance), or at least ten times (for trivial faults).

16. A Kshatriya shall pass through misfortunes which have befallen him by the strength of his arms, a Vaisya and Sûdra by their wealth, the highest among twice-born men by muttered prayers and burnt-oblations.

17. As horses (are useless) without a chariot, as chariots (are useless) without horses, even so austerity (is useless) to him who is destitute of sacred learning, and sacred learning to him who practises no austerities.

18. As food mixed with honey, or honey mixed with food, even so are austerities and learning, joined together, a powerful medicine.

14. Manu IV, 146.

XXVII. 1-2. Manu XI, 247.

Veda is retained, the fire of the Veda destroys all (the guilt) of that man just as a (common) fire consumes fuel.

2. As a fire that burns strongly consumes even green trees, even so the fire of the Veda destroys one's guilt caused by (evil) deeds.

3. A Brâhmaṇa who remembers the Rig-veda is not tainted by any guilt, though he has destroyed these (three) worlds and has eaten the food of all, (even of the most sinful) men.

4. If (a Brâhmaṇa) relies on the power of the Veda, he cannot find pleasure in sinful acts. Guilt (incurred) through ignorance and negligence is destroyed, not (that of) other (intentional offences).

5. If a hermit subsisting on roots and fruit practises austerities in a forest, and (a householder) recites a single Ṛik, the merit of the acts of the one and of the other is equal.

6. Let him strengthen the Veda by (studying) the Itihâsas and Purâṇas. For the Veda fears a man of little learning, (thinking) 'He will destroy me.'

7. The daily recitation of the Veda and the performance, according to one's ability, of the series of Mahâyagñas quickly destroy guilt, even that of mortal sins.

8. Let him daily perform, without tiring, his particular rites which the Veda enjoins. For if he does that according to his ability, he will reach the most blessed state.

9. Through sacrificing for wicked people, through teaching them, through intermarrying with them, and through receiving gifts from them, (learned)

3. Identical with Manu XI, 262.

8. 'The most blessed state,' i. e. final liberation, or moksha.

Brâhmaṇas do not contract guilt, for (a learned Brâhmaṇa) resembles a fire and the sun.

10. I will now declare the purification prescribed for (eating) food, regarding which doubts have arisen, whether it may be called fit to be eaten or not. Listen to my words!

11. Let a Brâhmaṇa drink during three days the astringent decoction of the Brahmasuvarkalâ plant, unmixed with salt or pungent condiments, and (a decoction of) the Saṅkhapushpî plant, together with milk.

12. Let him drink water, after boiling in it Palâśa and Bilva leaves, Kuśa grass, and (leaves of) lotuses and Udumbara trees; after three days and no more he becomes pure.

13. (Subsisting) during one day on each (of the following substances), cow's urine, cowdung, milk, sour milk, butter, and water in which Kuśa grass has been boiled, and fasting on the seventh day purify even (him who fears that he has partaken of the food of) a Śvapâka.

14. He who lives during five days on cow's urine, cowdung, milk, sour milk, and clarified butter, is purified by means of (that) Pañkagavya, (the five products of the cow.)

15. He who, in accordance with the rule, uses barley (for his food), becomes pure even by ocular proof. (For) if he is pure, those (barley grains) will be white, if he is impure they will be discoloured.

16. (If he makes) three morning meals of food

12. Vishṇu XLVI, 23. I read abhogyabhogyasaṃgñake.

15. The rule is described by Vishṇu XLVIII.

16. The meaning of the Sûtra is that each mode of subsistence is to be continued during three days.

fit for a sacrifice and three evening meals in like manner, and if food given without asking (is his subsistence) in the same manner, (he will thus perform) three fasts.

17. Now if he is in haste to make (himself pure), (let him) subsist on air during a day, and pass the night standing in water; (that penance) is equal to a Prâgâpatya (K*rikkh*ra).

18. But if at sunrise he mutters the Gâyatrî eight thousand times, he will be freed from all mortal sins, provided he be not the slayer of a Brâhma*n*a.

19. He, forsooth, who has stolen (the gold of a Brâhma*n*a), has drunk spirituous liquor, has slain a learned Brâhma*n*a, or has violated his Guru's bed, will become free from all (these) mortal sins if he studies the Institutes of the sacred law.

20. For unlawful acts, for unlawful sacrifices, and for great sins (let him perform) a K*rikkh*ra and a *K*ândrâya*n*a, which destroy all guilt.

21. Let him add daily one mouthful (to his food) during the bright (half of the month), let him diminish it (daily by one mouthful) during the dark (half), and let him fast on the new-moon day; that is the rule for the *K*ândrâya*n*a (or lunar penance).

Chapter XXVIII.

1. A woman is not defiled by a lover, nor a Brâhma*n*a by Vedic rites, nor water by urine and ordure, nor fire by consuming (impure substances).

18. Ash*t*asahasram, 'eight thousand times,' may also mean 'one thousand and eight times.'

21. See above, XXIII, 44-47.

XXVIII. 1. 'Is not defiled by a lover,' i. e. does not become irrevocably an outcast, but may be restored to her position after

2–3. A wife, (though) tainted by sin, whether she be quarrelsome, or have left the house, or have suffered criminal force, or have fallen into the hands of thieves, must not be abandoned; to forsake her is not prescribed (by the sacred law). Let him wait for the time of her courses; by her temporary uncleanness she becomes pure.

4. Women (possess) an unequalled means of purification; they never become (entirely) foul. For month by month their temporary uncleanness removes their sins.

5. Women belong first to three gods, Soma (the moon), the Gandharva, and Fire, and come afterwards into the possession of men; according to the law they cannot be contaminated.

6. Soma gave them cleanliness, the Gandharva their melodious voice, and Fire purity of all (limbs); therefore women are free from stains.

7. Those versed in the sacred law state that there are three acts (only) which make women outcasts, (viz.) the murder of the husband, slaying a learned Brâhmaṇa, and the destruction of the fruit of their womb.

8. A calf is pure when the milk flows, a bird when it causes fruit to fall, women during dalliance, and a dog when he catches a deer.

9. Pure is the mouth of a goat and of a horse, pure is the back of a cow, pure are the feet of a Brâhmaṇa, but women are pure in all (limbs).

11. (They are) the Aghamarshaṇa, the Devakṛita, the Śuddhavatîs, the Taratsamas, the Kûshmâṇḍas, the Pâvamânîs, and the Durgâsâvitrî;

12. The Atîshaṅgas, the Padastobhas, and the Sâmans (called) Vyâhṛiti, the Bhâruṇḍa Sâmans, the Gâyatra (Sâman), and the Raivata;

15. The three (Sâmans called) Âgyadohas, the Rathantara, the Agnervrata, the Vâmadevya, and the Bṛihat, being muttered, purify (all) living beings. (He who sings them) may obtain the recollection of former existences, if he desires it.

17. A cow, a horse, gold, (and) land, bestowed on an unlearned Brâhmaṇa who neglects his sacred duties, prevent the giver (from attaining heaven).

18–19. (If he presents), on the full moon of the month of Vaiśâkha, (to) seven or five Brâhmaṇas, black or white sesamum grains (mixed) with honey, (saying), 'May the king of justice (Yama) rejoice!' or (expressing) some other (wish) which he may have in his mind, the guilt which he has incurred during his (whole) life will instantly vanish.

20. But hear (now) the reward of the merit acquired by that man who gives the skin of a black antelope, to which the hoofs are (still) attached and the navel of which is adorned with gold, covering it with sesamum grains.

21. 'Without doubt he has bestowed (through that gift) the four-faced earth, together with its caves filled with gold, and together with its mountains, groves, and forests.'

22. 'He who, placing on the skin of a black antelope, sesamum, gold, honey, and butter, gives it to a Brâhmaṇa, overcomes all sin.'

CHAPTER XXIX.

1. Through liberality (man) obtains all his desires,

2. (Even) longevity, (and he is born again as) a student of the Veda, possessed of beauty.

3. He who abstains from injuring (sentient beings) obtains heaven.

4. By entering a fire the world of Brahman (is gained).

5. By (a vow of) silence (he obtains) happiness.

6. By staying (constantly) in water he becomes a lord of elephants.

7. He who expends his hoard (in gifts) becomes free from disease.

8. A giver of water (becomes) rich by (the fulfilment of) all his desires.

9. A giver of food (will have) beautiful eyes and a good memory.

10. He who gives a promise to protect (somebody) from all dangers (becomes) wise.

11. (To bestow gifts) for the use of cows (is equal to) bathing at all sacred places.

12. By giving a couch and a seat (the giver becomes) master of a harem.

13. By giving an umbrella (the giver) obtains a house.

XXIX. 4. This Sûtra, which recommends self-cremation, is of some importance, as it confirms the teaching of the Purâṇas and explains the accounts of the Greeks regarding the self-immolation of Brâhmaṇas who visited Europe.

17. 'He who gives to a Brâhmaṇa a vessel filled with water for sipping, will obtain after death complete freedom from thirst and be born again as a drinker of Soma.'

18. 'If a gift of one thousand oxen fit to draw a carriage (has been bestowed) according to the rule on a perfectly worthy man, that is equal to giving a maiden.'

CHAPTER XXX.

1. Practise righteousness, not unrighteousness; speak truth, not untruth; look far, not near; look towards the Highest, not towards that which is not the Highest.

2. A Brâhmaṇa is a fire.

3. For the Veda (says), 'Agni, forsooth, is a Brâhmaṇa.'

4. And how is that?

5. And it is also declared in the Kâṭhaka, 'On that (occasion) the body of the Brâhmaṇa who represents the sacrificial seat is the altar, the vow to perform the rite is the sacrifice, the soul is the animal to be slain, the intellect the rope (with which the animal is bound), the mouth of (the Brâhmaṇa) who represents the seat is the Âhavanîya fire, in his navel (is the Dakshiṇâ fire), the fire in his abdomen is the Gârhapatya fire, the Prâṇa is the Adhvaryu priest, the Apâna the Hotṛi priest, the Vyâna the Brahman, the Samâna the Udgâtṛi priest, the organs of sensation the sacrificial vessels. He who knowing this offers a sacrifice to the organs through the organs.' . . .

6. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'An offering placed in the mouth-fire of a Brâh-

7. 'But the offering made through the mouth of a Brâhma*n*a, which is neither spilt nor causes pain (to sentient creatures), nor assails him (who makes it), is far more excellent than an Agnihotra.'

8. After performing a mental sacrifice at which meditation (takes the place of the sacred) fire, truthfulness (the place of) the sacred fuel, patience (the place of) the oblation, modesty (the place of) the sacrificial spoon, abstention from injuring living beings (the place of the) sacrificial cake, contentment (the place of) the sacrificial post, (and a promise of) safety given to all beings which is hard to keep (the place of) the reward given to the priests, a wise man goes to his (eternal) home.

9. The hair of an aging man shows signs of age, (and) the teeth of an aging man show signs of age, (but) the desire to live and the desire for wealth do not decay even in an aging man.

7. Manu VII, 84; Yâ*gñ*avalkya I, 315. K*r*ish*n*apa*nd*ita's reading, nainam adhyâ*k*ate *k*a ya*h*, which occurs also in B., is nonsense. I read with Bh. nainamadhyâpate*kk*a yat, and take adhyâpatet, 'assails (the giver),' in the sense of 'troubles him by causing the performance of penances, on account of mistakes committed.' Manu's version, na vina*s*yati karhi*k*it, 'and never perishes,' is of course an easier one, but it seems to me doubtful whether it is older than Vasish*th*a's.

8. The passage, which is probably a quotation from an Upanishad, is very corrupt in the MSS. and K*r*ish*n*apa*nd*ita's text. I correct it as follows:

Dhyânâgni*h* satyopa*k*ayana*m* kshântyâhuti*h* sruva*m*hrî*h* puro*d*âsamahi*m*sâ sa*m*tosho yûpa*h* k*r*i*kkh*ra*m* bhûtebhyo 'bhayadâkshi*n*yam iti k*r*i*t*vâ kratum mânasa*m* yâti kshayam budha*h*.

But I am not confident that all the difficulties have been removed.

10. Happiness (is the portion) of that man who relinquishes (all) desire, which fools give up with difficulty, which does not diminish with age, and which is a life-long disease.

1. The sacred law is taught in each Veda.

2. We will explain (it) in accordance with that.

3. (The sacred law), taught in the Tradition (Smṛiti, stands) second.

4. The practice of the Śishṭas (stands) third.

5. Śishṭas, forsooth, (are those) who are free from envy, free from pride, contented with a store of grain sufficient for ten days, free from covetousness, and free from hypocrisy, arrogance, greed, perplexity, and anger.

6. '(Those are called) Śishṭas who, in accordance with the sacred law, have studied the Veda together

---

1. 1. Vasishṭha I, 4. Each Veda, i. e. each śâkhâ or redaction of the Veda.—Govinda.

3. Vasishṭha I, 4. Govinda takes smṛiti, 'the tradition,' in the sense of works (grantha) explaining the recollections of the Ṛishis, and is no doubt right in doing so.

4. Vasishṭha I, 5. The explanation of âgama by 'practice' rests on the authority of Govinda and the parallel passages where śîla and âchâra, 'conduct,' are used.

5. Âpastamba I, 7, 20, 8; Gautama XXVIII, 48. Kumbhîdhânya, translated according to Govinda by 'contented with a store of grain sufficient for ten days,' means, according to others, 'contented with a store of grain sufficient for six days or for a year.'

6. Vasishṭha VI, 43. Govinda omits the word 'iti,' given by the with its appendages, know how to draw inferences from that, (and) are able to adduce proofs perceptible by the senses from the revealed texts.'

7. On failure of them, an assembly consisting at least of ten members (shall decide disputed points of law).

8. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'Four men, who each know one of the four Vedas, a Mîmâṁsaka, one who knows the Aṅgas, one who recites (the works on) the sacred law, and three Brâhmaṇas belonging to (three different) orders, (constitute) an assembly consisting, at least, of ten members.'

9. 'There may be five, or there may be three, or there may be one blameless man, who decides (questions regarding) the sacred law. But a thousand fools (can)not (do it).'

10. 'As an elephant made of wood, as an antelope made of leather, such is an unlearned Brâhmaṇa: those three having nothing but the name (of their kind).'

MSS. after the verse, whereby it is marked as a quotation. 'The appendages,' i. e. the Itihâsas and Purâṇas.—Govinda.

8. Vasish*th*a III, 20. Govinda, quoting Gautama XXVIII, 49, says that Vânaprasthas cannot serve as members of Parishads, because they live in the forest. He also notices a different reading, not found in my MSS., 'Âśramasthâs trayo mukhyâḥ.' He asserts that thereby professed students are intended, because professed students are declared to be particularly holy in the Dharmaskandha-brâhmaṇa.

9. Vasish*th*a III, 7. Itare, translated by 'fools,' means literally, 'those different from the persons enumerated in the preceding verse.' Govinda remarks that according to Sûtra 12 one learned Brâhmaṇa must be taken only in cases of the most pressing necessity.

10. Vasish*th*a III, 11.

11. 'That sin which dunces, perplexed by ignorance and unacquainted with the sacred law, declare (to be duty), falls, increased a hundredfold, on those who propound it.'

12. 'Narrow and difficult to find is the path of the sacred law, towards which many gates lead. Hence, if there is a doubt, it must not be propounded by one man (only), however learned he may be.'

13. 'What Brâhmaṇas, riding in the chariot of the law (and) wielding the sword of the Veda, propound even in jest, that is declared to be the highest law.'

14. 'As wind and sun will make water, collected on a stone, disappear, even so the sin that (cleaves) to an offender completely vanishes like water.'

15. 'He who knows the sacred law shall fix the penances with discernment, taking into consideration the constitution, the strength, the knowledge, and the age (of the offender), as well as the time and the deed.'

11. Vasishṭha III, 6.

12. The 'gates' of the sacred law are the Vedas, the Smṛitis, and the practice of the Śishṭas. They are many, because the redactions of the Vedas and Smṛitis are numerous and the practices vary in different countries.

14. I. e. provided the offender performs the penance imposed by learned and virtuous Brâhmaṇas. Praṇâśayet, 'will make disappear,' is ungrammatical, as the subject stands in the dual. Grammatical accuracy has probably been sacrificed to the exigencies of the metre.

15. Vasishṭha XIX, 9. Śarîram, literally 'the body,' means here the constitution, which may be bilious, 'windy,' and so forth. Âyuḥ, literally 'life' or 'long life,' has been translated by 'knowledge,' in accordance with Govinda's explanation, gñânam. As the word vayaḥ, 'age,' also occurs in this verse, it is clear that âyuḥ cannot have its usual meaning.

16. 'Many thousands (of Brâhmaṇas) cannot form a (legal) assembly (for declaring the sacred law), if they have not fulfilled their sacred duties, are unacquainted with the Veda, and subsist only by the name of their caste.'

PRAṢNA I, ADHYÂYA 1, KAṆḌIKÂ 2.

1. There is a dispute regarding five (practices) both in the south and in the north.

2. We will explain those (peculiar) to the south.

3. They are, to eat in the company of an uninitiated person, to eat in the company of one's wife, to eat stale food, to marry the daughter of a maternal uncle or of a paternal aunt.

4. Now (the customs peculiar) to the north are, to deal in wool, to drink rum, to sell animals that have teeth in the upper and in the lower jaws, to follow the trade of arms, to go to sea.

16. Vasish*ṭh*a III, 5. The two copies of the commentary omit this Sûtra, though it is quoted in the explanation of Sûtra 9. The best MSS. repeat the last words of the Sûtra in order to show that the Ka*ṇḍ*ikâ ends here. The same practice is observed, though not quite regularly, in the sequel.

2. 1. The boundary between the north and south of India is, as Govinda also points out, the river Narmadâ.

3. Some of the customs mentioned here still prevail in parts of southern India. Thus the marriages between cousins occur among the De*z*astha and Karhâ*ḍ*â Brâhmaṇas of the Dekhan.

4. The first two customs mentioned still prevail in the north, especially in Ka*z*mîr, where Brâhmaṇas commonly deal in wool and woollen cloth. Spirituous liquor is not now drunk openly, but its use is sanctioned in the Ka*z*mîrian Nîlamata-purâṇa. Many Brâhmanical families in the north, especially in the North-western Provinces, subsist by enlisting as soldiers in the British and native armies.

5. He who follows (these practices) in any other country than where they prevail, commits sin.

6. For each (of these customs) the (rule of the) country should be (considered) the authority.

7. Gautama declares that that is false.

8. And one should not take heed of either (set of practices) because they are opposed to the tradition of the Śishṭas.

9. The country of the Âryas (Âryâvarta) lies to the east of the region where (the river Sarasvatî) disappears, to the west of the Black-forest (Kâlakavana), to the north of the Pâripâtra (mountains), to the south of the Himâlaya. The rule of conduct which (prevails) there, is authoritative.

10. Some (declare) the country between the (rivers) Yamunâ and Ganges (to be the Âryâvarta).

11. Now the Bhâllavins quote also the (following) verse:

12. 'In the west the boundary-river, in the east the region where the sun rises,—as far as the black antelopes wander (between these two limits), so far spiritual pre-eminence (is found).'

5–6. A similar argument is given by the Kaśmîrians for the lawfulness of the consumption of meat, which they justify by a deśaguṇa or 'virtue of their country.'

7. Gautama XI, 20.

9. Vasiṣṭha I, 8, 10. Many MSS., and among them the Telugu copy of the commentary, read Pâriyâtra instead of Pâripâtra, which latter I consider to be the correct form of the word.

10. Vasiṣṭha I, 12.

11. Vasiṣṭha I, 14. Govinda remarks that the Bhâllavins are a school studying the Sâma-veda. See also Max Müller, Hist. Anc. Sansk. Lit., pp. 193, 364.

12. Vasiṣṭha I, 15. There is a great uncertainty in the MSS. about the word following sindhuḥ. I have adopted the reading of

13. The inhabitants of Avantî, of Aṅga, of Magadha, of Surâshṭra, of the Dekhan, of Upâvṛit, of Sindh, and the Sauvîrâs are of mixed origin.

14. He who has visited the (countries of the) Âraṭṭas, Kâraskaras, Puṇḍras, Sauvîras, Vaṅgas, Kaliṅgas, (or) Prânûnas shall offer a Punastoma or a Sarvapṛishṭhâ (ishṭi).

15. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'He commits sin through his feet, who travels to the (country of the) Kaliṅgas. The sages declare the Vaiśvânarî ishṭi to be a purification for him.'

M., sindhur vidharaṇî, 'the boundary-river,' which occurs also in the parallel passage of Vasishṭha. The Dekhan and Guǵarât MSS. read vikaraṇî or vikaraṇâ, and the two copies of the commentary visaraṇî. The sense of these various readings appears to be 'the river that vanishes or looses itself,' i. e. the Sarasvatî.

13. This and the following two Sûtras are intended to show that the customs prevailing in the countries named have no authority and must not be followed. Avanti corresponds to western Mâlvâ, Aṅga to western Bengal, Magadha to Bihâr, and Surâshṭra to southern Kâṭhiâvâd. The Sauvîras, who are always associated with the Sindhians, probably dwelt in the south-west of the Pañǵâb, near Multân. The Upâvṛits probably are the same as the Upâvṛittas mentioned Mahâbhârata VI, 49. But I am unable to determine their seats.

14. The Âraṭṭas dwelt in the Pañǵâb (Lassen, Ind. Alth. I, p. 973, sec. ed.), and are greatly blamed, Mahâbhârata VIII, 44, 36 seq. The Kâraskaras are named in the same chapter of the Mahâbhârata as a degraded tribe, but seem to belong to the south of India. The Kaliṅgas are the inhabitants of the eastern coast of India, between Orissa and the mouth of the Kṛishṇâ river. The Puṇḍras, who are mentioned as a degraded tribe in the Aitareya-brâhmaṇa VII, 18, and occur frequently in the Mahâbhârata, and the Vaṅgas belong to Bengal (see Lassen, Ind. Alth. I, 669, sec. ed.; Cunningham, Anc. Geog. p. 480). Regarding the Punastoma, see Gautama XIX, 7 note; and regarding the Sarvapṛishṭhâ ishṭi, Taittirîya-saṃhitâ II, 3, 7, 1–2.

3. Or at the least one year for each Kâṇḍa,

17. Vasishṭha XXII, 10. The meaning is that in each of the three seasons of the year, Grîshma, Varsha, Hemanta, one of the three sacrifices is to be offered.

3. 1. Âpastamba I, 1, 2, 12. Govindasvâmin gives four explanations of the adjective paurâṇam, 'kept by the ancients,' viz. 1. old, i. e. kept by the men of the Kṛita or Golden age; 2. revealed to and kept by the ancients, such as Manu; 3. found in the ancient, i. e. eternal Veda; 4. found in the known Itihâsas and Purâṇas.

found in the Baudhâyana Gṛihya-sûtra II, 7, where the various kinds of trees from which the staff may be taken are specified. The Sûtra shows that the Gṛihya-sûtra preceded the Dharma-sûtra in the collection.

16. The text of this Sûtra is corrupt. I read, 'bhavatpurvâm bhikshâmadhyâm yâkñântâm karet saptâksharâm bhikshâm kshâm ka him ka na vardhayet.' The various readings of the MSS. are, bhikshâm madhyâm yakkhâmtâm karet saptâksharâm bhim ka na vardhayet, C. T.;—yâkñâmtâm karet saptâksharamni kshâm ka bhim ka narvyayet, D.;—yâkñâmtâm karet saptâksharâmstim rkshâ ba him na vardhayet, K.;—yâkñâmtâm tikshâm karet saptâksharân kshâm ka him ka na vardhayan, M.;—yâkanâskâmtâm karet saptâksharân bhikshâm ka him ka na vardhayet, C. I. The most serious corruption lies in the syllables following saptâksharâm, and I am not certain that my emendation bhikshâm is correct. The commentary on the first half of the Sûtra runs as follows: bhikshâmantram vyaktam evokkaret bhavakkhabdapûrvâm bhikshâsabdamadhyâm yâkñâpratipa[pâ]dakasabdâmtâm sabdâksharâm [saptâksharâm] ka evam hi bhavati bhikshâm dehi sampanno bhavati, 'let him pronounce distinctly the formula employed in begging, beginning with the word bhavat, having the word bhikshâ in the middle, and ending with the word conveying the sense of giving, and containing seven syllables. For thus (the formula), "Lady, give alms," becomes complete.' It is curious that Govinda says nothing about the form saptâksharâm and the feminine terminations of the other adjectives, which do not agree with mantram, a masculine.

17. Vasishtha XI, 68–70; Gautama II, 35. Govinda thinks that a student should, if possible, beg from people of his own caste. Three castes only are intended by the term 'from all castes.' But see Âpastamba I, 1, 3, 25; Gautama VII, 1 seqq.

19. Let him daily fetch fuel out of the forest and offer (it in the sacred fire).

20. (A student shall be) truthful, modest, and devoid of pride.

21. He shall rise before (his teacher in the morning) and go to rest after (him in the evening).

22. He shall never disobey the words of his teacher except (when he is ordered to commit) a crime causing loss of caste.

23. Let him converse with women so much (only) as his purpose requires.

24. Let him avoid dancing, singing, playing musical instruments, the use of perfumes, garlands, shoes, (or) a parasol, applying collyrium (to his eyes), and anointing (his body).

occur. The commentary omits the remainder of the Sûtra, which all my MSS. give here, and inserts it below, after Sûtra 29.

27. Âpastamba I, 2, 5, 12; Vasish*th*a XIII, 44. Regarding the phrase, 'in order to compose his internal organ,' see Manu II, 120.

28. Âpastamba I, 2, 5, 22. The meaning seems to be that the pupil is first to stroke his teacher's legs from the knee downwards, and then to take hold of it at the ankle.

31. Âpastamba I, 4, 14, 22. 'On similar occasions,' i.e. when he himself is engaged in the worship of the manes, of the gods, or of the fire, or when his teacher is occupied in that way.

33. The salutation which is meant, is probably the embrace of the feet; see also Gautama II, 32. Govinda thinks that the words samavâye 'tyantya*sah*, 'standing too close,' must be understood.

34. To sit together with (these persons) in a boat, on a rock, on a plank, on an elephant, on the roof of a house, on a mat, or in wheeled vehicles is permissible.

35. (The pupil) must assist his teacher in making his toilet, shampoo him, attend him while bathing, eat his leavings, and so forth.

36. (But he) should avoid the remnants of food left by his (teacher's) son, though he may know the Veda together with the Aṅgas,

37. And to assist at the toilet of, to shampoo, to attend in the bath, and to eat the remnants of food left by a young wife of his (teacher).

38. Let him run after (his teacher) when he runs, walk after him when he walks, attend him standing when he stands.

39. Let him not sport in the water while bathing.

40. Let him swim (motionless) like a stick.

41. To study under a non-Brâhmanical teacher (is permitted) in times of distress.

34. Govinda adds that to sit with young wives of his teachers on other occasions is sinful.

35. I read utsâdana, 'to shampoo,' while the MSS. have either a lacuna or read u*kkh*âdana, and the commentary â*kkh*âdana, which is explained by *kh*attradhâra*ṇa*, 'to hold a parasol,' or malâpakarsha*ṇa*, 'to clean.' The *kkh*a is, however, merely owing to a very common faulty pronunciation of tsa. Govinda remarks correctly that the word 'iti,' which follows the enumeration of the services to be performed by the pupil, has the force of 'and so forth.'

36–37. The meaning of the two Sûtras is that the pupil shall serve the son of his teacher, especially if he is learned, and aged wives of his teacher, but not eat their leavings. The explanation of anû*kh*âna, 'who knows the Aṅgas,' is given by Baudhâyana, Gṛ*h*ya-sûtra I, 11, 4.

42. (The pupil shall) obey and walk after him as long as the instruction (lasts).

43. (According to some this is improper, because) just that (mutual relation) sanctifies both of them.

44. And (the behaviour) towards brothers, sons, and (other) pupils (of the teacher shall be regulated) in the same manner.

45. But officiating priests, a father-in-law, paternal and maternal uncles who are younger than (oneself must be honoured by) rising and (by being) addressed.

45. Instead of pratyutthâyâbhibhâshaṇam, '(shall be honoured by) rising and being addressed,' which is the reading of the two copies of the commentary and of M., the MSS. from the Dekhan and Gu*g*arât read, pratyutthâyâbhivâdanam. The latter reading might be translated by 'shall be saluted by rising;' see Gautama VI, 9. Govinda says, in explanation of this rule: 'This restrictive rule also (refers) to teachers only, officiating priests, and the rest; to address (means) to use words such as "welcome."'

46. 'Kâtya, i. e. a descendant of the *Ri*shi Kata. He was of opinion that officiating priests and the rest must return the salute. As the return of a salute is prescribed for them, it is understood that the other (party) must salute.'—Govinda.

5. 'Therefore a student who passes a night without offering a piece of sacred fuel, cuts it off from the length of his life. Therefore let the student offer a piece of sacred fuel, lest he spend a night, shortening his life.'

6. 'A long sacrificial session begins he who commences his studentship. That (night) in which, after being initiated, he (first) offers a piece of sacred fuel corresponds to the Prâyaṇîya (Âtirâtra of a sacrificial session); that night in which (he offers it last), intending to take the final bath, corresponds to the Udayanîya (Âtirâtra). interpolations and corruptions. The minor discrepancies are, 'brâhmaṇo vai brahmakaryam upayan' (upayakkhan, C. I. and T.); padâtmanyeva katurthaḥ pâdaḥ; yadagnaye samidham âdadhâti; atha yad âtmânam daridrîkṛityâhrîr bhûtvâ bhikshate brahmakaryam karati; atha yad âkâryavakaḥ karoti ya evâsyâkârye. In the second passage the Dekhan MSS. read, however, like the printed text. The interpolations are, 'Now when he recites the Veda,' &c., and the verse, 'He commits sin if he neglects,' &c. The former passage entirely destroys the sense of the whole and the connexion of the parts. Both have, however, been retained, as they occur in all the MSS. and the two copies of the commentary, and have been enclosed in brackets. The corrupt passage is so bad that it makes no sense at all. The best MSS. read as follows: 'api hi vai snâtvâ bhikshâm karatyavigñânanâśanâyayâ pitṛiṇâmanyabhyaḥ kriyâbhyaḥ' sa yadanyâm, &c., D.; 'api ha vai snâtvâ bhishṭâm karasapi gñâni nâśanâya yâ [vâ sec. m.] pitṛiṇâm anyâbhyaḥ kriyâbhyaḥ,' K.; api ha vai snâtvâ bhikshâñ karati—pagñâtî—nâm śanâyâpi pitṛiṇâm anyâbhyaḥ kriyâśas, M.; api ha vai snâtvâ bhikshâm karatyavigñâtînâmaśanayâpi pitṛiṇâm anyâbhya kriyâbhyaḥ, C. I. As it is by no means certain that Baudhâyana's reading agreed with that of the printed text, I have left the passage out.

orders, it may happen, as the commentator observes, that the Snâtaka's marriage cannot take place immediately. The correctness of this view is proved by Âpastamba I, 2, 8, and by the fact that below, II, 3, 5, the rules for a married Snâtaka are given separately.

6. If his waterpot has been broken, let him offer one hundred (oblations) reciting the Vyâhṛitis, or mutter (the Vyâhṛitis as often).

7. (Reciting the text), 'Earth went to earth, the mother joined the mother; may we have sons and cattle; may he who hates us be destroyed,' he shall collect the fragments, throw them into water, repeat the Gâyatrî at least ten times and take again another (pot).

8. Taking refuge with Varuṇa, (he shall recite the mantra), 'That (belongs) to thee, Varuṇa; again to me, Om,' (and) meditate on the indestructible.

5. Vasishṭha III, 59.

6. Regarding the Vyâhṛitis, see Gautama I, 51.

7. Govinda says that Vâmadeva is the Ṛishi of the mantra. The fragments of the pot are to be thrown into a river or tank, in order to preserve them from defilement. See also Journ. Bo. Br. Roy. As. Soc., No. XXXIV A, p. 55 note.

8. 'Taking refuge with Varuṇa, i. e. saying, "I flee for safety to Varuṇa." (The words), "That for thee, Varuṇa, again to me, Om," (are) the mantras (to be recited) on taking (a new vessel). Its meaning is this: "Those fragments which I have thrown into the water shall belong to thee, Varuṇa." (Saying), "Come, thou (who art) a lord of water-vessels, again to me, Om," he shall meditate on another visible pot as indestructible, i. e. at the end of the Vedic (word) "Om," let him meditate, (i. e.) recollect, that not everything will be turned topsy-turvy, (but that some things are) also indestructible, i. e. that that is not destroyed, does not perish.'—Govinda. The explanation of the last clause of our Sûtra seems to be that, on pronouncing the syllable (akshara) Om, the reciter is

9. 'If he has received (the new vessel) from a Śûdra, let him recite (the Gâyatrî) one hundred (times). (If he has received it) from a Vaiśya, fifty (repetitions of the Gâyatrî) are prescribed, but (on receiving it) from a Kshatriya twenty-five, (and on taking it) from a Brâhmaṇa ten.'

10. Those who recite the Veda are doubtful whether he shall fetch water after the sun has set or shall not fetch it.

14. It is declared (in the Veda), 'When he has washed his hands and feet with water from his water-vessel, he is impure for others, as long as the moisture (remains). He purifies himself only. Let him not perform other religious rites (with water from his pot).'

to recollect the etymological import of the word akshara, 'indestructible,' and thus to guard the new vessel against the mishap which befell the old one.

9. According to Govinda, either the praṇava, the syllable Om, or the Gâyatrî are the mantras to be recited, and the recitation is a penance to be performed when the vessel is received. The MSS. of the text mark the verse as a quotation by adding the word 'iti,' which the commentary omits.

13. According to Govinda, a Brâhmaṇa who goes to fetch water at night, which he may want for personal purification, is ordered to restrain his breath, because thereby the air in the body becomes strong, and fire or heat (agni) is produced. Now as at night the sun is stated to enter the fire and to become subject to it, a Brâhmaṇa, who by restraining his breath has produced fire, has secured the presence of the sun, when he goes to fetch water.

14. Govinda expressly states that the word vigñâyate, 'it is declared,'

15. Baudhâyana (says), 'Or if on the occasion of each personal purification (he washes himself with other water) up to the wrist, (he will become) pure.'

literally, 'it is distinctly known,' always indicates that the passage quoted is taken from the Veda. The rites for which water from the waterpot is not to be used, are libations to the manes, the gods, and the fire. See also below, I, 4, 7, 5.

15. The words enclosed between parentheses are Govinda's.

7. 1. The division of this chapter into two sections occurs in the M. manuscript only. The Dekhan MSS., which give the division into Kandikâs, do not note it, and have at the end of the Praśna the figure 20, while M. has 21 and in words ekaviṁśatiḥ after the enumeration of the Pratîkas.

2. 'A wise man must not corrupt his mind,' i. e. must not doubt or adopt erroneous views regarding the teaching of the Śâstras with respect to the waterpot. It seems to me that this passage indicates the existence of an opposition to the constant carrying of the waterpot in Baudhâyana's times. This is so much more probable, as the custom is now obsolete, and is mentioned in some Purâṇas and versified Smṛitis as one of the practices forbidden in the Kali age; see e.g. the general note appended to Sir W. Jones' translation of Manu.

(Brahman) came into existence with a water-vessel. Therefore let him perform (his rites) with a water-vessel.

3. Let him hold it in his right hand when he voids urine and excrements, in the left when he sips water. That is (a) settled (rule) for all good men.

4. For as the sacrificial cup (*k*amasa) is declared to be pure on account of its contact with the Soma-juice, even so the water-vessel is constantly pure through its contact with water.

5. Therefore let him avoid (to use) it for the worship of the manes, the gods, and the fire.

6. Therefore let him not go on a journey without a waterpot, nor to the boundary of the village, nor from one house to the other.

7. Some (declare that he must not go without it) a step further than the length of an arrow.

8. Baudhâyana (says that he shall not go without it) if he wishes to fulfil his duties constantly.

9. (The divine) Word declares that (this is confirmed) by a *Ri*k-shaped (passage).

PRASNA I, ADHYÂYA 5, KANDIKÂ 8.

1. Now (follows the description of) the means of purification.

5. According to Govinda the word 'therefore' refers back to Sûtra I, 4, 6, 14.

9. '*Ri*gvidham, "a *Ri*k-shaped (passage)," means *Ri*gvidhânam, "a prescription consisting of a *Ri*k." The Brâhma*n*a is indicated by (the word) vâk, ("the goddess of) speech." The meaning is, "The Brâhma*n*a says that there is also a *Ri*k-verse to this effect. That is as follows, tasyaishâ bhavati yat te *s*ilpam ityâdi' (Taittirîya-Âra*n*yaka I, 7, 1).—Govinda.

2. The body is purified by water, the understanding by knowledge, the soul by abstention from injuring living beings, the internal organ by truth.

3. Purifying the internal organ (is called) internal purification.

4. We will explain (the rules of) external purification.

5. The sacrificial thread (shall be made) of Kuśa grass, or cotton, (and consist) of thrice three strings.

6. (It shall hang down) to the navel.

7. (In putting it on) he shall raise the right arm, lower the left, and lower the head.

8. The contrary (is done at sacrifices) to the manes.

9. (If the thread is) suspended round the neck, (it is called) nivîta.

10. (If it is) suspended below (the navel, it is called) adhopavîta.

11. Let him perform (the rite of personal) purification, facing the east or the north, (and) seated in a pure place; (let him) place his right arm between his knees and wash both hands up to the wrist and both feet (up to the ankles).

12. Let him not use for sipping the remainder of the water with which he has washed his feet.

13. But if he uses (that) for sipping, let him do it, after pouring (a portion of it) on the ground.

8. 2. Vasish*th*a III, 60. 7–9. Manu II, 63.

11. Vasish*th*a III, 26. Govinda points out that the word *śau-k*am, '(rite of) purification,' has here the meaning of â*k*amanam, 'sipping water.' He thinks that the *k*a, 'and,' which stands after pâdau, 'both feet,' indicates that other portions of the body which have been defiled must be washed also.

14. He shall sip out of the Tîrtha sacred to Brahman.

15. The part (of the hand) at the root of the thumb (is called) the Tîrtha sacred to Brahman.

16. The part above the thumb (is called the Tîrtha) sacred to the manes, the part at the tips of the fingers that sacred to the gods, the part at the root of the fingers that sacred to the *Ṛ*ishis.

17. (Let him not use for sipping water that has trickled) from the fingers, nor (water) that is covered with bubbles or foam, nor (water that is) hot, or alkaline, or salt, or muddy, or discoloured, or has a bad smell or taste.

18. (Let him not sip water) laughing, nor talking, nor standing, nor looking about, nor bending his head or his body forward, nor while the lock on his crown is untied, nor while his throat is wrapped up, nor while his head is covered, nor when he is in a hurry, nor without wearing the sacrificial thread, nor stretching his feet out, nor while his loins are girt (with a cloth), nor without holding his right arm between his knees, nor making a sound.

19. Let him thrice drink water that reaches his heart.

20. Let him wipe (his lips) thrice.

21. Some (declare that he shall do it) twice.

14. Vasish*ṭh*a III, 26.

16. Vish*ṇ*u LXII, 3–4. All the MSS. except M. place the Tîrtha sacred to the gods at the root of the fingers, and that sacred to the *Ṛ*ishis at the tips of the fingers, and Govinda has the same erroneous reading.

24. 'If (drops) adhere to his teeth, (they must be considered pure) like the teeth, because they are fixed (in the mouth) like the teeth. Let him not sip water on their account in case they fall. If they flow out, he will be pure.'

25. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'If anything adheres to the teeth, (it is pure) like the teeth; and if he swallows (it or) whatever else may be in the mouth (or) may remain after sipping water, (he will become) pure.'

26. (After sipping) he shall touch the cavities (of the head) with water, the feet, the navel, the head, (and) lastly the left hand.

27. If he becomes impure while holding (a vessel) made of metal, he shall put it down, sip water and sprinkle it, when he is going to take it up.

30. '(The word) amatram, literally "a vessel," denotes here an earthen vessel. The meaning is that such a one, if it is very much defiled, shall only be put down and not be taken back. Any other (earthen vessel) shall be heated.'—Govinda.

34–35. Vasish*th*a III, 49. 36. Vasish*th*a III, 53.

37. Vasish*th*a III, 54. Govinda thinks that the word ra*gg*u, 'a rope,' is used here in the sense of 'a conglomeration,' and merely indicates that a quantity of cowhair must be used.

39. Manu V, 120. 41. Vasish*th*a III, 55.

42. Cotton cloth with earth,

47. Or (they may be cleaned) with milk.

48. (Objects) which have been defiled by urine, ordure, blood, semen, or a dead body, (but) are agreeable to the eye and the nose, shall be rubbed seven times with one of the substances mentioned above.

49. (Objects) not made of metal which are in the same condition must be thrown away.

50. The cups and vessels (used) at a sacrifice (must be cleaned) according to the injunction (of the Veda).

51. The Veda (declares), 'They do not become impure through Soma.'

52. 'Time, fire, purity of mind, water and the like (fluids), smearing with cowdung and ignorance (of defilement) are declared to be the sixfold (means of) purification for created beings.'

53. Now they quote also (the following verse):

42. Vasish*th*a III, 49. 43. Vasish*th*a III, 53.
44. Vasish*th*a III, 50. 45. Vasish*th*a III, 52.
46. Vasish*th*a III, 51. 49. Vasish*th*a III, 59.

50. Govinda explains this Sûtra differently. He says: 'The fault of defilement by remnants does not affect sacrificial cups and vessels. This must be understood. If they are defiled by urine and the like, they must be thrown away.' My explanation is based on the parallel passage of Âpastamba I, 5, 17, 13. See also below, I, 6, 13, 11 seq.

52. Vish*n*u XXII, 88.

'A clever man, who knows (the rules of) purification and is desirous of righteousness, shall perform (the rites of) purification, after having fully considered the time, and the place (of the defilement), likewise himself, (as well as) the object (to be cleaned) and the substance (to be employed), the purpose of the object, the cause (of the defilement), and the condition (of the thing or person defiled).'

PRAŚNA I, ADHYÂYA 5, KANDIKÂ 9.

1. The Veda declares that the hand of an artisan is always pure, so is every vendible commodity exposed for sale and food obtained by begging, which a student holds in his hand.

2. A calf is pure on the flowing (of the milk), a bird on the fall of the fruit, women at the time of dalliance, and a dog when he catches a deer.

3. All mines and places of manufacture are pure excepting distilleries of spirituous liquor; continuously flowing streams of water and dust raised by the wind cannot be contaminated.

4. The flowers and fruit of flowering and fruit-bearing trees which grow in unclean places are likewise not impure.

9. 1. Vishṇu XXIII, 48.

2. Vishṇu XXIII, 49.

3. Vishṇu XXIII, 48. The term âkara, translated by 'mines and places of manufacture,' is explained in the commentary by 'places of production, i. e. of sugar and honey.' It is no doubt intended to apply to any place where articles of consumption or use are produced. Govinda adds that as 'continuous streams of water' are always pure, one must take care that the water for sipping flows out of the vessel in an unbroken stream.

5. On touching a tree standing on a sacred spot, a funeral pile, a sacrificial post, a *Kaṇḍ*âla or a person who sells the Veda, a Brâhma*ṇ*a shall bathe dressed in his clothes.

6. One's own couch, seat, clothes, wife, child, and waterpot are pure for oneself; but for strangers they are impure.

7. A seat, a couch, a vehicle, ships (and boats), the road and grass are purified by the wind, if they have been touched by *Kaṇḍ*âlas or outcasts.

8. Grain on the threshing-floor, water in wells and reservoirs, and milk in the cowpen are fit for use even (if they come) from a person whose food must not be eaten.

9. The gods created for Brâhma*ṇ*as three means of purification, (viz.) ignorance of defilement, sprinkling with water, and commending by word of mouth.

10. Water collected on the ground with which

5. Vasish*ṭh*a IV, 37. *K*aityav*ṛ*iksha, 'a tree standing on sacred ground,' means literally, 'a memorial-tree.'

7. Govinda points out that couches and seats and the like, on which *Kaṇḍ*âlas and outcasts have lain or sat down, must be purified.

8. 'That must be referred to grain on a threshing-floor, and so forth, which has been produced by men whose food must not be eaten, and again is considered to be common to all. In this case, too, what has been received from outcasts and *Kaṇḍ*âlas, that is defiled. Milk which has been received just at milking-time may be drunk out of a vessel that stands in the cowpen.'—Govinda. As regards the grain produced by low-caste people, the rule probably refers to cases where the land of an Agrahâra or other village is cultivated by men of the lowest castes. The author means to say that in such cases a Brâhma*ṇ*a may take his share from the threshing-floor, where the whole produce of the village-land is stored, without hesitation.

cows slake their thirst is a means of purification, provided it is not strongly mixed with unclean (substances), nor has a (bad) smell, nor is discoloured, nor has a (bad) taste.

11. But land becomes pure, according to the degree of the defilement, by sweeping the (defiled) spot, by sprinkling it with water, by smearing it with cowdung, by scattering (pure earth) on it, or by scraping it.

12. Now they quote also (the following verse):

PRAŚNA I, ADHYÂYA 5, KANDIKÂ 10.

1. 'A drop of water which is allowed to fall (on the ground) purifies a bull's hide of land, whether (the land) has been (previously) swept or not, provided no impure substance is visible on it.'

2. Food which is cooked out of sight must be illuminated (with fire) and be sprinkled with water,

3. Likewise eatables bought in the market.

4. For the Veda (declares), 'For the gods who are (easily) disgusted and desirous of purity do not

2. Âpastamba II, 2, 3, 9. 'Out of sight,' i. e. not before the eyes of him who eats it.'—Govinda. It would, however, seem that this rule refers to food prepared by Śûdras, without the supervisions of Âryans. For Âpastamba's Sûtra, which contains the same word, paroksham, 'out of sight,' certainly has reference to that case only, and there is no reason why food prepared by Brahman cooks should be purified before it is eaten.

3. Âpastamba I, 5, 17, 19. The eatables here intended are, according to Govinda, Lâ*d*us and other sweet-meats which are frequently bought ready made.

enjoy the offerings made by a man destitute of faith.'

5. After reflecting (for a long time on the respective value of) the (food) of a pure man destitute of faith and of an impure person who has faith, the gods declared both to be equal. But the Lord of created beings said to them, 'That is not equal, it is unequal. The food of a man destitute of faith is worthless, that which is purified by faith is preferable.'

6. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'Want of faith is the greatest sin; for faith is the highest austerity. Therefore the gods do not eat offerings given without faith.'

7. 'A foolish man does not reach heaven, though he may offer (sacrifices) or give (gifts).'

8. 'He is called a foolish man whose conduct is blemished by doubts, and who, clinging to his own fancies, transgresses (the rules of) the Śâstras, because he opposes the fulfilment of the sacred law.'

9. But pot-herbs, flowers, fruit, roots, and annual plants (must be) sprinkled (with water).

10. Having placed dry grass, wood of trees unfit for sacrifices or a clod of earth (on the ground), let him void faeces or urine, turning his face during the day towards the north and at night towards the south and wrapping up his head.

8. Dharmatantra, translated 'the fulfilment of the sacred law,' is explained in the commentary by dharmasya tantram anushṭhânam, by 'the performance of the sacred duties.' It may also mean 'the doctrine of or the treatises on the sacred law.' The Śâstras are the Vedas and the whole body of the sacred literature.

16. He shall wash himself, after he has untied or put on the cloth round his loins,

17. Or he may touch moist grass, cowdung, or earth.

18. While he is engaged in (the performance of) religious rites, he shall avoid to touch (the part of his body) below the navel.

21. A Vaisya may live by usury.

22. But (a sum of) twenty-five (kârshâpaṇas shall bear an interest) of five mâshas (per mensem).

23. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'He who, acquiring property cheap, employs (it so that it yields) a higher price, is called a usurer, and blamed in all (treatises on) the sacred law.' '(Brahman) weighed in the scales the crime of killing a learned Brâhmaṇa against (the crime of) usury; the slayer of the Brâhmaṇa remained at the top, the usurer sank downwards.'

24. 'Let him treat Brâhmaṇas who tend cattle, those who live by trade, (and) those who are artisans, actors (and bards), servants or usurers, like Śûdras.'

25. But men of the first two castes may, at their pleasure, lend (money at interest) to one who neglects his sacred duties, to a miser, to an atheist, or to a very wicked man.

26. Through the neglect of sacrifices, of (lawful) marriages, of the study of the Veda, and of (learned) Brâhmaṇas, (noble) families (even) are degraded.

with the Veda. For (in offering sacrifices) one does not pass by a brilliant fire and throw the oblations into ashes.

28. Families which are deficient in (the knowledge of) the Veda, are degraded by (keeping) cows, horses and vehicles, by agriculture and by serving the king.

29. But even poor families which are rich in (the knowledge of) the Veda obtain rank among the (noble) families and gain great fame.

30. The (study of) the Veda impedes (the pursuit of) agriculture, (the pursuit of) agriculture impedes (the study of) the Veda. He who is able (to do it), may attend to both; but he who is unable (to attend to both), shall give up agriculture.

31. A fat, bellowing, raging humped bull, who does not restrain himself, who hurts living creatures and speaks according to his pleasure, forsooth, does not reach the (abode of) the gods; (but) those who are small like atoms, (being) emaciated (by austerities and fasts), go thither.

32. If, erring, in his youth he commits at any time good or evil acts of any kind, (they will all remain without result). (For) if in his later age he lives righteously, he will obtain (the reward of) that (virtuous conduct) alone, not (the punishments of his former) crimes.

of the people. Women are considered to have no business with the sacred texts.

8. 'The relatives of unmarried women become pure after three days. But the uterine brothers become pure by (following) the rule mentioned before.'

9. Moreover, the great-grandfather, the grandfather, the father, oneself, the uterine brothers, the son by a wife of equal caste, the grandson, (and) the great-grandson—these they call Sapi*nd*as, but not the (great-grandson's) son;—and amongst these a son and a son's son (together with their father are) sharers of an undivided oblation.

10. The sharers of divided oblations they call Sakulyas.

8. This verse, which occurs in all my MSS. of the text, is left out in the two copies of Govinda's commentary.

9. Colebrooke, Dâyabhâga XI, 1, 37; V. Digest CCCXCVII. The text on which Colebrooke's two versions are based differs from that of my MSS. and of Govinda by reading avibhaktadâyâdân instead of teshâ*m ka* putrapautram [v. l. °pautrakam] avibhaktadâyam. The meaning of the latter clause, which is placed parenthetically before sapi*nd*ân â*k*akshate, '(these) they call Sapi*nd*as,' seems to be that a father with his son and grandson share the cakes offered at one funeral sacrifice by the fourth descendant. Its object is to show that the group called Sapi*nd*as consists of two such subdivisions, between whom the middlemost forms the connecting link. For the middlemost, the svayam, 'oneself,' of the text, first offers the cakes to his three ancestors and later receives the cakes, together with his first two descendants, from his great-grandson. Govinda gives no help. He merely remarks that the Sûtra contains a paribhâshâ or technical rule of interpretation, and that the words api ka, 'moreover,' indicate that it is an expansion of Sûtra 2.

10. Colebrooke, loc. cit. According to *G*îmûtavâhana the Sakulyas are the three ascendants beyond the great-grandfather and the three descendants beyond the great-grandson. Others, among

Hence the Sapi*nd*as are also Sakulyas.'

11. Colebrooke, loc. cit. Both the Dâyabhâga and the Digest read satsvanga*g*eshu, 'when there is male issue,' and the Vîramitrodaya, fol. 218, p. 2, l. 7, agrees with them. The MSS. read all satsv anyeshu, which may, however, be taken with Govinda for asatsv anyeshu, because the preceding word ends in e. Govinda explains anyeshu, 'others,' by aurasâdishu, 'legitimate sons of the body, and so forth.'

12. Colebrooke, Dâyabhâga, loc. cit. The digest omits this Sûtra.

13. Colebrooke, loc. cit. *G*îmûtavâhana wrongly reads pitâ *k*âkâryа*h*, 'the father and the teacher.' Govinda gives the explanation adopted above. Regarding the spiritual fatherhood of the teacher, see e. g. Vasish*th*a II, 4.

14. Colebrooke, loc. cit. Govinda reads satsvam, 'the property of a holy man,' instead of tatsvam, 'that property.'

15. Colebrooke V, Dig. CCCCXLIV; Vasish*th*a XVII, 86.

takes it), together with sons and grandsons; poison kills one man only. (Therefore) they do not declare poison to be (the worst) poison. The property of a Brâhmaṇa is called (the worst) poison.'

17. If a birth and a death occur together, one and the same period of ten (days and) nights (shall serve for both).

18. Now if (other deaths or births) happen before the completion of the ten (days and) nights (of impurity), the first period of ten (days and) nights (shall suffice, provided the new cause of impurity occurs) before the end of the ninth day.

19. On a birth, indeed, the parents (alone) become impure during ten days.

20. Some (declare that) the mother (alone becomes impure), because (people) avoid (lying-in women alone).

21. Others (say that) the father (alone becomes impure) because the semen is the chief cause (of the generation).

22. For sons who were born without mothers, are mentioned in the revealed texts.

23. But (the correct opinion is that) both the parents (become impure) because they are equally connected (with the event).

---

18. Vasiṣṭha IV, 23–25. Govinda points out that in case the second birth or death happens after the completion of the ninth day, the rule given (Gautama XIV, 7) applies.

19. Vasiṣṭha IV, 20–21.

20. Vasiṣṭha IV, 21–22. Tatpariharaṇât, literally, 'because she is avoided, i. e. because people avoid newly-confined women (not their husbands).'—Govinda.

21. E. g. Agastya and Vasiṣṭha. See Rig-veda VII, 33, 11, and Sâyaṇa's commentary thereon.

24. But when a death (has happened, the relatives of the deceased), allowing the youngest to begin, shall pass their sacrificial threads over the right shoulder and under the left arm, descend into the water at a bathing-place, submerge (their bodies), emerge (out of the water), ascend the bank, sip water, pour out libations for the (deceased, repeating the last four acts) severally three times thereafter, ascend the bank, sip water, touch a coal, water or the like at the door of their house, and sit during ten days on mats, eating food that does not contain pungent condiments or salt.

25. (Let him perform) a funeral sacrifice on the eleventh or the twelfth (day).

26. In (performing) the remaining rites (one should) conform to (the customs of) the people.

27. In case of a (death) let him also keep (a period of impurity) for (persons who are) not (his) Sapi*nd*as, according to the degree of nearness, three (days and) nights, a day and a night, one day and so forth,

---

24. Vasish*th*a IV, 9–15. When the libations of water are poured out, the name of the deceased must be pronounced. Govinda correctly states that iti, 'or the like,' which stands after 'a coal, water,' is intended to include 'cowdung, and yellow mustard seed,' which are mentioned by Yâgñavalkya III, 13. Regarding the clause sakr*i*ttri*h*, '(repeating these last four acts) severally three times,' see Âpastamba II, 6, 15, 10.

25. Vish*n*u XXI, 2 seq., and especially 19.

26. Govinda, in explanation of this Sûtra, refers to the last words of Âpastamba II, 6, 15, 10, where it is said that relatives 'shall perform those rites for the dead which the women declare to be necessary,' and to Âpastamba II, 11, 29, 15.

27. Gautama XIV, 20. Govinda is of opinion that the duration of the impurity shall depend on the good qualities, learning, &c. of the deceased.

28. For a teacher, a sub-teacher (upâdhyâya), and their sons, three (days and) nights,

29. Likewise for officiating priests,

30. Let him keep on account of a pupil, for one who has the same spiritual guide, for a fellow-student (sabrahmaḱârin) three (days and) nights, one day and a night, one day and so forth (as periods of impurity).

31. On a miscarriage females (remain impure) as many (days and) nights as months (elapsed after conception).

32. If he unintentionally touches the corpse of a stranger, he becomes at once pure after bathing dressed in his clothes.

33. (If he does it) intentionally, (he will remain impure) during three (days and) nights.

34. And (the same rules apply if he touches a woman) during her courses.

35. A son who is born from (intercourse with a temporarily unclean woman) becomes an Abhiśasta. Thereby the penances (to be performed) by him have been explained.

28. Vishṇu XXII, 42, 44. Govinda asserts that the impurity on account of an Upâdhyâya lasts one night, together with the preceding and following days, and on account of a teacher's or Upâdhyâya's sons one day only. It looks as if he had read the words pakshiṇyekâham in his text.

29. Govinda asserts that ka, 'likewise,' indicates that the rule applies also on the death of persons for whom one sacrifices.

30. Vishṇu XXII, 44. Govinda explains satîrthya to mean 'one who has the same guru or spiritual guide,' while according to others it means 'one who studies under the same sub-teacher' (upâdhyâya). See also the Kâśikâ on Pâṇini IV, 4, 117, and note.

31. Vishṇu XXII, 25. 32–33. Gautama XIV, 27.

34. Vishṇu XXII, 69.

36. On touching one who sells the Veda, a sacrificial post, an outcast, a funeral pile, a dog, or a *Kaṇḍ*âla he shall bathe.

37. Now if a worm is produced in an open wound that is filled with pus and sanies, how shall, in that case, a penance be performed?

38. He who is bitten by a worm will become pure on bathing (daily) during three days and drinking (a mixture of) cow's urine, cowdung, milk, sour milk, butter, and water boiled with Kuśa grass.

39. He who has been touched by a dog shall bathe dressed in his clothes;

40. Or he becomes pure by washing that spot (where he has been touched), by touching it with fire, by (afterwards) again washing it and his feet, and by sipping water.

41. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'But a Brâhmaṇa who has been bitten by a dog, is purified if he goes to a river that flows into the ocean, (bathes there and) suppresses his breath one hundred times and (afterwards) eats clarified butter. He will (also) become pure at once on bathing (in water brought) in golden or silver (vessels), or in a cow's horn, or in new (earthen pots).'

---

36. This verse, which is another version of I, 5, 9, 5, is left out in the Dekhan and Gugarât MSS.; I consider its genuineness very doubtful.

37. Vasiṣṭha XVIII, 16.

39–40. Âpastamba I, 5, 15, 16–17. Govinda, too, states that the second mode of purification is to be adopted, if the dog touches any part of the body below the navel.

41. Vasiṣṭha XXIII, 31.

PRAŚNA I, ADHYÂYA 5, KANDIKÂ 12.

1. Tame animals must not be eaten,

2. Nor carnivorous and (tame) birds,

3. Nor (tame) cocks and pigs;

4. Goats and sheep (are) excepted (from the above prohibition).

5. Five five-toed animals may be eaten, (viz.) the porcupine, the iguana, the hare, the hedgehog, the tortoise and the rhinoceros, excepting the rhinoceros,

6. Likewise five animals with cloven hoofs, (viz.) the white-footed antelope (Nîl-gâi), the (common ravine) deer, the spotted deer, the buffalo, the (wild) boar and the black antelope, excepting the black antelope,

7. (Likewise) five (kinds of) birds that feed scratching with their feet, (viz.) the partridge, the blue rock-pigeon, the francoline partridge, the (crane called) Vârdhrâṇasa, the peacock and the Vâraṇa, excepting the Vâraṇa,

12. 1. Vasish*th*a XIV, 40.

2. Vasish*th*a XIV, 48. Govinda says that the particle *k*a, 'and,' is used in order to indicate that the word 'tame' must be understood.

3. Âpastamba I, 5, 17, 29, 32.

5. Vasish*th*a XIV, 39. Another explanation of the word *ś*vâvi*t*, 'the porcupine' (see also Gautama XVII, 27), is given in the commentary, which says that it is a wild animal resembling a dog, and belonging to the boar species. Govinda points out that there is a dispute among the learned regarding the rhinoceros (Vasish*th*a XV, 47), and that the peculiar wording of the Sûtra is intended to indicate that.

6. The permissibility of the last-named animal is again doubtful.

7. Gautama XVII, 35. The case of the last-mentioned bird, the Vâraṇa, is again doubtful. From the first rock-edict of Aśoka

8. (And the following) fishes, (viz.) the Silurus Pelorius (Sahasradaṃshṭrin), the Kilikima, the Varmi, the Bṛihakkhiras, the Maṣakari(?), the Cyprinus Rohita, and the Râgi.

9. The milk of a (female animal) whose offspring is not ten days old, and of one that gives milk while big with a young one, must not be drunk,

10. Nor that of a (cow) that has no calf or that (suckles) a strange calf.

11. (The milk) of sheep, camels, and one-hoofed animals must not be drunk.

12. If (he has) drunk (milk) which ought not to be drunk, excepting cow's milk, (he must perform) a Kṛikkhra (penance).

13. But if (he has drunk) cow's milk (that is unfit for use, he shall) fast during three (days and) nights.

14. Stale (food must not be eaten or drunk) excepting pot-herbs, broths, meat, clarified butter, cooked grain, molasses, sour milk, and barley-meal,

15. Nor (substances) which have turned sour, nor molasses which have come into that state.

16. After performing the ceremony preparatory it appears that peacocks, now considered inviolable, were actually eaten in the third century A. D.

8. Vasishṭha XIV, 41–42. The names are much corrupted in the MSS., and for Maṣakari, which I do not find in the dictionaries, Samaṣakari or Samasakari is also read. The Bṛihakkhiras is probably the Indian salmon, the Mâhsir.

9–10. Vasishṭha XIV, 34–35; Gautama XVII, 22. The meaning of sandhinî, 'a female animal that gives milk while big with young,' is uncertain. See also Vishṇu LI, 40; Âpastamba I, 5, 17, 23.

11. Gautama XVII, 24. 12. Vishṇu LI, 38–41.

14. Gautama XVII, 16. 15. Vasishṭha XIV, 37–38.

16. Vasishṭha XIII, 1–5. Govinda states that this Sûtra has been introduced here, because the purity of one's food ensures to the beginning of the Veda-study (upâkarman) on the (full moon of the month) of Śrâvaṇa or of Âshâḍha, they shall close the term on the full moon of Taisha or Mâgha.

PRAŚNA I, ADHYÂYA 6, KAṆḌIKÂ 13.

1. The gods enjoy a pure sacrifice (only);

2. For the gods are desirous of purity and (themselves) pure.

3. The following (Ṛik) declares that, 'To you, O Maruts, the pure ones, pure viands; to you, the pure ones, I offer a pure sacrifice. They who love the pious rites, who are of pure origin, (themselves) pure and purifiers (of others), came duly to the truthful (worshipper).'

4. (He will be) pure (if there is) no blemish on his clothes, therefore let him perform all (acts) that are connected with sacrificing, (dressed) in unblemished clothes.

5. The sacrificer and his wife as well as the officiating priests shall put on dresses which have been washed, and dried by the wind, and which are not in a bad condition.

purity of one's soul, and purity of soul gives strength of memory, and thereby makes one fit to study the Veda.

13. 1–2. See also above, I, 5, 10, 4. This Adhyâya and the next ought to have been given in the Śrauta Sûtra.

3. Rig-veda VII, 56, 12; Taittirîya-brâhmaṇa II, 8, 5, 5. The meaning of the last portion of the verse is somewhat doubtful. Sâyaṇa gives two different explanations and Govinda a third.

4. Govinda points out that the dresses of the sacrificer and of his priests must be white, because farther on (Sûtras 9–10) other colours are specially prescribed.

5. Govinda thinks that the word ka, 'as well as,' is intended to include the lookers-on.

6. (It shall be) thus from the (beginning of the) Prakrama,

7. And thus at the long Soma-sacrifices and the Sattras;

8. And (on other occasions other dresses must be used) in accordance with the injunction (of the Veda),

9. Thus at (all) Ishṭis, animal sacrifices, and Soma-sacrifices which may be used as spells (against enemies), the priests shall perform (the sacred rites), wearing red turbans and red dresses; (when reciting the hymn seen by) Vṛishâkapi (he shall) wear a dress and a mantle of many colours and so forth.

10. At the Agnyâdhâna (sacrifice) the clothes (shall be made) of flax; on failure of such, (dresses) made of cotton or of wool are used.

11. Clothes defiled by urine, ordure, blood, semen and the like (shall be) cleaned with earth, water and the like.

12. (Dresses) made of Tṛipa-bark and vṛikala (shall be treated) like cotton-cloth,

6. Regarding the ceremony called Prakrama, literally 'stepping forward from the Gârhapatya fire,' see Sâyaṇa on Taitt. Br. I, 1, 4, 1. It opens the Agnyâdhâna rite.

9. Govinda states that the words iti ka, 'and so forth,' are intended to include other incantations. The Vṛishâkapi hymn is found Rig-veda X, 86.

11. Govinda states that the word iti, 'and the like,' is intended to include cowdung, cow's urine, and other substances used for purification.

12. Govinda states that there is a tree called Tṛipa, the bark of which is used for dresses. Vṛikala, which has been left untranslated, is explained by śakama, a word which is not found in our dictionaries.

13. Deer-skins like (dresses) made of bark.

14. (Let him) not (use) a mantle which has been wrapped (round the loins, or) on which he has been lying (in his bed), without washing it.

15. Let him not employ for the gods anything used by men without beating it on a stone.

16. If solid earth is defiled, (it must be) smeared with cowdung.

17. Loose (earth must be cleansed by) ploughing,

18. Moist (earth) by bringing pure (earth) and covering (it with that).

19. Land is purified in four (ways), by being trod on by cows, by digging, by lighting a fire on it, by rain falling on it,

20. Fifthly by smearing it with cowdung, and sixthly through (the lapse of) time.

21. Grass placed on unconsecrated ground (must be) washed.

22. (Grass) defiled out of one's sight, (shall be) sprinkled (with water).

23. Small pieces of sacred fuel (shall be purified) in the same manner.

24. Large pieces of wood (must be) washed and dried.

13. Govinda says that, as the treatment of valkala, 'bark-dresses,' has not been prescribed, the meaning of the Sûtra can only be, that bark-dresses and black-buck skins are to be treated alike, i. e. that they are to be cleaned with Bel-nut and rice; see above.

15. Govinda explains apalpûlitam by 'without beating it with the hand on a stone.' He mentions as an instance the skin which is used in preparing the Soma.

16. According to Govinda, solid earth is such on which the fire-altars are built.

21. E. g. grass intended for the barhis, if it has been placed on a spot which has not been sprinkled with water.

22. 'Defiled out of one's sight,' i. e. brought by Śûdras.

25. But a great quantity (of wood shall be) sprinkled (with water).

26. Wooden vessels which have been touched by impure men (shall be) scraped;

27. (And) those which are defiled by stains of remnants (shall be) planed.

28. (Wooden vessels) defiled by urine, ordure, blood, semen, and the like (very impure substances shall be) thrown away.

29. These (rules must be followed) except in case a (special) injunction (is given);

30. Thus, for instance, (purification by) washing with Kuśa grass and water (is prescribed) on all the following (occasions, viz.) at the Agnihotra, the Gharmo*kkh*ish*ṭ*a, the Dadhigharma, the Ku*nd*apâyinâm Ayana, the Utsargi*n*âm Ayana, the Dâkshâya*n*a sacrifice, the Ardhodaya, the *K*atu*śk*akra, and the Brahmaudanas,

31. (Again) at all Soma-sacrifices (the cups must be) cleaned with water only on (the heap of earth called) the Mâr*g*âlîya;

32. If these same (cups are defiled) by urine, ordure,

---

27. Govinda says that this rule is optional.

28. Govinda adds that fuel, Kuśa grass, and the like, which have been defiled in this manner, must also be thrown away.

30. Regarding the Dadhigharma, a homa, see Vaitâna Sûtra 21, 18; regarding the Ku*nd*apâyinâm Ayana, Âśvalâyana Śrauta Sûtra XII, 4; and regarding the Dâkshâya*n*a sacrifice, a variety of the new and full-moon offering, Âśvalâyana II, 14. The Ardhodaya is possibly the Vrata of that name mentioned in the Purâ*n*as. According to Govinda, the *K*atu*śk*akra, which is otherwise known as a Tântric rite, is a sacrifice, ish*ṭ*akâkosh*ṭ*a (?) madhyavasanto yagante tathetaradaya*h* (?). Regarding the Brahmaudana, see Âśvalâyana Śrauta Sûtra I, 4.

32. Govinda says that the injunction to throw away defiled blood, semen, and the like (they must be) thrown away.

PRAŚNA I, ADHYÂYA 6, KANDIKÂ 14.

1. Earthen vessels that have been touched by impure persons (must be) exposed to (the flame of) a fire of Kuśa grass.

2. Those which have been defiled by stains of remnants (of food must be) exposed to another burning.

3. Those which have been defiled by urine, ordure, blood, semen, and the like (must be) thrown away.

4. (Vessels) made of metal (must be) washed, after having been scrubbed as (directed) above.

5. The materials (to be used) for scrubbing (are) cowdung, earth, ashes, and so forth.

6. Those which have been defiled by urine, ordure, blood, semen, and the like (must be) recast,

7. Or (they must) be kept during seven (days and) nights completely immersed in cow's urine,

8. Or in a great river for as long (a period).

9. (Vessels) made of stone or of fruits, (i. e.) gourds, Bel-fruit, and Vinâḷas, (shall be) brushed with (a brush of) cow's hair.

vessels has been repeated, in order to prevent a misconception. For as Soma is said to be a great means of purification, it might be supposed that it was powerful enough to prevent the defilement of vessels into which it is poured at a sacrifice. But compare the next Sûtras.

14. 8. A great river, i. e. one which directly flows into the ocean.—Govinda.

9. A Vinâḷa, i. e. (a vessel) made of bamboo or Vidagdhanaḷa; it is called a 'long vessel' (dirghabhâganam), and is used for carrying the Praṇîta water and the like purposes.—Govinda. The vessel

10. (Sacrificial implements made of) plaited Na*ḍ*a-reeds, bamboo, or *Ś*ara-reeds (shall be) washed with cowdung, water, and the like.

11. If unhusked rice has been defiled, (it must be) washed (and afterwards be) dried.

12. But a great quantity (of unhusked rice must be) sprinkled.

13. Husked rice (which has been defiled must be) thrown away.

14. The same (rule applies) to cooked sacrificial viands.

15. But if a great quantity has been defiled by (the touch of) dogs, crows, and the like (unclean beings), one must throw away that portion (as) food for men, and sprinkle (the rest with water), reciting the Anuvâka, 'Pavamâna*ḥ* suvar*g*ana*ḥ*.'

16. Hydromel and preparations of milk (are) purified by pouring them from one vessel into another.

intended is no doubt the flask made of a bamboo which is cut below the joint, and is commonly used as a bottle for oil. Govinda adds that this mode of purification is to be adopted in case the vessels have been touched by impure persons.

10. Na*ḍ*a-reeds, i.e. Amphidonax Karka; *Ś*ara, i.e. Saccharum Sara. Govinda says that the rule applies to cases where such implements have been defiled by remnants of food (u*kkh*ish*ṭ*a-lepa).

11. 'Defiled, i.e. touched by a *Ḳ*a*ṇḍ*âla.' (The rule) refers to a quantity less than a Dro*ṇ*a (66 or 132 lbs.).—Govinda.

13. 'If it has been defiled by urine and the like and the quantity is small;' this must be understood, because he will declare (below, Sûtra 15) that if there is a great quantity (the defiled) portion only shall be thrown away.—Govinda.

14. This, too, refers to small quantities only.

15. The Anuvâka referred to is Taittirîya-brâhma*ṇ*a I, 4, 8.

16. 'Hydromel, i.e. sour milk, honey, clarified butter, water, and

17. In like manner let him pour oil and clarified butter which have been touched by an impure (person) into water, and (afterwards) use them.

18. If (any) impure (substance) is thrown (into the sacrificial fire) let him place (the two Aranis one) on (the other), produce fire by friction, (and offer) a Pavamâneshṭi.

19. If (the rules regarding) purity, the proper place, the mantras, the series of actions, the object, the materials, (their) consecration, and the proper time are conflicting, each earlier-named (point) is more important (than the following ones).

Prasna I, Adhyâya 7, Kandikâ 15.

1. The sacred fires (shall be) approached from the north,

2. (And be) left in the same manner.

3. The contrary (proceeding should be adopted at sacrifices offered) to the manes.

grain; a preparation of milk, i. e. curd of two-milk whey (âmikshâ), if these are blemished by the fault of men, and that (blemish must have been caused by) the touch of an impure (person, ukkhishta) only.'—Govinda.

17. 'And that must be done in such a manner that the oil and the clarified butter are not lost.'—Govinda.

18. 'Any impure substance, i. e. urine, ordure, and the like.'—Govinda.

19. Âvṛit, 'the series of actions,' i. e. the growth (prâmsubhâva) of the ceremonial (prayoga).—Govinda.

3. I. e. the entrance and exit are to be made to the south of the fires.

4. Let him wash that which has been touched with (his) foot.

5. Let him touch water, in case he touches his body or the hem (of his garment).

6. Likewise (let him touch water) after cutting, splitting, digging or removing (anything, or offering oblations) to the manes, to the Râkshasas, to Nirṛiti, to Rudra, (and after performing sacrifices) intended as spells (against enemies).

7. Let him not turn round himself a sacrificial implement (the use of) which is accompanied by the recitation of mantras.

8. (For) the sacrificial implements (are) more nearly (connected with the sacrifice),

9. The priests, more remotely.

10. The sacrificer and his wife are even nearer than the priests.

11. After the sacrificial implements (follows) the clarified butter, after the clarified butter the sacrificial viands, after the sacrificial viands the animal to be slain, after the animal the Soma, after the Soma the sacred fires.

5. Govinda explains sik, 'the hem of the garment,' by the garment wrapped round the loins (parihitam vâsaḥ).

7. The meaning is that the priest must hold the sacrificial implements, such as the sruk and sruva ladles, between himself and the fires, and not place himself between them and the fires (âtmano bahir na kûryât agner antaraḥ svayam na bhaved iti yâvat).

8. 'He gives the reason for that (rule), "For the sacrificial implements (are) nearer" than the priests, that must be understood.'—Govinda.

17. The officiating (priests), the sacrificer, and his wife shall enter by that (road),

19. When it has been finished (they shall) pass to and fro on the side where there is no Utkara (i.e. on the western side of the enclosure).

Uttaravedi and the rest is confined, the Soma is made ready immediately after the fire, after that the meat and so forth, after that the grain for the sacrificial cakes, then the clarified butter, and after that the spoons called sruva, sru*k*, and so forth.'—Govinda.

12. 'It is indicated hereby that, if there is work (to be done) there, they shall not turn away from the sacred fires except in cases of absolute necessity.'—Govinda.

13. 'This rule (refers to the case) when he walks with the sacred fires. It must be understood that he shall not turn his back on the fires.'—Govinda.

14. 'This rule (is to be interpreted) in the same manner (as the preceding one). Or it is prescribed by these two Sûtras that the men engaged (in the sacrifice) shall go out, turning their right hand towards (the fires).'—Govinda.

Govinda says that the words antare*n*a tîrtham must be understood. For the position of the *K*âtvâla and the Utkara, see Professor Haug's map, where the road of the priests is also marked, though somewhat differently.

20. Let him not put on the fire logs of Samidhs which have not been sprinkled (with water),

5. A Śûdra one.

6. Sons begotten on (wives) of equal or of the next lower castes (are called) Savarṇas (of equal caste).

7. (Those born) of (wives) of the second or third lower castes (become) Ambashṭhas, Ugras, and Nishâdas.

8. Of females wedded in the inverse order of the castes (are born) Âyogavas, Mâgadhas, Vaiṇas, Kshattṛis, Pulkasas, Kukkuṭakas, Vaidehakas, and Kaṇḍâlas.

3. A Brâhmaṇa (begets) on a female of the Kshatriya caste a Brâhmaṇa, on a female of the Vaiśya caste an Ambashṭha, on a female of the Śûdra caste a Nishâda,

4. (According to) some a Pâraśava.

13–15. The text of the three Sûtras is exceedingly corrupt, and the Telugu copy of the commentary affords no help. It is, however, clear that the passage left out contained something which corresponded to Gautama IV, 22–23, and treated of the possibility of raising persons of a lower caste to a higher one by intermarriages continued for five or seven generations. The reading of K., which perhaps is the best, will show this: 'nishâdena nishâdyâd â paṅkamâggâtâ bhavanti tam upanayet shashṭham yâgayet saptamo 'vikṛtâgîsamaṃgito saptamauṅgîsama ity ekeshâṃ saṃgñâ krameṇa nipatanti.'

9. I read, with the Telugu copy of the commentary, sâkshi*n*am tvevam uddish*t*am. All the MSS. of the text and C. I. read sâkshi*n*am daivam uddish*t*am. Govinda's explanation, adhunâ nirdish*t*ân sâkshi*n*a evam p*rikkh*ed iti padânvaya*h*, 'the construction of the words is, "let him now ask the appointed witnesses in the following manner,"' agrees with the reading adopted.

words 'he kills,' see Manu VIII, 97, and Haradatta on Gautama XIII, 14.

13. Vasishṭha XVI, 28–30. The text has râganya, 'members of the royal family.' But the parallel passages of other Dharma-sûtras, e. g. Vishṇu VIII, 2, make it probable that the king is meant.

14. Âpastamba II, 11, 29, 10. Govinda takes the Sûtra differently. His commentary runs as follows: sâkshidvaye sati râgñâ tatpurushais ka kim kartavyam ity ata âha ॥ smṛitau pradhânataḥ pratipattiḥ ॥ prâdhânyatas taponirdishṭavidyâdibhiḥ । tadvachanât pratipattir niśchayaḥ kârya ityadhyâhâraḥ kâryaḥ ॥ 'What shall the king and his officers do, if there are two witnesses? In order to answer this question he says: "On recollection, according to pre-eminence, reliance." According to pre-eminence, i. e. on account of austerities, (being) appointed (as a witness), learning and the like; in accordance with the evidence of such person's conviction, i. e. the decision must be made. The latter word has to be understood.' Govinda then goes on to quote Manu VIII, 73.

15. Âpastamba II, 11, 29, 9. Govinda and M. read kartṛipatyam for kartapatyam, the reading of the Dekhan and Gugarât MSS. The explanation of the former term is said to be doshaḥ, 'sin.' Regarding the ancient word kartapatya, which Govinda and the writer of M. have not understood, see Haradatta on Âpastamba I, 2, 5, 3.

16. In accordance with his explanation of Sûtra 14, Govinda thinks that this penance is to be performed by the king and the judges in case they fail to weigh the evidence properly. But

1. (There are) eight marriage-rites.

2. If (the father) gives (his daughter) to a student (who has not broken his vow of chastity and) who asks for her, after fully enquiring into his learning and character, that (is) the rite of Brahman (brâhma).

3. If (the father gives his daughter away) after clothing her and decking her with ornaments, (saying) 'That (is thy wife), fulfil the law (with her),' that (is) the rite of Pragâpati (prâgâpatya).

4. If (the bridegroom) after offering the first burnt oblation of parched grain (receives the maiden) for a bull and a cow, that is the rite of the *Ri*shis (ârsha).

5. If (a maiden is given) to an officiating priest within the sacrificial enclosure, while the presents are being taken away, that (is) the rite of the gods (daiva).

according to Manu VIII, 106, Vishnu VIII, 16, the oblations with the Kûshmândas (Taitt. Âr. X, 3–5) are to be offered for uttering in evidence a venial falsehood. That is, no doubt, here, too, the real meaning.

20. 1. Vishnu XXIV, 17.

2. Vasishtha I, 30. The word brahmakârin has, no doubt, as Govinda too contends, been used in the double sense of 'a student of the Veda' and 'chaste.'

3. Vishnu XXIV, 22.

4. Vasishtha I, 32. 'After the first of the burnt oblations of parched grain, which are prescribed for weddings, has been offered, the bridegroom shall give to him who has power over the maiden a bull and a cow, and receive them back together with the (bride).'—Govinda.

5. Vasishtha I, 31. According to this rule the damsel is given

6. The union of a lover with a loving damsel (is called) the rite of the Gandharvas (gândharva).

7. (If the bridegroom receives the maiden) after gladdening (the parents) by money, (that is) the rite of the Asuras (âsura).

8. (If the maiden is wedded) after being forcibly abducted, (that is) the rite of the Râkshasas (râkshasa).

9. If one has intercourse with (a maiden) who is sleeping, intoxicated, or out of her senses (with fear or passion and weds her afterwards, that is) the rite of the Pisâkas (paisâka).

10. Among these (eight rites) the four first (named) are (lawful) for a Brâhmaṇa. Among these also each earlier named is preferable.

11. Among the (four) later (named rites) each succeeding one is more sinful (than the preceding ones).

12. Among these the sixth and the seventh agree with the law of the Kshatriyas. For power is their attribute.

as part of the sacrificial fee (dakshiṇâ) to one of the priests after a sacrifice has been completed. Govinda adds that the recipient has to accept the gift with the six mantras, 'prajâpati striyâm yasaḥ,' Taitt. Brâhmaṇa II, 4, 6, 5. In his commentary on the passage Sâyaṇa makes the same statement. Govinda adds that in this case as well as in those mentioned in the following Sûtras the regular marriage ceremony must be performed later.

6. Vasishṭha I, 33.
7. Vasishṭha I, 35.
8. Vasishṭha I, 34.
9. Vishṇu XXIV, 26.
10. Vishṇu XXIV, 27.
12. Vishṇu XXIV, 28; Vasishṭha I, 29, 34. The meaning of the last clause is that as, according to I, 10, 18, 3, Brahman placed power in the Kshatriyas, they may adopt marriage rites by which a disregard of conventionalities or strength is displayed.

13. The fifth and the eighth (are lawful) for Vaiśyas and Śûdras.

14. For Vaiśyas and Śûdras are not particular about their wives,

15. Because they are allowed (to subsist by such low occupations as) husbandry and service.

16. Some recommend the Gândharva rite for all (castes), because it is based on (mutual) affection.

Praśna I, Adhyâya 11, Kandikâ 21.

1. The Veda declares, 'The quality of the offspring depends on the quality of the marriage rite.'

2. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'It is declared that a female who has been purchased for money is not a wife. She cannot (assist) at sacrifices offered to the gods or the manes. Kâśyapa has stated that she is a slave.'

13. 'I. e. the fifth for Vaiśyas and the eighth for Śûdras.'—Govinda.

14. 'Those whose spouse, i. e. wife, is not restrained, i. e. not fixed by rule, are called not particular about their wives. The meaning is that there is oneness (dâreshvaikyam) with respect to wives, that fixed rules regarding them there are none (niyamas teshâm na bhavati).'—Govinda.

15. '"Husbandry" includes also trade and the like. Because those two (castes) are permitted to pursue low occupations, therefore their marriage rites are of the same description. That is what the author intends to say.'—Govinda.

21. 1. Âpastamba II, 5, 12, 4.

2. Vasishṭha I, 36–38. Govinda inserts after the words 'Now they quote also,' two Sûtras in prose: 1. 'Ten virtuous sons and daughters (spring) from a Daiva marriage, ten from a Prâgâpatya marriage. It is declared in the Veda that the son of a wife wedded according to the Brâhma rite (sanctifies) ten ancestors, ten descendants, and oneself.' 2. 'The power of learning the Veda also

3. 'Those wicked men who, seduced by greed, give away a daughter for a fee, who (thus) sell themselves and commit a great crime, fall (after death) into a dreadful place of punishment and destroy their family down to the seventh (generation). Moreover they will repeatedly die and be born again. All (this) is declared (to happen), if a fee (is taken).'

4. On the day of the full moon, on the eighth day (of each half month), on the day of the new moon, on the appearance of a meteor, on the occasion of an earthquake, on visiting a burial-ground, and on the death of the king of the country, of a Śrotriya or of one who has the same Guru (satîrthya), the study of the Veda must be discontinued for a day and a night.

5. (The study of the Veda must be interrupted) while (a strong) wind (blows), a foul smell (is perceptible), or hoar-frost (lies on the ground), when dancing (is going on), and while the sounds of singing, musical instruments, weeping, or of the Sâman (melodies are audible).

6. When thunder, lightning, and rain come together, (the interruption shall last) three days except in the rainy season.

belongs to such sons.' None of my MSS. of the text has these words, and they are suspicious, because the phrase 'Now they quote also' usually precedes verses only. The Dekhan and Gugarât MSS., except K., omit these and the next Sûtra too.

4. Vasish*th*a XIII, 22, 32–35; Vish*n*u XXX, 23. Govinda explains agnyutpâta, 'on the appearance of meteor,' by 'if a fire breaks out in the village.'

5. Vasish*th*a XIII, 17, 30; Vish*n*u XXX, 7, 13; Âpastamba I, 3, 11, 31; I, 3, 10, 17.

6. Gautama XVI, 41.

7. In the rainy season, too, (the reading must be interrupted) until the same hour of the (next) day or night, (if thunder and lightning come together), not on account of rain.

8. If (he has) received anything or dined on the occasion of a sacrifice in honour of the manes, (he shall not read) during the remainder of the day,

9. (Nor) after meals until (the food) has been digested.

10. For the hand of a Brâhma*n*a is his mouth.

11. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'According to the revealed texts there is no difference whether one has eaten or received (a present at a *S*râddha).'

12. (A student shall discontinue the study of the Veda) during three days in case his father has died.

13. 'Of two kinds, forsooth, is the virile energy of a famous Brâhma*n*a who is learned in the Vedas, (that which resides) above the navel and the other (that resides) below the navel. Through that which

8. Vasish*th*a XIII, 15. Govinda adds that the recitation must be stopped as soon as the invitation to a *S*râddha is received.

9. Vasish*th*a XIII, 31.

10. Vasish*th*a XIII, 16. The word 'for' used in this Sûtra gives the reason for the rule in Sûtra 8.

12. 'This (rule) refers to a student who has not returned home. But on one who has returned home it is obligatory to interrupt the Veda-study until he becomes pure. Here he calls the sub-teacher (upâdhyâya) "father," because he gives the Veda. For (an interruption of) twelve days' duration is prescribed on (the death of) a real father (by the Sûtra); "on the death of the mother, the father, and the teacher twelve days."'—Govinda.

13. Vasish*th*a II, 5. This Sûtra is intended to show how the (resides) above the navel, his offspring is produced when he initiates Brâhmaṇas, when he teaches them, when he causes them to offer sacrifices, when he makes them holy. All these are his children. But through that which resides below the navel the children of his body are produced. Therefore they never say to a Śrotriya who is versed in the Vedas, 'Thou art destitute of offspring.'

14. 'Therefore a Brâhmaṇa has two names, two mouths, two kinds of virile energy, and two births.'

15. (Let him discontinue the recitation of the Veda) as long as he is within hearing or sight of Śûdras and Apapâtras.

16. When at night the howl of a solitary jackal is heard, he shall not study until he has slept.

17. Let him not study in the evening and morning twilights nor on the Parva-days.

18. He shall not eat meat nor approach his wife (on those days).

19. It is declared in the Veda, 'For on the Parva-days the Râkshasas and the Piśâćas roam about (in order to injure men).'

20. And on (the appearance of) other omens and portents (he shall not repeat the Veda), except mentally, during a day and a night.

Upâdhyâya can be called a father. Govinda states that the precise meaning of anûćâna, 'versed or learned in the Veda,' is 'one who knows the Veda, its meaning, and the Aṅgas.' See also Baudhâyana Gṛihya-sûtra I, 10, 5.

21. The mental recitation of the Veda must also be interrupted on births and deaths (occurring in the family).

22. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'The eighth day destroys the teacher, the fourteenth destroys the pupil, the fifteenth destroys learning; therefore let him avoid (studying the Veda) on the Parva-days.'

PRAŚNA II, ADHYÂYA 1, KANDIKÂ 1.

1. Now, therefore, the penances (will be described).

2. The murderer of a learned Brâhmaṇa (shall practise the following vow) during twelve years:

3. Carrying a skull (instead of a dish) and the foot of a bedstead (instead of a staff), dressed in the hide of an ass, staying in the forest, making a dead man's skull his flag, he shall cause a hut to be built in a burial-ground and reside there; going to seven houses in order to beg food, while proclaiming his deed, he shall support life with what (he gets there), and shall fast if he obtains nothing;

4. Or he may offer a horse-sacrifice, a Gosava, or an Agnishṭut;

22. Vishṇu XXX, 29–30. In accordance with the practice usual in Vedic works the best MSS. of the text repeat the beginning of each Kaṇḍikâ at the end of the Praśna, giving the last first.

1. 2–3. Gautama XXII, 4–6; Vishṇu L, 1–3, 15. The expression 'staying in the forest' means that the sinner shall not stop in the village or the fields during the day-time, but live in some uncultivated tract in the neighbourhood.

4. Gautama XIX, 9–10. The Gosava sacrifice is an Ekâha; see Kâtyâyana Śrauta Sûtra XXII, 11, 3.

5. Or he may bathe (with the priests) on the completion of a horse-sacrifice (offered by somebody else).

6. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'He who unintentionally slays a Brâhmaṇa becomes sinful according to the sacred law. The sages declare that he may be purified (if he did it) unintentionally. But no expiation is found for a wilful murderer.'

7. 'He who has raised his hand (against a Brâhmaṇa), shall perform a Krikkhra penance, an Atikrikkhra penance if he strikes, a Krikkhra and a Kândrâyaṇa if blood flows. Therefore let him neither raise his hand nor cause blood to flow.'

8. (For killing) a Kshatriya (he shall keep the normal vow of continence) during nine years,

9. (For killing) a Vaiśya during three (years),

10. (For killing) a Śûdra during one year,

11. Likewise for killing a woman.

12. (The penance for killing) a woman who has bathed after temporary uncleanness (is) the same (as that) for (the murder of) a Brâhmaṇa.

5. Gautama XXII, 9. 6. Manu XI, 90.

7. Yâgñavalkya III, 293. Regarding the penances named, see Vasishṭha XXI, 20, XXIV, 1–2, XXIII, 45, and below, II, 1, 2, 38, IV, 5, 6.

8–10. Vasishṭha XX, 31–33. The words 'shall keep the normal vow of continence' have been inserted in accordance with Govinda's explanation, which apparently is based on Gautama XXII, 14. But it is also possible that Baudhâyana, like Vishṇu (L, 15) and others, may have intended murderers of Kshatriyas, Vaiśyas, &c., too, to perform the penance prescribed above, Sûtra 4, only for shorter periods.

11. Gautama XXII, 17. Govinda is of opinion that the word ka, 'likewise,' is intended to include 'worthless' Kshatriyas and Vaiśyas.

12. Vasishṭha XX, 34–35.

13. He who has defiled the bed of a Guru shall place himself on a heated iron bed,

14. Or embrace a red hot image (of a woman),

15. Or cutting off his organ together with the testicles and holding them in his joined hands, he shall walk towards the south-west until he falls down (dead).

16. A thief shall go to the king with flying hair, carrying on his shoulder a club of Sindhraka wood (and say), 'Strike me with that.' (Then the king) shall strike him.

17. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'A thief shall go to the king carrying a club on his shoulder (and say to him), 'Punish me with that, O king, remembering the duty of Kshatriyas.'

'Whether he be punished or be pardoned, the thief is freed from his guilt. But if the king does not punish him, that guilt of the thief falls on him.'

18. If he has drunk (the spirituous liquor called) Surâ, he shall scald himself to death with hot (liquor of the) same (kind).

19. For unintentionally drinking (Surâ), he shall perform K*rikkh*ra penances during three months and be initiated again,

20. And (on this second initiation) the cutting (of

21. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'A Brâhmaṇa, Kshatriya, or Vaiśya who has unintentionally drunk (the spirituous liquor called) Vârunî or has swallowed urine or faeces must be initiated a second time.'

22. 'But he who drinks water which has stood in a vessel, used for keeping Surâ, shall live six days on milk in which (leaves of) the Śaṅkhapushpî plant have been boiled.'

23. If (a pupil) who is employed by his teacher (on some errand) meets with his death, (the teacher) shall perform three Kṛikkhra penances.

24. The same (penance) is prescribed for not finishing (the education of the pupil).

25. If a student assists at the burial of anybody except (at that of his) mother, of his father, or of his teacher, he must begin his vow afresh.

26. If a (student) is sick, he may, at his pleasure, eat all the fragments of his teacher's meal as medicine.

27. He may physic himself with any (medicine) which he may desire.

For that (omission) the same (penance), i. e. three Kṛikkhras (are to be) performed.'—Govinda.

25. Vasishṭha XXIII, 7–8. 'Assists at a burial (śavakarma), i. e. lays out a corpse, and so forth (alaṃkaraṇâdi), or carries it out, and so forth.'—Govinda.

28. When he is unable to move, he may worship the sun, after he has risen, reciting this (*Ṛi*k verse): 'A swan, dwelling in purity.'

29. When he has spent his manly strength in the day-time, let him thrice drink water that reaches his heart, reciting the verses which contain the word retas.

30. A student who approaches a woman (is called) an Avakîr*n*in,

31. Let him offer an ass (in the place of) a sacrificial animal.

32. The sacrificial meat-cake (puro*ḍâ*sa shall be offered) to Nir*ṛ*ti, or to the Râkshasas, or to Yama.

33. It is declared in the Veda, 'The piece to be eaten by the sacrificer (prâ*s*itra, shall be taken) from the organ (of the animal); and the (other) portions shall be offered in water.'

34. 'Or he may also heap (fuel) on the fire in the night of the new moon, perform the preparatory rites required for the Darvîhoma, and offer two (substances) which are forbidden even to his teacher, e. g. garlic, and so forth.' For a Sm*ṛ*ti declares, 'He shall protect himself by every means.'—Govinda.

28. 'Unable to move,' i. e. sick. This is a penance to be performed by a sick student when he is unable to fulfil the rules enjoining the morning and evening prayers, and the like; and it applies to other men also because there is no objection. Regarding the Mantra, see Taittirîya Sa*m*hitâ I, 8, 15, 2.

29. The rule refers to intercourse with a wife in the day-time; see Vish*n*u LIII, 4. The Retasyâs occur Taittirîya Âra*n*yaka I, 30.

30. Vasish*ṭh*a XXIII, 1.

33. Weber, Ind. Stud. X, 102; Kâtyâyana *S*rauta Sûtra I, 1, 15.

34. Taitt. Âra*n*yaka II, 18. The Âra*n*yaka has, more appropriately, pra*n*îya, 'having taken out,' before upasamâdhâya, 'may heap (fuel) upon.' The Dekhan and Gu*g*arât MSS. insert the words 'am*ṛ*ta*m* oblations of clarified butter (reciting these two sacred texts): "O Lust, I have broken my vow; my vow have I broken, O Lust; to Lust Svâhâ;" "O Lust, I have done evil; evil have I done, O Lust; to Lust Svâhâ."'

35. 'After he has made the offering, he shall address the fire, closely joining his hands, turning sideways (with the following texts): "May the Maruts grant me, may Indra, may Bṛihaspati, may this fire grant me long life and strength, may it make me long-lived!"'

36. Now the relatives shall empty (the water-pot) of a (grievous offender) at a (solemn) meeting (and he shall confess), 'I N. N. am (the perpetrator of) such and such (a deed).' After (the outcast) has performed (his penance) the Brâhmaṇas shall ask him who has touched water, milk, clarified butter, honey, and salt, 'Hast thou performed (thy penance)?' The other (person) shall answer, 'Om' (yes)! They shall admit him who has performed (a penance) to all sacrificial rites, making no difference (between him and others).

37. If he unintentionally marries a female who belongs to his own family (gotra), he shall support her, (treating her) like his mother.

vâ âgyam amṛitam evâtman dhatte,' which occur also in the Âraṇyaka, after the Mantra. According to Govinda pariśeshâ, 'preparatory rites,' refers to the consecration of the clarified butter, and so forth. The special rules regarding the Darvîhomas are given Kâtyâyana Śrauta Sûtra VI, 10, 17 seq.

36. Vasishṭha XV, 12–21. Govinda thinks that nirviśeshaṃ savanîyaṃ kuryuḥ, 'they shall admit him to all sacrificial rites, making no difference,' may also be interpreted by 'they shall perform for him the sacraments just as for a new-born child.'

37. Colebrooke V, Dig. CCCXL.

38. If (such a woman) has borne a child, he shall perform K*rikkh*ra penances during three months and offer (two burnt oblations reciting) the two (Mantras), 'That which is the blemish of my soul' (and) 'Fire restored my sight.'

39. 'An elder brother whose younger brother marries first, the younger brother who marries first, the damsel wedded (by the latter), he who gives her away, and fifthly he who sacrifices for them (at the wedding), all sink to a region of torment.'

40. 'The unmarried elder brother and the married younger brother, the giver (of the maiden) and the performer of the sacrifices become pure by undergoing a K*rikkh*ra penance of twelve days, the female (who has been wedded to the younger brother) by (fasting during) three days.'

PRASNA II, ADHYÂYA 1, KANDIKÂ 2.

1. Now (follow the offences) causing loss of caste (patanîya),

2. (Viz.) making voyages by sea,

38. The Mantras are found, Taittirîya Sa*m*hitâ III, 2, 5, 4.

39. Vasish*th*a XX, 7–8. The MSS. read parivitti*h* parivettâ ya*s* *k*ainâ*m* [na*m*] parivindati. But it is absolutely necessary to adopt either the various reading given Manu III, 172, yayâ *k*a parividyate, or to read yâ *k*aina*m* parivindati.

40. The MSS. all read at the end of the verse, tristrirâtre*n*a or dvistrirâtre*n*a. The correct reading appears, however, to be strî trirâtre*n*a; for Govinda says, yayâ saha parivettâ bhûtas [bhûttasya C. I., bhûtassâstri C. T.] tasyâ*s* trirâtre*n*opavâsena *s*uddhi*h*, 'the purification of that female with whom he has become a parivett*ri* takes place through three days, i. e. through fasting (three days).'

2. 1. Âpastamba I, 7, 21, 7–11.

2. Govinda explains samudrasa*m*yânam, 'making voyages by sea,' by 'voyaging by means of ships to another continent (dvîpa).'

3. Stealing the property of a Brâhmaṇa or a deposit,

4. Giving false evidence regarding land,

5. Trading with merchandise of any description (whether forbidden or not),

6. Serving Śûdras,

7. Begetting a son on a female of the Śûdra caste,

8. And becoming thereby her son.

9. (For those who have) committed one of these (offences the following penance is prescribed):

10. 'They shall eat every fourth meal-time a little food, bathe at the time of the three libations (morning, noon, and evening), passing (the day) standing and (the night) sitting. After the lapse of three years they throw off their guilt.'

11. 'A Brâhmaṇa removes the sin which he committed by serving the black race during one day and one night, if he bathes during three years at every fourth meal-time.'

7. The MSS. from Gujarât and the Dekhan read instead of this and the next Sûtras, yaśka śûdrâyâm abhipragâyate tadapatyaṃ ka bhavati, 'and he who begets (offspring) on a Śûdra female, and thereby becomes her son.'

8. Govinda explains the Sûtra as a prohibition against allowing oneself to be adopted by a Śûdra (śûdraputrabhâvaḥ tavâham putro 'smîty upagîvanam).

9. The Dekhan and Gujarât MSS. again have a different reading, teshâṃ tu nisveshaḥ, 'but the atonement of these offences (is as follows).'

10. Âpastamba I, 9, 25, 10. All the MSS. read in the last pâda 'tribhir varshais tad apahanti pâpam.' The correct reading is that given by Âpastamba loc. cit., 'tribhir varshair apa pâpaṃ nudante.'

11. Âpastamba I, 9, 27, 11. Govinda explains the Sûtra as referring to cohabitation with a female of the 'black race.' By the latter term he understands a Kândâlî, adding that others believe

12. Now (follow) the minor offences, entailing loss of caste (upapâtaka),

13. (Viz.) intercourse with females who must not be approached (agamyâ, e. g.) cohabitation with the female friend of a female Guru, with the female friend of a male Guru, with an Apapâtra woman, and a female outcast, following the profession of medicine, sacrificing for many, living by (performances on) the stage, following the profession of a teacher of dancing, singing and acting, tending cows and buffalos, and similar (low occupations, as well as) fornication.

14. The expiation (prescribed) for these (offences is) to live as an outcast during two years.

a Śûdra female to be intended. It is, however, more probable that Baudhâyana took the verse to forbid twice-born men to serve Śûdras.

12. Âpastamba I, 7, 21, 9.

13. Gautama XXI, 11. In explanation of the term agamyâ, 'a female who must not be approached,'-Govinda quotes Nârada XII, 73–74, and he takes the four classes of females, who are specially mentioned, not as examples illustrating the term agamyâ, but as not included in and additional to the latter. Physicians and the other professional men enumerated are usually not mentioned among the upapâtakins, but occur in the lists of those whose gifts must not be accepted, and of those who defile the company at a funeral dinner, e. g. Vasish*th*a III, 3; XIV, 2, 3, 11. The expression 'sacrificing for many' (grâmayâganam) appears to be a description of the so-called Ya*g*amâna Vr*i*tti, by which the modern Bha*tt*a*g*îs, or priests who officiate for hire, subsist. In explanation of the term nâ*t*yâ*k*âryatâ, 'following the profession of teaching dancing, music, and acting,' Govinda says that 'instruction in the works of Bharata, Visâkhila, and others' is intended. Baudhâyana no doubt intends to forbid the instruction of professional dancers and actors in actual works on their art, such as the nâ*t*ya-sûtras mentioned by Pâ*n*ini.

14. 'To live as an outcast, i. e. to subsist by begging.'—Govinda.

15. Now (follow the offences) which make men impure (*asuk*ikara),

16. (Viz.) gambling, performing incantations, subsisting by gleaning corn though one does not perform an Agnihotra, subsisting by alms after one has finished one's studentship, living, after that has been finished, longer than four months in the house of one's teacher, and teaching such a (person who has finished his studentship), gaining one's livelihood by astrology and so forth.

17. But the expiation of these (offences is to perform penances) during twelve months, during twelve fortnights, during twelve times ten days, during twelve se'nnights, during twelve times three days, during twelve days, during six days, during three days, during a day and a night, during one day, in proportion to the offence committed.

18. Now outcasts shall live together and (together) fulfil their duties, sacrificing for each other, teaching each other, and marrying amongst each other. If they have begot sons, they shall say to them, 'Depart from among us; thus you will again reach the Âryas.'

19. For the organs do not become impure together with the man.

20. (The truth of) that may be learned from this (parallel case); a man deficient in limbs begets a son who has the full number of limbs.

21. Hârîta declares that this is wrong.

22. For wives may be (considered) similar to the

15. Âpastamba I, 7, 21, 12–19; I, 10, 29, 15.

16. Govinda is probably right in asserting that the word *k*a, 'and (so forth),' is intended to include other not-named offences.

vessel which contains the curds (for the sacrifice). If one makes impure milk curdle in a milk-vessel and stirs it, the Śishṭas do not use the (curds thus produced) for sacred rites.

23. In like manner no intercourse can be held with that (offspring) which is produced from impure seed.

24. If they desire it, (they may perform) a penance,

25. (Viz. in the case of males) the third part (of the penance prescribed) for crimes causing loss of caste (patanîya); for females the third part (of that).

26. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'If he applies sesamum to any other purpose, but food, anointing, and charitable gifts, he will be born again as a worm and, together with his ancestors, be plunged into the ordure of dogs.'

27. He who sells sesamum, forsooth, sells his ancestors; he who sells rice, forsooth, sells his life; he who gives away his daughter, making a bargain, forsooth, sells portions of his spiritual merit.

28. Grass and wood, in its natural state, may be sold.

29. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'Animals that have teeth in one jaw only, as well as minerals excepting salt, and undyed thread, these, O Brâhmaṇa, are the goods which thou art permitted to sell.'

30. (If he has committed) any offence excepting a

25. I. e. males shall live, according to the rules given above in Sûtras 10–11, during one year, and females during four months.

mortal sin (pâtaka) he may either give to a learned Brâhmaṇa (anûkâna) a hairy cow of brown or reddish colour, after sprinkling her with clarified butter and scattering black sesamum seeds over her;

31. Or (he may offer burnt oblations), reciting the Kûshmâṇḍas, during twelve days.

32. '(Thus) he will be freed from the guilt (of any crime that is) less (heinous) than the murder of a learned Brâhmaṇa.'

33. If one is accused of a mortal sin (pâtaka), a Kṛikkhra (penance must be performed by the accused).

34. The accuser (shall perform) that (Kṛikkhra penance during) a year.

35. 'He who during a year associates with an outcast, becomes (likewise) an outcast; not by sacrificing for him, by teaching him or by (forming) a matrimonial (alliance with him), but by using the same carriage or seat.'

36. The penance for eating impure substances is to fast until the entrails are empty. That is attained in seven (days and) nights.

31. Regarding the efficacy of the Kûshmâṇḍa texts, see e.g. Gautama XIX, 12; XXII, 36.

33. Vasishṭha XXIII, 37–38. 34. Vasishṭha XXIII, 39.

35. Vasishṭha I, 22.

36. Âpastamba I, 9, 27, 3–4; Vasishṭha XXIII, 30. I follow here the Gugarât and Dekhan MSS., which read amedhyaprâśane prâyaśittir naishpurîshyaṃ tat saptarâtreṇâvâpyate. M. and the two MSS. of the commentary give amedhyaprâśane prâyaśittam and leave the remainder out. The commentary states that the penance intended is the Taptakṛikkhra, described in the next Sûtra. The parallel passages of Âpastamba and others leave no doubt that the northern MSS. in this case have preserved the older form of the text.

37. (Subsisting on) water, milk, clarified butter, (and) fasting,—each for three days,—(and taking the three fluids) hot, that is a Taptak*rikkh*ra penance.

38. (Eating) during three days in the morning only, during the (next) three days in the evening only, (subsisting) during (another) three days (on) food given unasked, and fasting during three days, (that is) a K*rikkh*ra penance.

39. (If the period of twelve days is divided into) three (periods of) four days, that is the K*rikkh*ra penance of women, children, and aged men.

40. If (observing the rule given) above one eats (at each meal) so much only as one can take at one (mouthful), that is an Atik*rikkh*ra penance.

41. (If one) subsists on water only, that is a K*rikkh*râtik*rikkh*ra, the third (in the order of the K*rikkh*ra penances).

42. During a K*rikkh*ra penance (the following rules must be followed, viz.) to bathe at morn, noon, and evening,

43. To sleep on the ground,

44. To wear one garment only, to shave the hair of the head, of the beard, and of the body, and to clip the nails.

45. The same (rules apply) to women except (that referring to) shaving the head.

37. Vasish*th*a XXI, 21.

38. Vasish*th*a XXI, 20. M. and the two MSS. of the commentary omit the word 'k*rikkh*ra*h*' at the end of the Sûtra.

39. Vasish*th*a XXIII, 43. 40. Vasish*th*a XXIV, 2.

41. Vasish*th*a XXIV, 3. Govinda gives another explanation of the word t*ri*tîya*h*, 'the third,' according to which it is to refer to the third tryaha*h*, or 'period of three days.'

1. A Brâhmaṇa who always carries water (in his pot), who always wears the sacred thread, who daily recites the Veda, who avoids the food of Śûdras, who approaches (his wife) in the proper season, and offers sacrifices in accordance with the rules (of the Veda, after death) never falls from Brahman's heaven.

the first clause is omitted and connected with the following Sûtra. Govinda agrees with Gîmûtavâhana.

9. Colebrooke V, Dig. XLIX. The rule is an explanation of the term varam rûpam, 'the most excellent chattel,' in Sûtra 4. The meaning probably is, as the Digest states, that among Brâhmaṇas it is usual to give to the eldest a bull, among Kshatriyas a horse, and so forth.

10. Vasishṭha XVII, 48–50; Vishṇu XVIII, 2–40; where the several cases that can arise have been fully worked out.

11. I translate according to the reading of K., M., and the two MSS. of the commentary, aurase tûtpanne savarṇâs [°ṇas, M., K.] tṛitîyâṃsaharâḥ [°yâṃsam haret, K.] The other MSS. omit the last two words of the Sûtra. The sense of the Sûtra seems to be, that subsidiary sons of equal caste obtain a third of the estate when a legitimate son of the body is born to their father; see also Kâtyâyana V, Dig. CCXVIII. Govinda gives the following explanation: aurasaḥ savarṇaputrâṣ ka vakshyante | aurasaḥ savarṇâyâm saṃskṛitâyâm svayam utpâditaḥ [Sûtra 14] | tasminnutpanne savarṇâs tṛitîyâṃsaharâ bhaveyuḥ | sarvam dhanagâtam tredhâ vibhagya teshâm ekam shôḍaṣa saṃpâdya trîn dvâvekam iti kalpayet || 'The legitimate son and the sons of equal caste will be described (below). 17. He who is begotten, by another man, on the wife of a deceased man, of a eunuch, or of one (incurably) diseased, after permission (has been given), is called the son begotten on a wife (kshetraga).

33–34. Aupagandhani is one of the ancient teachers of the White Yagur-veda, mentioned in the lists incorporated in the Satapatha-brâhmana XIV, 5, 5, 21; 7, 3, 26. The legends of the White Yagur-veda frequently mention king Ganaka of Videha, and assert that that philosopher king had frequent and intimate intercourse with Yâgñavalkya and other teachers of the Veda which Âditya revealed. It seems to me, therefore, highly probable that Govinda is right in taking the vocative ganaka in Sûtra 34 as a proper name, and in asserting that the verse belongs to a conversation between Aupagandhani and Ganaka. This explanation, which possibly may be based on an ancient tradition of Baudhâyana's school, is certainly preferable to Haradatta's statement on Âpastamba II, 6, 13, 7, that these verses express the sentiments of a husband who had neglected to watch his wives, and later learned that he would not derive any spiritual benefit from their offspring. In the text of Sûtra 34 I read with the Dekhan MSS. and Âpastamba, loc. cit., îrshyâmi, instead of ishyâmi, which M. and the commentary give.

44. Vasish*th*a V, 1. All the MSS. of the text read na strîsvâtantrya*m* vidyate, while the text given by the two copies of the commentary has na strî svâtantrya*m* vindate. Govinda asserts that the Sûtra is intended to forbid the independent action of women with respect to things inherited. The correct view probably is that with this Sûtra the topic of the duties and rights of women begins, and that the rule contains a general maxim.

45. Vasish*th*a V, 2.

46. Colebrooke V, Dig. CXXXI. The text is in great confusion. The Dekhan and Gugarât MSS., except K., read, na dâya*m* nirindriyâ hyadâyâ*s* *k*a striyo matâ iti sruti*h*; K. has, tasmât[n]-nirindriyâ hy. st. m. i. *s*ru. ॥ tasmât striyo nirindriyâ adâyâdîr api pâpât; while M. and the I. O. copy of the commentary have, tasmân-nirindriyâ adâyâ*s* *k*a striyo matâ iti *s*ruti*h* [sûti*h*, M.] The Telugu copy is mutilated, and reads nâdayantiriti *s*ruti*h*. Though the reading of the Dekhan MSS. is supported by Mitramisra Vîramitrodaya, fol. 209, p. 1, l. 3, it is certainly not the original one, for there is no verb by which the accusative 'dâyam' is governed. Mitramisra's attempt to make it depend on 'arhati' in the verse quoted in Sûtra 45 is futile, because, according to the usage of the Sûtrakâras, a Sûtra may be completed by a verb taken from another original aphorism of the author, but cannot be connected with a portion of a quotation taken from some other work. This same principle, of course, applies not only to Sûtras, but to the writings of all other authors, whether Indian or European. The reading of K., M., and of the I. O. copy of the commentary is not open to the objection just mentioned, and therefore preferable. But it seems to me highly probable that, nevertheless, it is not quite genuine; for the word 'tasmât,' with which it begins, is not required, because its sense is already expressed by the following 'hi,' and because the Sûtra apparently contains half an Anush*t*ubh Śloka, which the insertion of tasmât destroys. It is also easy to see how it came to be inserted. Every Ya*g*urvedî who read the passage would be reminded of the analogous passage of the Taittirîya Sa*m*hitâ VI, 5, 8, 2, 'tasmât striyo nirindriyâ adâyâdîr api pâpât pu*m*sa*h* upastitaram,' which in K. has actually been inserted after our Sûtra. In the Vedic Mantra 'tasmât' is required, and is certainly the genuine reading. Hence it seems to have been transferred into Baudhâyana's text, possibly by the mistake of some scribe who, according to the habit of his kind, took a marginal reference to the beginning of the Vedic passage for a correction of the text. In my opinion it must be thrown out. The sense of the half verse remains exactly the same. It corresponds to Manu IX, 18. According to Govindasvâmin and others its object is to show that women are incapable of inheriting, and the word dâya, 'portion,' must be taken in the sense of 'a share of the inheritance.' For a full discussion of this point, I refer to the Introductory Note on Book I, Chapter II, Sect. 14 of West and Bühler's Digest of H. L. C., third edition.

2. Manu VIII, 359.

3. Manu VIII, 362. I read conjecturally, 'saṃsargayanti te hyetâ niguptâs kâlayantyapi,' basing my emendations on Manu's text. The MSS. and Govinda have, saṃsargayanti tâ hyetân niguptâṃs kâlayanty api, which gives no good sense. Govinda explains kâraṇadârâḥ, 'the wives of minstrels,' by devadâsyaḥ, 'temple-slaves.'

10. Vasish*th*a XVII, 57–59. M. and the two copies of the commentary read pi*s*âkotpannaputrâ *k*a instead of vasâ *k*otpannaputrâ *k*a, 'a barren woman and one who has borne sons.' I follow the Dekhan and Gu*g*arât MSS., which undoubtedly give the genuine reading. Perhaps the term ava*s*âm, Vasish*th*a XVII, 57, should be corrected to va*s*âm.

I cannot come to any other conclusion than that the passage which precedes the words translated by me are a very ancient interpolation, caused by the embodiment of a portion of an old Bhâshya with the text, and that all our MSS., however much they may differ, go back to one codex archetypus.

Presents of money must be given, according to one's ability, to good Brâhmaṇas, Śrotriyas, and Vedapâragas, when they beg outside the Vedi, for the sake of Gurus, in order to defray (the expenses of) their marriages, or of medicine, or when they are distressed for a livelihood, or desirous to offer a sacrifice, or engaged in studying, or on a journey, or have performed a Viśvagit sacrifice.

3. This and the following six Sûtras are left out in M. and the two copies of the commentary. If they have, nevertheless, been received into the text, the reason is that similar rules occur in all Dharmasûtras, and that Sûtra 3 begins with astamite, while astamaye occurs in Sûtra 10. It seems therefore probable that the writer of the MS. from which M. and Govinda's copies are derived, skipped over a line by mistake.

meaning is that a bridegroom is to receive the honey-mixture when he comes to his father-in-law's house for his wedding, and an officiating priest when he comes to perform a sacrifice.

41. See e. g. Taittirîya Âraṇyaka VIII, 2.

2. Going to a (sacred) bathing-place, he shall bathe, in case he is impure; in case he is pure, he may, optionally, omit the bath. (But in either case) he shall wash his feet and hands. Sipping water and sprinkling himself, while he recites the (Ṛik-verses) containing the word Surabhi, the Abliṅgas, those addressed to Varu*ṇ*a, the Hira*ṇ*yavar*ṇ*as, the Pâvamânîs, the (sacred syllables called) Vyâh*ṛ*itis, and other purificatory (texts), he becomes pure (and fit to perform the twilight devotions).

3. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'Submersion in water (and) bathing are prescribed for all the (four) castes. But sprinkling (water over the body), while Mantras (are being recited), is the particular (duty) of the twice-born.'

4. He who sprinkles himself (with water) at the beginning of any sacred rite,—before the time of the twilight devotions,—while reciting that same collection of purificatory (texts), becomes pure.

5. Now they quote also (the following rules): Seated, with his face to the west, on Darbha grass and holding Darbha blades in his (right) hand, which

7. 2. 'A sacred bathing-place, i. e. a river or pond outside the village.'—Govinda. The same author adds that the hands must be washed as far as the wrist, that while sipping water the worshipper is to repeat in the evening, Taittirîya Âra*ṇ*yaka X, 31, and in the morning X, 32, and that if he bathes, Taittirîya Âra*ṇ*yaka X, 1, 12, and other texts must be recited. The Ṛik containing the word Surabhi is found Taittirîya Sa*ṃ*hitâ I, 5, 11, 4, 7; the three Abliṅgas, Taittirîya Âra*ṇ*yaka X, 1, 11; the four verses addressed to Varu*ṇ*a, Taittirîya Sa*ṃ*hitâ III, 4, 11, 4, and Taittirîya Âra*ṇ*yaka II, 4, 4. By the term Pâvamânîs the Pavamânânuvâka, Taittirîya Brâhma*ṇ*a I, 4, 8, is meant.

6. Or (he may recite the verse) one hundred times, suppressing his breath;

7. Or mentally ten times, adding the syllable Om at the beginning and at the end and the seven Vyâhṛitis.

8. And if he is tired by three suppressions of his breath (performed) with (the recitation of) the (Anuvâka called) Brahmahṛidaya (the heart of Brahman, then let him repeat the Sâvitrî).

9. In the evening he worships (the sun) with the two (verses) addressed to Varuṇa, 'Hear this my call, O Varuṇa,' and 'Therefore I go to thee.'

10. The same (rules apply to the twilight devotion) in the morning, (but the worshipper) shall face the east and stand upright.

11. In the day-time he worships (the sun) with the two (verses) addressed to Mitra, 'The glory of Mitra, who supports men,' and 'Mitra causes men to join.'

12. Let him begin (the twilight devotion) in the

6. Govinda states that prâṇâyâmasaḥ, 'suppressing his breath,' has in this Sûtra no technical meaning.

7. Govinda says that the order to be observed in this case is as follows: First the syllable Om is to be recited, next the seven Vyâhṛitis, beginning with Bhûḥ and ending with Satyam, then the Sâvitrî, and finally again the syllable Om.

8. The Brahmahṛidaya is Taittirîya Âraṇyaka X, 28. This Anuvâka may be repeated three times for each Prâṇâyâma (see Vasishṭha XXV, 13), or altogether nine times, and, if the worshipper is then tired, he may go on repeating the Sâvitrî without suppressing his breath.

morning very early, and finish it when the sun has risen.

13. Let him begin (the twilight devotion) in the evening, when (the sun) has set, (and finish it) very soon after (the appearance of the stars);

14. And the complete observance of the twilight devotions (produces as its reward) an uninterrupted succession of days and nights.

15. Now they quote with reference to this (subject) also the following two verses, which have been proclaimed by the Lord of created beings (Pragâpati): 'How can those twice-born men be called Brâhmaṇas who do not perform their twilight devotions, in the morning and in the evening at the proper time? At his pleasure a righteous king may appoint those Brâhmaṇas who neglect to daily perform the twilight devotions, both at morn and at eve, to do the work of Śûdras.'

16. If the time for the (twilight devotion) is allowed to pass in the evening, (the offender shall) fast during the night; and if it is neglected in the morning, he shall fast during the (next) day.

17. He obtains (thereby) the (same) reward as if he had remained standing and sitting (in the twilight).

18. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'Whatever sin (a man) may have committed with his organ, with his feet, with his arms, by thoughts or by speech, from (all) that he is freed by performing the twilight devotion in the evening.'

19. (The worshipper) becomes also connected

(thereby) with the (next) night, and Varu*n*a will not seize him.

20. In like manner he becomes free from the sin committed during the night by worshipping in the morning.

21. He is also connected with the (next) day, Mitra protects him and Âditya leads him up to heaven.

22. It is declared in the Veda, 'A Brâhma*n*a who in this same manner daily worships in the twilight, both at morn and at eve and, being sanctified by the Brahman, becoming one with the Brahman, and resplendent through the Brahman, follows the rules of the *S*âstra, gains the heaven of Brahman.'

1. Now, after washing his hands, he shall take his waterpot and a clod of earth, go to a (sacred) bathing-place and thrice clean his feet (with earth and water) and thrice his body.

2. Now some say, 'One must not enter a burial-ground, water, a temple, a cowpen, nor a place where Brâhma*n*as (sit) without having cleaned one's fee .'

8. 1. Vish*n*u LXIV, 18. This Adhyâya contains the rules for bathing, and the subject is introduced, as Govinda observes, because in the preceding chapter II, 4, 7, 2, it has been said that an impure person must bathe before he performs the twilight devotions. Govinda also states that the word *k*a, 'and,' which stands after m*r*itpi*n*dam, 'a clod,' indicates that gomaya, 'cowdung,' must also be employed.

3. Then he enters the water, (reciting the following verse): 'I take refuge with gold-horned Varu*n*a, give me at my request (O Varu*n*a) a purifying bathing-place. May Indra, Varu*n*a, Br*i*haspati, and Savit*ri* again and again cleanse me from all sin which I have committed by eating the food of unholy men, by receiving gifts from the wicked, and from all evil which I have done by thoughts, speeches, or deeds.'

4. Then he takes up water in his joined hands, (saying), 'May the waters and the herbs be propitious to us.'

5. (Next) he pours (the water) out in that direction in which an enemy of his dwells, (saying), 'May they work woe to him who hates us and whom we hate.'

6. Then he sips water, and thrice makes the water eddy around himself turning from the left to the right (and saying), 'May that which is hurtful, which is impure, and which is inauspicious in the water be removed.'

7. After having submerged himself and having emerged from the water,

9. If (the water used for bathing) has been (taken from a) confined (place, such as a well), he worships it with the following (Mantra): 'Adoration to Agni, the lord of the waters; adoration to Indra; adoration to Varu*n*a; adoration to Vârun*î*; adoration to the waters.'

10. After having ascended the bank and having sipped water, let him again sip water, though he has done so before, (and recite the following Mantras): 'May water purify the earth, may the purified earth purify me, may Brahma*n*aspati (and) Brâhman purify, may the purified (earth) purify me. May water purify me, (taking away) all (the guilt which I incurred by eating) remnants of food, and forbidden food, (by committing) evil deeds, (by) receiving gifts from wicked men, Svâhâ!'

11. Making two Pavitras he rubs (his body) with water. Having rubbed himself, (reciting the) three (verses), 'Ye waters are,' &c., the four (verses), 'The golden-coloured, pure, purifying,' &c., (and) the Anuvâka, 'He who purifies,' &c., he performs, stepping back into the water, three Prâ*n*âyâmas with the Aghamarsha*n*a (hymn); then he ascends the bank, squeezes (the water) out of his dress, puts on garments which have been washed and dried in the air and which are not the worse for wear, sips water,

9. Taittirîya Âra*n*yaka X, 1, 12.

3. I. e. the water must be poured out in accordance with the rule given above.

4. Vâ*g*asaneyi Sa*m*hitâ II, 34. The translation of the Mantra follows Govinda's explanation.

Mantra): '(Ye waters), who bring food, ambrosia, clarified butter, milk, and barley-gruel, are food for the manes; satiate my ancestors! May you be satiated, may you be satiated!'

5. Let him not perform ceremonies in honour of the gods while his clothes are wet, or while he is dressed in one garment only;

6. Nor those connected with the manes. That (is the opinion) of some (teachers).

PRAŚNA II, ADHYÂYA 6, KAṆDIKÂ 11.

1. Now these five great sacrifices, which are also called the great sacrificial sessions, are the sacrifice to be offered to the gods, the sacrifice to be offered to the manes, the sacrifice to be offered to all beings, the sacrifice to be offered to men, (and) the sacrifice to be offered to Brahman,

2. Let him daily offer (something to the gods with the exclamation) Svâhâ, be it only a piece of fuel. Thereby he performs that sacrifice to the gods.

3. Let him daily offer (something to the manes with the exclamation) Svadhâ, be it only a vessel filled with water. Thereby he performs that sacrifice to the manes.

4. Let him daily pay reverence to (all beings) endowed with life. Thereby he performs that sacrifice to the beings.

11. 1. This and the next four Sûtras agree almost literally with Śatapatha-brâhmaṇa XI, 5, 6, 1. See also Taitt. Âraṇyaka II, 10; Âpastamba I, 4, 12, 15–13, 1.

4. Govinda says that the Mantra is to be 'bhûtebhyo namaḥ, adoration to all beings,' and adds that some consider the first three

5. Let him daily give food to Brâhmaṇas, be it only roots, fruit, or vegetables. Thereby he performs that sacrifice to men.

6. Let him daily recite the Veda privately, be it only the syllable Om or the Vyâhṛitis. Thereby he performs that sacrifice to be offered to Brahman.

7. 'The private recitation of the Veda is, indeed, the sacrifice to Brahman. At that sacrifice to Brahman speech, forsooth, (takes the place of) the Guhû, the internal organ (that of) the Upabhṛit, the eye (that of) the Dhruvâ, the understanding (that of) the Sruva, truth (that of) the final bath, heaven (is) the conclusion of the sacrifice. He who, knowing this, daily recites the Veda to himself, gains as much heavenly bliss as, and more than, he who gives away this whole earth that is filled with wealth, and imperishable (beatitude), and conquers death. Therefore the Veda should be recited in private. Thus speaks the Brâhmaṇa.'

8. Now they quote also (the following passage): 'If, well anointed, well fed, and lying on a comfortable couch, one recites (the portion of the Veda referring to) any sacrifice, one has offered it thereby.'

Mahâyagñas to be performed by the Vaiśvadeva and the Bali-offering, while others enjoin their separate performance.

7. Śatapatha-brâhmaṇa XI, 5, 6, 2. See also Taitt. Âraṇyaka II, 17. K. reads dhṛitir dhruvâ, 'the firm resolve (takes the place of) the Dhruvâ,' which is apparently a correction made according to the Âraṇyaka. According to the commentary the text of the last portion of the quotation runs thus, 'yâvantaṃ ha vâ imâṃ vittasya pûrṇâṃ dadat svargaṃ lokaṃ gayati tâvantaṃ lokaṃ gayati bhûyâṃsaṃ kâkshayyaṃ kâpa mṛityum gayati ya evaṃ vidvân,' &c. M. and K. do not give the whole passage. The published text of the Śatapatha-brâhmaṇa slightly differs from Govinda's version.

8. Śatapatha-brâhmaṇa XI, 5, 7, 3-4.

9. Some (teachers) declare (that there is a text) which teaches a fourfold division of these sacred duties. (But) as no (other meaning is) perceptible, (the text) 'Four paths,' &c., refers to sacrificial rites.

10. (Viz.) to Ishṭis, animal sacrifices, Soma sacrifices, and Darvîhomas.

11. The following (Ṛik) declares that, 'Four paths, leading to the world of the gods, go severally from the earth to heaven. All ye gods, place us on that among them which will gain us undecaying prosperity.'

12. The student, the householder, the hermit in the woods, the ascetic (constitute the four orders).

13. A student (shall) obey his teacher until death.

9. I read the text as follows, 'tasya ha vâ etasya dharmasya *k*aturdhâ bhedam eka âhu*ḥ*.' M. has bhedakam, the I. O. copy of the commentary bheda*s*aṅkâm, and K. tasya ha vâ etasya ya*gñ*asyâ*k*aturdhâ bhûtam eka âhu*ḥ*. Below in the commentary on Sûtra 27, Govinda repeats the latter part of this Sûtra in the form which I have adopted. The discussion which begins here is the same as that which occurs Âpastamba II, 9, 23, 3–24, 15.

11. Taittirîya Sa*m*hitâ V, 7, 2, 3.

12. K. omits this Sûtra. After it M. and K. have the following passage: 'brahma*k*âri*n*o 'tyantam âtmânam upasa*mgṛ*ihyâ '*k*âryân bruvate vane *s*râmyantyeke [yâ*m*tyete, K.] savaneshvapa upasp*ṛis*anto vanyenânnenaikâgni*m* [nyenânnena naikâgni*m*, K.; vânyenaikâna*ñ*, M.] *g*uhvânâ*ḥ* [*g*uhvâs, M.] satyasyaike karmâ*n*i [karma*n*i, M.] anagnayo 'niketanâ*ḥ* [tvâ*ḥ* ka*m*, K.] kaupînâ*kkh*âdanâ varshâsv ekasthâ uddh*ṛi*taparipûtâbhir adbhi*ḥ* kârya*m* [apakârya*m*, M.] kurvâ*n*â*ḥ* [kurvâ*n*âs tatrodâharanti, K.] sannamusale vya*ṅg*âre niv*ṛi*ta*s*arâvasampâte bhikshanta*ḥ* sarvata*ḥ* parimoksham [parimeke, M.] apavidhya vaidikâni karmâ*n*y abhayata*ḥ* pari*kkh*innâ madhyamam padam upa*s*lishyâmaha iti vadanto.' The commentary gives a few portions of this passage further on. Irrespective of minor corruptions, it gives no sense in the place where it stands, and it seems probable that we have to deal with a confused and badly corrupted text, which Govinda arranged either as seemed good to him, or on the authority of better MSS.

14. A hermit is he who regulates his conduct entirely according to the Institutes proclaimed by Vikhanas.

15. A Vaikhânasa (shall live) in the forest, subsisting on roots and fruit, practising austerities and bathing at morn, noon, and eve; he shall kindle a fire according to the Srâmaṇaka (rule); he shall eat wild-growing (vegetables and grain) only; he shall worship gods, manes, Bhûtas, men, and *Ri*shis; he shall receive hospitably (men of) all (castes) except those (with whom intercourse is) forbidden; he may even use the flesh of animals killed by carnivorous beasts; he shall not step on ploughed (land); and he shall not enter a village; he shall wear his hair in braids, and dress in (garments made of) bark or skins; he shall not eat anything that has been hoarded for more than a year.

16. An ascetic shall leave his relatives and, not attended by any one nor procuring any property, depart (from his house performing the customary ceremony) according to the rule.

17. He shall go into the forest (and live there).

18. He shall shave his hair excepting the top-lock.

15. This passage, which Govinda gives as one Sûtra, agrees word for word with Gautama III, 26–35, except in the beginning, where Gautama omits 'bathing at morn, noon, and eve.' The MSS. all read bhaiksham, 'begged food,' instead of baishkam, 'the flesh of animals slain by carnivorous beasts.' But Govinda's explanation leaves no doubt as to the correctness of the latter reading. The Dekhan and Gugarât MSS., including K., read agrâmyabhogî ‖ agrâmyabhogi.

16. I adopt the readings of the Dekhan MSS., aparigraha*ḥ* (for apratigraha*ḥ*) and pravra*g*et (for parivra*g*et). The rule for the ceremony is given below, II, 10, 17.

18. This is Govinda's explanation of sikhâmuṇḍaḥ, the reading of all MSS.

19. He shall wear a cloth to cover his nakedness.

20. He shall reside in one place during the rainy season.

21. He shall wear a dress dyed yellowish-red.

22. He shall go to beg when the pestle lies motionless, when the embers have been extinguished, and when the cleaning of the dishes has been finished.

23. With the three means of punishment, (viz.) words, thoughts, and acts, he shall not injure created beings.

24. He shall carry a cloth for straining water for the sake of purification.

25. He shall perform the necessary purifications with water which has been taken out (of a well or tank) and has been strained.

26. (Ascetics shall) say, 'Renouncing the works taught in the Veda, cut off from both (worlds), we attach ourselves to the central sphere (Brahman).'

27. But the venerable teacher (declares) that there is one order only, because the others do not beget offspring.

28. With reference to this matter they quote also (the following passage): 'There was, forsooth, an Âsura, Kapila by name, the son of Prahlâda.

20 and 22. These two Sûtras are omitted in K. and M., which give them in the passage following Sûtra 12, as well as in the Dekhan and Gugarât MSS.

24. See below, II, 10, 17, 11. Govinda explains pavitra, 'a cloth for straining water,' by 'a bunch of Kusa grass for removing insects from the road.'

25. According to Govinda such water is to be used for washing off the stains of urine &c., not for drinking.

26. This Sûtra is again omitted in the MSS. of the text. M. and K. give it in the passage following Sûtra 12.

27. Gautama III, 36.

Striving with the gods, he made these divisions. A wise man should not take heed of them.'

29. Because no (other meaning is) perceptible, (the text) 'Four paths,' &c., refers to sacrificial rites, (viz.) to Ishṭis, animal sacrifices, Soma sacrifices, Darvîhomas.

30. With respect to this (question the following verse also) is quoted: 'That eternal greatness of the Brâhmaṇa is neither increased by works, nor diminished. The soul knows the nature of that (greatness); knowing that, he is not stained by evil deeds.'

31. If he says that, (let him reflect on the following verse): 'He who knows not the Veda, does not at death think of that great, all-perceiving soul, through which the sun, resplendent with brilliancy, gives warmth, and the father has a father through the son at his birth from the womb.'

32. (Moreover), 'Those who, being neither true Brâhmaṇas nor performers of Soma sacrifices, work not for that which is near, nor for that which is far, take hold of the word and with sinful (speech) ignorantly perform the rites.'

33. There are innumerable (passages in the Veda) which refer to the debts (to be paid by a Brâhmaṇa), such as, 'May I obtain, O Agni, immor-

32. Rig-veda X, 71, 9. My rendering of the difficult verse is merely tentative, and I have left out the word sirîḥ, for which I am as little able as other Sanskritists to offer a safe explanation. The general meaning of the verse, I think, has been rightly understood by Sâyaṇa and Govinda, who both say that it contains a reproach, addressed to those Brâhmaṇas who, contented with the letter of the Veda, do not master its meaning.

33–34. The commentary omits these two Sûtras, which, however, seem necessary for the completion of the discussion. The

PRASNA II, ADHYÂYA 7, KANDIKÂ 12.

1. Now we will explain the oblations (offered) to the vital air (prâṇa) by Sâlînas (householders) and Yâyâvaras (vagrants), who sacrifice to the soul.

2. At the end of all the necessary (daily rites), let him sit down, facing the east, in a place that has been well cleaned and smeared with cowdung; next let him worship that prepared (food) which is being brought, (saying), 'Bhûḥ, Bhuvaḥ, Svaḥ, Om,' (and then) remain silent.

3. (Next) he pours water round the food which has been placed (before him), turning his right hand towards it, and reciting the Mahâvyâhṛitis; (afterwards), continuing to hold (the dish) with his left hand, he first drinks water, (saying), 'Thou art a substratum for ambrosia,' and (finally) offers five oblations of food to the vital airs, (reciting the second occurs also Âpastamba II, 9, 24, 8. Though Baudhâyana does not express himself as clearly as Âpastamba, he disapproves, as it would seem, like the latter, of the opinion of those who gave an undue preference to asceticism at the expense of married life, the order of the householders.

12. 1. The Prâṇâgnihotra is alluded to by Âpastamba II, 7, 17, 16. Regarding the terms Sâlîna and Yâyâvara, see below, III, 1, 3–4.

4. After offering the five oblations of food to the vital airs, let him finish his meal silently. Meditating in his heart on the lord of created beings, let him not emit speech while (eating).

5. If he emits speech, he shall mutter 'Bhûḥ, Bhuvaḥ, Svaḥ, Om,' and afterwards continue to eat.

6. Now they quote also (the following rule): 'If he sees (bits of) skin, hair, nail-(parings), insects, or the dung of rats (in his food), he shall take out a lump, sprinkle that spot with water, scatter ashes on it, again sprinkle it with water, and use (the remainder of the food), after it has been declared fit (for use).'

7. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'He shall eat, seated with his face towards the east, silent, not despising his food, not scattering (fragments on the ground), and solely attend (to his dinner); and, after he has eaten, he shall touch fire.'

8. He shall not cut off with his teeth (pieces from) eatables (that must be swallowed) entire, (such as) cakes, bulbs, roots, fruit, and flesh.

9. (Let him) not (eat) to repletion.

10. After (dinner) he shall drink water, (reciting the text), 'Thou art a covering for ambrosia,' and stroke (the region of) the heart, (saying), 'Thou art the bond that connects the vital airs; (thou art)

After sipping water a second time, he allows (the drops from) the hand to flow on the big toe of his right foot (and recites the following text): 'May the male be pleased, he who is of the size of a thumb, who occupies (a space of the size of) a thumb, who is the lord of the whole world, masterful, and the enjoyer of the universe.'

12. Let him perform the subsequent consecration (anumantra*ṇ*a) of the (food which has been) offered, with raised arms, (and let him recite) the five (texts beginning), 'With faith, worshipping Prâ*ṇ*a, (I have) offered ambrosia; mayest thou increase Prâ*ṇ*a through this food,'

14. And let him (meditate on his) soul (as) united with the imperishable (syllable Om).

14. The syllable Om is Brahman, the universal soul.

3. Let him daily, both in the morning and in the evening, sacrifice in this manner;

But he who eats first, without having given (food) to those (persons) according to the rule, does not know that he is being eaten. He does not eat, (but) he is eaten.'

6. 'Let him eat silently what remains, (after he has given their portions) to the manes, the gods, the servants, his parents, and his Gurus; that is declared to be the rule of the sacred law.'

7. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'Eight mouthfuls are the meal of an ascetic, sixteen that of a hermit in the woods, thirty-two that of a householder, and an unlimited (quantity) that of a student.'

11. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'He who never eats between the morning and the evening meals, (obtains the same reward as he who) constantly fasts.'

12. 'As in case one obtains no materials (for the sacrifice), one must mutter the sacred texts to be recited at the Agnihotra, offered in the three fires, even so one should mutter the texts to be recited at the Prâṇâgnihotra, when one is prevented from dining.'

13. 'He who acts thus, will become one with Brahman.' Thus spake Pragâpati (the lord of created beings).

PRASNA II, ADHYÂYA 8, KANDIKÂ 14.

1. The offering to the manes secures long life and heaven, is worthy of praise and a rite ensuring prosperity.

2. Persons who sanctify the company are, a Trimadhu, a Triṇâkiketa, a Trisuparṇa, one who keeps five fires, and one who knows the six Aṅgas, one who performs the vow called Siras, one who knows the Gyeshṭhasâman, (and) a Snâtaka;

5. Let him who feeds (Brâhma*ṇa*s at a funeral sacrifice) cause them to hear successively the Rakshoghna Sâmans, the Yagus-formulas (called) Svadhâvat, the *Ṛi*k-yerses (called) Madhu, and the (texts called) Pavitras.

6. Having invited on the day before (the Śrâddha), or just in the morning, virtuous, pure (men), such as Trimadhus, who know the Vedâṅgas and the sacred texts, who are not related by marriage, nor members of the same family, nor connected through the Veda, at least three, (but always) an odd number, the (sacrificer) makes them sit down on prepared seats, covered with Darbha grass, facing the east or the north.

7. Then he offers to them water mixed with sesamum seed, adorns them with scents and garlands (and says), 'I wish to offer oblations in the fire.'

Âra*ṇ*yakas are preferable to those mentioned in the preceding Sûtra, and thus the order must be reversed.

4. Âpastamba II, 7, 17, 5.

5. The texts on which the Rakshoghna Sâmans are based occur Sâma-veda I, 1, 1, 3, 4–6; the Svadhâvat Yagus, Taitt. Brâhma*ṇa* I, 3, 10, 2; the Madhu *Ṛi*kas, Rig-veda I, 90, 6; and the three Pavitras, Taitt. Brâhma*ṇa* I, 4, 8, 2.

6. Âpastamba II, 7, 14, 5. All the MSS., including those of the commentary, read yonigotramantrasambandhân instead of yonigotramantrâsambandhân. But the explanation of gotrasambandhâ*ḥ* by asagotrâ*ḥ* shows still a faint trace of the former existence of the reading which I have restored conjecturally and translated. Its correctness is proved by the parallel passage of Âpastamba.

7. Vish*ṇ*u LXXIII, 12–13; Manu III, 208–211. The Agnimukha

When he has received permission (to do so), he heaps fuel on the sacred fire, scatters Kuśa grass around it, performs (all the ceremonies) up to the end of the Agnimukha, and offers three burnt oblations of food only, (reciting the following texts): 'To Soma, accompanied by the manes, Svâhâ!' 'To Yama, accompanied by the Aṅgiras and by the manes, Svâhâ!' 'To Agni, who carries the offerings to the manes, who causes sacrifices to be well performed, Svâhâ!'

8. He shall make these three oblations with food only which has been sprinkled with the remainder of the (clarified butter).

9. Let him give a cake of food to the birds.

10. For it is declared in the Veda, 'The manes roam about in the shape of birds.'

11. Next he touches the (other food) with his hand and with the thumb,

12. (And recites the following texts): 'Fire sees thee, who art co-extensive with the earth, the Ṛik-verses are thy greatness, lest the gift be in vain; the earth is the vessel for thee, the sky the cover; I offer thee in the mouth of Brahman, I offer thee in the Prâṇa and the Apâna of learned Brâhmaṇas; thou art imperishable, mayest thou never fail to (the manes of our) fathers yonder, in the other world.' 'Air hears thee, who art co-extensive with the middle sphere, readings are clearly corrupt, and so is the var. lect. of the Gṛihya-saṃgraha, quoted in the Petersburg Dictionary, piṇḍatarkukâḥ. Piṇḍatakshakâḥ, 'the cutters or parers of the cakes,' is appropriate, because the remoter ancestors, who, as Govinda too declares, are meant by the term, obtain the fragments of the funeral cakes.

The commentary does not notice it, and it seems to me that it needlessly interrupts the context.

The same two MSS., further, insert the following Sûtras: tasmât putra*m k*otpâdyâtmânam evotpâdayatîti | vi*g*ñâyate *k*âtmâ vai putranâmâsîti | eva*m* dvitîya âtmâ *g*îvatâ drash*t*avyo ya*h* putram utpâdayati | sa tathâ bhavati | tasmân nâtmâ kva*k*id akshetra utsrash*t*avya*h* | âtmânam avamanyate hi | yathâtmânam utpâdayati sa tathâ bhavati | tasmâd âdita eva kshetram anvi*kkh*et sarvavar*n*e sa*m*skri*t*am upade*s*ena | tasmin dârasa*m*yoge pra*g*âm utpâdayed || 'Therefore (they say) that he who begets a son produces even his own self; and it is declared in the Veda, "Thou art self, called a son." For (he who does that) despises himself. He becomes even so, as he produces himself. Therefore (every man), each in his own caste, should first look out for a female who has been sanctified according to the injunction (of the sacred texts). Taking her to be his wedded wife, he shall beget a son.' It is possible that this passage really belongs to Baudhâyana, for it is written in the usual style of our Sûtra, and the last word of this passage as well as of Sûtra 11, as given in the Dekhan MSS., is utpâdayet. But it is not absolutely required by the context, and the commentary too omits it.

7. See above, II, 6, 11, 30. 11. Yâgñavalkya III, 58–60.

14. This part of the ceremony is called Sâvitrîpraveśa, 'entering the Sâvitrî.' According to the Dharmasindhu, fol. 84 a, l. 8, the last Mantra is 'Om, Bhûḥ, Bhuvaḥ, Svaḥ, I enter the Sâvitrî; we meditate on that adorable light of divine Savitṛi, who may impel our thoughts.'

15. It is declared in the Veda, 'Entering order after order, (man) becomes (one with) Brahman.'

16. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'He who has passed from order to order, has offered burnt oblations and kept his organs in subjection, becomes afterwards, tired with (giving) alms and (making) offerings, an ascetic.'

17. Such an ascetic (becomes one with) the infinite (Brahman).

18. Before the sun sets, he heaps fuel on the Gârhapatya fire, brings the Anvâhâryapaka*n*a fire (to the spot), takes the flaming Âhavanîya fire out (of the Gârhapatya), melts butter on the Gârhapatya fire, cleanses it (with Kusa grass), takes four times (portions of it) in the sacrificial spoon (called Sruk), and offers in the Âhavanîya fire on which sacred fuel has been heaped, (four times) a full oblation, (saying), 'Om, Svâhâ!'

19. It is declared in the Veda that this (offering is) the Brahmânvâdhâna (putting fuel on the sacred fires for the sake of the universal soul).

20. Now in the evening, after the Agnihotra has been offered, he scatters grass to the north of the Gârhapatya fire, places the sacrificial vessels in pairs, the upper part turned downwards, on it, strews Darbha grass to the south of the Âhavanîya fire on the seat destined for the Brahman priest, covers

16. Manu VI, 34.

18. Anvâhâryapaka*n*a is another name of the so-called Dakshi*n*âgni, in which the sacrificial viands are cooked. The cleansing of the butter (utpavana) is performed by taking hold of the ends of blades of Kusa grass and dipping the bent middle part into the melted butter and then drawing it upwards. A full burnt oblation (pûr*n*âhuti) consists of a whole spoonful. As four spoonfuls are to be taken out, it follows that four oblations are to be offered.

21. A Brâhmaṇa who, knowing this, dies after fasting during the night of Brahman and repositing within himself the sacred fires, conquers all guilt, even (that of) killing a Brâhmaṇa.

22. Then he rises in the muhûrta sacred to Brahman, and offers the early Agnihotra just at the (appointed) time.

23. Next, after covering the (part of the altar called) Pṛishṭhyâ and bringing water, he prepares (an offering) to (Agni) Vaiśvânara (which is cooked) in twelve potsherds. That (well-)known Iṣṭi is the last (which he performs).

24. Afterwards he throws the sacrificial vessels, which are neither made of earth nor of stone, into the Âhavanîya fire,

25. (And) throwing the two Araṇis into the Gârhapatya fire (with the words), 'May ye be of one mind with us,' he reposits the sacred fires in himself.

26. (Reciting the sacred text), 'O Fire, that body of thine, which is fit for the sacrifice,' he inhales the smell of (the smoke of) each fire thrice three times.

27. Then, standing within the sacrificial enclosure, (he says) thrice in a low voice and thrice aloud, 'Om, Bhûḥ, Bhuvaḥ, Svaḥ, I have entered the order of ascetics, I have entered the order of ascetics, I have entered the order of ascetics.'

21. The night during which the ascetic keeps watch near the fires is called 'the night of Brahman.'

25. The Araṇis are the two pieces of wood used for producing fire by friction, Taittirîya Saṃhitâ I, 3, 7, 1–2.

28. It is declared in the Veda, 'The gods are trebly true.'

29. (Finally) he pours out as much water as will fill his joined hands, (saying), 'I promise not to injure any living being.'

30. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'An ascetic who roams about after having given a promise of safety to all living beings, is not threatened with danger by any creature.'

31. (Henceforth) he must restrain his speech.

32. He grasps his staff, (saying), '(Thou art my) friend, protect me.'

33. He takes the rope, (reciting the verse), 'The brilliant light,' &c.

34. He takes the cloth for straining water, (reciting the text), 'With which means of purification the gods,' &c.

35. He takes the waterpot, (reciting the verse), 'Through that light, by which the gods rose on high,' &c.

36. He takes the alms-bowl, (reciting the Vyâhṛitis).

29. All gifts must be confirmed by a libation of water, which in other cases is poured into the hand of the recipient. The ceremony proves more clearly even than the numerous other passages of the Smṛitis, in which ascetics are exhorted to abstain from injuring living beings, that the so-called ahiṃsâ doctrine is not of Buddhistic, but of Brâhmanical origin.

Entering the water, he performs sixteen suppressions of the breath, (mentally repeating) the Aghamarshana hymn, ascends the bank, wrings out his dress, puts on another pure dress, sips water, takes the cloth for straining, (saying), 'Om, Bhûḥ, Bhuvaḥ, Svaḥ,' and performs the Tarpana (with the following texts), 'Om, Bhûḥ, I satiate,' 'Om, Bhuvaḥ —, Om, Svaḥ —, Om, Mahaḥ —, Om, Ganaḥ —, Om, Tapaḥ —, Om, Satyam —.'

38. He takes up as much water as his joined hands will hold for the manes, (and satiates them with it) exactly in the same manner as the gods, (saying), 'Om, Bhûḥ Svadhâ, Om, Bhuvaḥ Svadhâ,' &c.

39. Then he worships the sun, (reciting) the two verses (which begin), 'Ud u tyam kitram,' &c.

40. (Saying), 'Om, this (syllable Om), forsooth, is Brahman; this (syllable) which sheds warmth is light; this which gives warmth is the Veda; this must be known as that which sheds warmth;' he thus satiates the soul (and afterwards) worships the soul (with these texts), 'The soul (is) Brahman, (is) light.'

38. 'In the same manner as the gods,' i. e. without passing the sacred string over the right shoulder.—Govinda.

40. The Gugarât and Dekhan MSS., including K., place after the first Om two additional Mantras, 'Brahman (is) Om; this universe (is) Om.' The object of the Mantras given in the Madras MSS. is to identify the Pranava with the Brahman, the sun, and the Veda.

42. (Saying), 'Bhûḥ, Bhuvaḥ, Suvaḥ,' he takes up the cloth for straining, (and) fetches water.

1. Now the following vows are (to be kept by an ascetic):

2. Abstention from injuring living beings, truthfulness, abstention from appropriating the property of others, continence, (and) liberality.

43. Manu VI, 46. Aparipûtâbhiḥ, 'which has not been completely cleansed,' probably refers to the so-called dṛishṭyâ paripavana, 'carefully looking at it in order to see if any living being remains in it.'

18. 2. The five vows (vratas) named here are the principal ones. As to the vow of 'liberality' Govinda remarks that though the ascetic possesses no 'store' and no property in the ordinary sense of the word, still he can have books and give those away.

5. Let him ask (for it), prefacing (his request with the word) Bhavat.

6. Let him stand begging no longer than the time required for milking a cow.

7. When he returns from begging, he lays (the alms) down in a pure place, washes his hands and feet, and announces (what he obtained) to the sun, (reciting the text), 'Ud u tyaṃ ketram,' &c. He (also) announces it to Brahman (with the text), 'The first-born Brahman,' &c.

8. It is declared in the Veda, 'After the Brahmâdhâna the sacrificer himself (contains) the sacrificial fires. His respiration (prâṇa, represents) the Gârhapatya fire, the air that goes downwards (apâna, represents) the Anvâhâryapaćana (or Dakshiṇa) fire, the circulation in the body (vyâna, represents) the Âhavanîya fire, the cerebral circulation (udâna) and the abdominal circulation (samâna, represent) the Sabhya and Âvasathya fires. These five fires are abiding in the soul. He (therefore) offers (the oblations) in the soul alone.'

11. After he has eaten and sipped water, he mutters (the texts), 'Out of darkness we,' &c., (and), 'My speech resides in the mouth,' &c., and worships the sun with the (verse called) *G*yotishmatî.

12. Let him eat food, given without asking, regarding which nothing has been settled beforehand and which has reached him accidentally, so much only as is sufficient to sustain life.

13. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'Eight mouthfuls (make) the meal of an ascetic, sixteen (that) of a hermit in the woods, thirty-two (that) of a householder, an unlimited (quantity that) of a student.'

14. 'Alms (may) either (be obtained) from (men of) the three castes, or the food (given) by a single Brâhma*n*a (may be eaten); or (he may obtain food) from (men of) all castes, and not (eat) that given by a single Brâhma*n*a.'

15. Now they quote (the following special rules) for the case that the teachers explain (the doctrine) of the Upanishads: 'Diligently standing (in the day-time), keeping silence, sitting (at night) with crossed legs, bathing three times a day, and eating

11. The first text occurs frequently in the Taittirîya-veda, e. g. Taittirîya Sa*m*hitâ IV, 1, 7, 4; the second, Taittirîya Âra*n*yaka X, 72. The *G*yotishmatî is, according to Govinda, the first of the two Mantras quoted.

12. According to Govinda this verse gives the opinion of 'some' teachers, not the author's. Asa*mk*liptam, 'regarding which nothing has been settled beforehand,' indicates, according to Govinda, that the ascetic must not even mentally determine what he is going to eat.

13. See above, II, 7, 13, 7.

at the fourth, sixth, or eighth (meal-time only), he shall subsist entirely on (rice) grains, oil-cake, food prepared from barley, sour milk, (and) milk.'

16. It is declared in the Veda, 'On that (occasion) he shall rigidly keep silence; pressing the teeth together he may converse, without opening his mouth, as much as is necessary with teachers deeply versed in the three Vedas (and) with ascetics possessing a great knowledge of the scriptures, not with women, nor when he would break (his vow).'

17. (Let him keep) only one of (the rules which enjoin) standing (in the day-time), rigid silence, and sitting (at night) with crossed legs; let him not keep all three together.

18. It is declared in the Veda, 'And he who has gone there may eat, in times of distress, a small quantity of the food prescribed by his vow after (having partaken of other dishes), provided he does not break (his vow).'

19. 'Eight (things) do not cause him who is intent on standing (in the day-time), keeping rigid silence, sitting (at night) with crossed legs, bathing three times a day, and (eating) at the fourth, sixth, or eighth meal-time only, to break his vow, (viz.) water, roots, clarified butter, milk, sacrificial food, the wish of a Brâhmaṇa, an order of his teacher, and medicine.'

24. 'Thus (an ascetic) shall not give up the Veda, (but live), until he is liberated from the body, at the root of the tree.'

22. Âpastamba II, 9, 21, 10.

23. This and the next Sûtras are intended to teach that ascetics may limit their private recitation to the repetition of the pra*n*ava, 'the syllable Om.' According to Govinda the passage of the Veda quoted refers originally to the *K*aturhotâra*h*, which the Taittirîya Brâhma*n*a II, 2, 1, 4, and III, 12, 5, 1 identifies with the Brahman, and where the pratigara, the answer of the Adhvaryu priest, is 'Om hota*h*' (Aitareya Brâhma*n*a V, 25).

24. I have taken v*ri*kshamûlikovedasa*m*nyâsî to stand for v*ri*kshamûliko avedasa*m*nyasî. For the vedasa*m*nyâsa, 'giving up the Veda,' is not permitted to an ascetic; see e. g. Vasish*th*a X, 4. But even without the negative particle vedasa*m*nyâsî may convey a sense not opposed to the general teaching of the Sm*ri*tis. For it may be taken to mean 'abandoning (the recitation of other portions of) the Veda.'

fit (to be united with) Brahman.' Thus spake the lord of created beings.

27. Let him cleanse the vessel of Brahman with the seven Vyâhṛitis.

PRASNA III, ADHYÂYA 1.

1. Now, therefore, (we will speak) of those who desire (to fulfil) the duties of Śâlînas (dwellers in houses), Yâyâvaras (wanderers), and Kakrakaras (circle-goers), who subsist by nine (different) means of livelihood.

2. The term 'livelihood' (vṛitti) is used because they subsist thereby (tadvartanât).

3. The word Śâlîna (is used) because they dwell in houses (śâlâ).

4. To be a Yâyâvara (means that one) goes on by means of a most excellent livelihood (vṛittyâ varayâ yâti).

5. The term Kakrakara is derived from going by turns (to the houses of rich men).

6. We will explain those (above-mentioned means of livelihood) in their proper order.

7. They are nine, (viz.) Shaṇṇivartanî, Kauddâlî, Dhruvâ, Samprakshâlanî, Samûhâ, Pâlanî, Śiloñchâ, Kapotâ, and Siddhoñchâ.

27. Govinda is uncertain if the term brahmabhâgana, 'the vessel of Brahman,' refers to the alms-bowl or to the body of the ascetic. Probably both are meant, and the Sûtra is intended to prescribe the frequent recitation of the Vyâhṛitis in addition to the syllable Om.

1. 5. Govinda says that Kakrakara is another name for Yâyâvara, and that anukramakaraṇa, 'going by turns,' means going successively to the houses of Brâhmaṇas, Kshatriyas, and Vaiśyas.

7. The terms left untranslated are fully explained in the next

12. He desires to go forth, after having offered a Traidhâtavîya (offering) or a Vaiśvânarî (iṣṭi).

13. Now on the (following) morning, after the sun has risen, he makes the sacred fires burn brightly, melts butter on the Gârhapatya fire, cleanses it (with Kuśa grass), heats the (spoons called) Sruk and Sruva, cleans (them), takes out four (spoonfuls of butter) in the Sruk, and offers the Vâstoshpatîya (oblation) in the Âhavanîya fire according to (the rules of his) Sûtra.

chapter. All the MSS. read kauntâlî for kauddâlî, which occurs in the commentary alone.

11. The vîvadha, 'a yoke for carrying burdens,' consists usually of a bamboo pole, to the ends of which two ropes are attached for fastening the loads. Kuthahârî, 'a sickle,' seems to be the name of a particular kind of sickle, since Govinda explains it by vâsa-vaśâsanadâtram. He adds that the term includes 'a spade' (kuddâla) and other implements.

12. The meaning is that on the evening before his departure from the old home he is to offer the Traidhâtavîya-homa. According to the Śrauta-sûtras (see the Petersb. Dict. s. v. traidhâtavî) the latter offering always occurs at the end of a great sacrifice. Hence it is appropriate for a person who wishes to begin a new mode of life.

13. This is the leave-taking from the old dwelling.

14. Having recited the Puronuvâkyâ (verse), 'O lord of the dwelling, permit us,' &c., he offers (the oblation) with the Yâgyâ verse, 'O lord of the dwelling, with thy kind company,' &c.

15. Some (declare that) every person who has kindled the sacred fires (shall offer these Homas).

16. Others (say that) a Yâyâvara alone (shall do it).

17. After departing (from his house), he stops at the extremity of the village, or at the extremity of the boundary of the village, builds there a hut or a cottage, and enters that.

18. Let him use the skin of the black antelope and the other (objects) which he has prepared for the several purposes which they are intended to serve.

19. Known (is) the (duty of) serving the fires; known (is) the (duty of) offering the new and full moon sacrifices; known (is) the successive performance of the five Mahâyagñas; it is seen that the vegetables, which have been produced, are offered.

20. He hallows those (vegetables), either (reciting the text), 'I offer what is agreeable to all the gods,' or silently, and cooks (them).

14. The two verses occur Taittirîya Saṃhitâ III, 4, 10, 1. It is specially mentioned by Sâyaṇa that the two verses have to be recited by an Agnihotrin on departing from his home.

17. Maṭha, 'a cottage,' is, according to Govinda, a house resting on many posts or pillars, while kuṭî is the simple shed with four posts and a roof of leaves.

19. The last clause, probably, is meant to prescribe a simpler form of the Vaiśvadeva.

20. Govinda adds that the meaning is that the sacrificer shall eat the boiled rice in silence.

21. For such (a man the duty of) teaching, sacrificing for others, accepting gifts, and (performing) other sacrifices (than those mentioned) ceases.

22. (The use of) sacrificial food fit to be eaten during the performance of a vow is seen;

23. That is as follows: (his food may be) mixed with clarified butter or sour milk, (it must) not (contain) pungent condiments or salt, nor meat, nor (be) stale.

24. (He shall remain) chaste, or approach (his wife) in season.

25. (It is necessary) to have the hair of his head, his beard, the hair on his body, and his nails cut on each Parva day, and the rules of purification (are obligatory on him).

26. Now they quote also (the following verses): 'Two kinds of purification, which the *Sish*ṭas reverentially practise, are mentioned in the Veda,—external (purification), which consists in the removal of impure stains and foul smells, and internal (purification), which consists in the abstention from injuring live creatures.'

27. 'The body is purified by water, the understanding by knowledge, the soul of beings by abstention from injuring, (and) the internal organ by truth.'

27. Vasish*ṭh*a III, 60.

2. He cultivates six Nivartanas (of) fallow (land); he gives a share to the owner (of the soil), or solicits his permission (to keep the whole produce).

3. Let him plough before breakfast with two bulls whose noses have not been pierced, not striking (them) with the goad, (but) frequently coaxing (them).

4. If he cultivates six Nivartanas in this manner (and subsists thereby), that is (the mode of living called) Sha*nn*ivartanî (subsistence on six Nivartanas).

5. (As regards the mode of subsistence called) Kauddâlî, he digs up (the soil) near a water(-course or tank) with a spade, a ploughshare, or a pointed piece of wood, sows seed, (and) grows bulbs, roots, fruit, pot-herbs, and vegetables.

6. (If he thus) cultivates (land) with a spade (and lives on its produce), that is the (mode of life called) Kauddâlî (subsistence by the spade).

7. He who lives by the (mode of subsistence called) Dhruvâ, wraps up his head in a white dress (saying), 'For the sake of welfare I wrap thee up, O head,' (and) takes the skin of a black antelope (with the words), '(Thou art) spiritual pre-eminence, (I take thee) for the sake of spiritual pre-eminence;' the Pavitra (reciting) the Abliṅga texts; the water-pot (saying), 'Thou art strength, (I take) thee for

2. 2. A Nivartana is a measure of 4000 square hastas, the ancient equivalent of the modern Bîghâ.

3. Identical with II, 2, 4, 21.

6. Govinda says that according to some the following ceremonies need only be performed when one goes out begging for the first time, while others insist on their being performed daily.

7. The Mânastokîya, i. e. the text beginning 'mâ nas toke,' the sake of strength;' the yoke for carrying burdens (saying), 'Thou art grain, (I take) thee for the sake of prosperity;' the staff (saying), '(Thou art) a friend, protect me.'

8. On leaving (his hut), he mutters the Vyâhṛitis, and (afterwards the verse used for) hallowing the quarters of the horizon, 'May the earth, the middle sphere, the sky, the constellations, and all the quarters of the horizon, fire, air, and sun, (may all these) deities protect me on my road.'

9. Because, after muttering the Mânastokîya (text) and entering the village, he shows himself with the yoke (on his shoulder) at the door of each house, they call it 'showing oneself.'

10. Because, if every (other) livelihood fails, he persistently (dhruvam) supports himself by this (mode of living), it is called Dhruvâ (the unchangeable).

11. (As regards the mode of life called) Samprakshâlanî, (if, in order to show that) there is no waste of the vegetable (substances) obtained nor occurs repeatedly in the Taittirîya-veda, e. g. Taitt. Saṃhitâ III, 4, 11, 2. Govinda adds that the beggar must remain silent, and not stop longer at each door than the time required for milking a cow.

10. Both the text and the scanty commentary on this Sûtra are corrupt. K. reads, vṛitter vṛittair avârtâyâṃ tayaiva tasya dhruvaṃ varttayatîti dhruveti parikîrtitâ; D. vṛitte vṛittair avârttâthâ, &c.; M. vṛitte vṛitter avṛittâyâm avṛittâyâṃ tathaiva tasyâḥ ddhṛivaṃ varttamânâd iti, &c.; C. I. vṛitter vṛitter âvartâyâm âvartâyâm tathaiva tasyâṃ dhruvaṃ vartanâd iti, &c. The Telugu copy omits the text. From the commentary it is clear that Govinda read at the beginning of the Sûtra 'vṛitter vṛitter,' and the Telugu copy proves that 'tayaiva' is the correct reading. I restore the Sûtra conjecturally, as follows, vṛitter vṛitter avârttâyâṃ tayaiva tasya dhruvaṃ vartanâd iti dhruveti parikîrtitâ.

11. I read, samprakshâlanîti | utpannânâm oshadhînâm praksheany hoarding, he turns the dishes, after washing them, upside down, (that is the livelihood called) Samprakshâlanî (living by washing).

12. As to the (mode of subsistence called) Samûhâ, (if) he sweeps up (grain) with a broom in permitted places where (grain-bearing) plants are found, either on a road or in fields the access to which is not obstructed (by hedges), and lives on (what he has thus obtained), that (livelihood is called) Samûhâ (living by sweeping).

13. As to the (mode of life called) Pâlanî, it is also named Ahi*m*sakâ (not hurting), and the following (definition) is given. (If) he tries to obtain from virtuous men husked rice or seeds, and maintains (himself) thereby, that (is the mode of subsistence called) Pâlanî.

14. As to the (mode of life called) *S*iloñkhâ, (if) he gleans single ears in permitted places where (grain-bearing) plants grow, on a road or in fields the access to which is not obstructed, and supports himself by (these) gleanings, (collected) from time pa*n*am nâstîti ni*k*ayo vâ bhâ*g*anâni sa*m*prakshâlya nyub*g*ayatîti samprakshâlanî ‖ M. has nâsti ni*k*ayo vâ, and C. I. reads also ni*k*ayo and omits 'vâ.' The Dekhan MSS. have nâstîti *k*ayo vâ. The description is not very clear; but it seems that a person who lives by the Samprakshâlanî *vr*itti must obtain grain and vegetables by begging in such quantities as will suffice for one meal, and prove by the way in which he treats his dishes that he has neither wasted his food nor any store remaining.

13. The translation of this Sûtra is merely tentative, as the two MSS. of the commentary omit the text, and contain only a fragment of Govinda's explanation. The latter seems to have differed from my interpretation. The text, as given by the other MSS., runs as follows: pâlanîty [pâli°, MSS.] ahi*m*sakety evedam uktam bhavati [°tîti, M.] tushavihînâ*m*s ta*n*dulân i*kkh*ati sa*gg*anebhyo bî*g*âni vâ [*k*â, D.] pâlayatîti pâlanî [phâla°, phâlani, M.; pâlinô, K. D.]

to time, that (is the mode of subsistence called) Śiloñkhâ (gleaning).

15. As to the (livelihood called) Kapotâ, (if) he picks up with two fingers single grains in permitted places, where (grain-bearing) plants grow, either on the road or in fields the access to which is not obstructed, that (is called), because he acts like a pigeon, Kapotâ (pigeon-life).

16. As to (the mode of life called) Siddho*ñkhâ*, (if) tired with the (other) ways of subsistence, he asks, because he has become old or diseased, virtuous men for cooked food, that (is the livelihood called) Siddho*ñkhâ* (gleaning cooked food).

17. If (he adopts) the latter, he must reposit (the sacred fires) in his soul and behave like an ascetic, except (in using) the cloth for straining water and (wearing) a reddish-brown dress.

18. If he subsists on the produce of the forest, (the fruits) of trees, creepers, and lianas, and of grasses, such as wild millet (*ś*yâmâka) and wild sesamum, that (is called) forest-life.

19. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'Moving about with the beasts, dwelling together with them, and maintaining oneself in a manner similar to theirs, that is clearly the road to heaven.'

Prasna III, Adhyâya 3.

1. Now the hermits in the wood belong to two classes,

15. Govinda mentions a varia lectio not found in our MSS., kapotavatsa*m*da*m*sinî, 'because he pecks like a pigeon.'

16. Here as well as above, III, 1, 7, the Dekhan MSS. read siddhe*kkhâ*, 'begging cooked food,' instead of siddho*ñkhâ*.

3. 1. Compare for the whole Adhyâya, Âpastamba II, 9, 21, 20–23, 2.

2. Those who cook (their food), and those who do not cook it.

3. Among them, those who cook (their food are divided) into five subdivisions, (viz.) those who eat everything which the forest contains, those who live on unhusked (wild-growing grain), those who eat bulbs and roots, those who eat fruit, and those who eat pot-herbs.

4. Those who eat everything which the forest produces are, again, of two kinds: they either subsist on forest-produce generated by Indra, or on that which has been generated from semen.

5. Among these, that which has been generated by Indra (is the produce) of lianas, shrubs, creepers, and trees. Fetching (that) and cooking it, they offer the Agnihotra in the evening and in the morning, give (food) to ascetics, guests, and students, and eat the remainder.

6. That which is generated from semen is the flesh (of animals) slain by tigers, wolves, falcons, and other (carnivorous beasts), or by one of them. Fetching (that) and cooking it, they offer the Agnihotra in the evening and in the morning, give (shares) to ascetics, guests, and students, and eat the remainder.

7. Those who eat unhusked grain only, fetch rice, avoiding (husked) corn, boil it, offer the Agnihotra both in the evening and in the morning, give (food) to ascetics, guests, and students, and eat the remainder.

8. Those who eat bulbs and roots, or fruit, or pot-herbs, (act) exactly in the same manner.

9. Those (hermits) who do not cook (their food are divided into) five (classes), Unmaggakas, Pravṛittâsins, Mukhenâdâyins, Toyâhâras, and Vâyubhakshas.

10. Among these, the Unmaggakas (collect and prepare their food), avoiding (the use of) iron and stone implements,

11. The Pravṛittâsins take it with the hand,

12. The Mukhenâdâyins take it with the mouth (only, like beasts),

13. The Toyâhâras subsist on water only,

14. And the Vâyubhakshas (air-eaters) eat nothing.

15. In this manner ten (different) initiations are prescribed for hermits who follow the rule of Vikhanas (vaikhânasa).

16. He who has agreed (to obey) the Institutes of his (order, shall wear) a staff, (shall keep) rigid silence, and (shall) abstain from rash acts.

17. Hermits following the rule of Vikhanas (vaikhânasa) are purified (from sin), and (especially) those who abstain from food.

18. The sum of the rules applicable to all Brahma-Vaikhânasas (is as follows):

19. 'Let him not injure (even) gadflies or gnats; let him bear cold and perform austerities; let him constantly reside in the forest, be contented, and

11. Pravṛittâsin, i. e. he who eats food only which comes to him accidentally.

15–17. These three Sûtras are omitted in the commentary, but found in all the MSS. of the text.

18. Govinda proposes two explanations for the term brahma-vaikhânasa; he thinks that it may mean either brahmaṇâ dṛishṭâ vaikhânasâḥ, 'hermits seen by Brahman,' i. e. whose duties have been revealed by Brahman, or 'hermits who are Brâhmaṇas by caste.' The true sense, however, is probably 'a hermit (who strives) to (become one with) Brahman' (brahmârthaṃ vaikhânasa).

delight in (dresses made of) bark and skins, (and in carrying) water (in his pot).'

20. 'A devotee shall first honour the guests who have come to his hermitage at (dinner) time; he shall be sedulous in (worshipping) gods and Brâhmaṇas, in (offering) the Agnihotra, and in practising austerities.'

21. 'A Brâhmaṇa who has taken to forest-life, and who has adopted this difficult (but) pure mode of existence, which keeps him apart from wicked men, which must never be given up, which is similar to (that of the) beasts and birds, which allows the collection of the necessaries of life for one day only, and which necessitates the consumption of astringent and bitter (food), never sinks low.'

22. 'Moving about with the beasts, dwelling together with them, and maintaining oneself in a manner similar to theirs, that is clearly the road to heaven.'

PRAṢNA III, ADHYÂYA 4.

1. Now if a student commits any act against his vow, eats meat, or approaches a woman, whenever any evil befals him,

2. He heaps fuel on the fire in the interior of the house, scatters (Kuśa grass) around it, and performs the ceremonies up to the end of the Agnimukha; then he offers oblations of clarified butter, (reciting the following texts): 'It was done by lust, lust does

22. See above, III, 2, 19.

4. 1. The clause striyaṁ vopeyât, 'or approaches a woman,' is omitted by Govinda. The whole chapter is a supplement to the rules given above, II, 1, 1, 30–35, where some of the Vedic passages mentioned here have already been given.

it, to lust (belongs) all this, to him who draws me on, Svâhâ;' 'It was done by the internal organ, the internal organ does it, to the internal organ (belongs) all this, to him who draws me on, Svâhâ;' 'It was done by passion, passion does it, to passion (belongs) all this, to him who draws me on, Svâhâ;' 'It was done by ignorance, ignorance does it, to ignorance (belongs) all this, to him who draws me on, Svâhâ;' 'It was done by sin, sin does it, to sin (belongs) all this, to him who draws me on, Svâhâ;' 'It was done by wrath, wrath does it, to wrath (belongs) all this, to him who draws me on, Svâhâ.'

3. That which begins with the muttering (of the Vedic texts) and ends with the gift of a fee (consisting of) a cow is known,

4. (Afterwards) he stays (during the night) behind (i. e. to the west of) the fire, wrapping himself in the skin of a black antelope, the neck of which is turned towards the east and the hair of which is turned outside.

5. When the day dawns, he drags himself away from the hinder part (of the skin), goes to a bathing-place, bathes (there) in the manner which is known, (but) performs, while in the water, sixteen suppressions of breath with the Aghamarshaṇa hymn; next he performs the known (ceremonies) up to the worship of the sun, and afterwards goes to the house of his teacher.

6. Let him know for certain that that is equally (effective) as bathing (with the priests) at the end of a horse-sacrifice.

5. Govinda says that this manner of crawling out of the skin is symbolical of a new birth.

PRAŚNA III, ADHYÂYA 5.

1. Now we will explain the rule of the most holy Aghamarshaṇa.

2. He goes to a bathing-place and bathes (there). Dressed in a pure dress let him raise, close to the water, an altar, and moistening his clothes by one (application of water), and filling his hand once (with water), let him recite the Aghamarshaṇa hymn (in the manner of his daily) private recitation.

3. (Let him repeat it) one hundred times in the morning, one hundred times at midday, and one hundred times or an unlimited number of times in the afternoon.

4. When the stars have risen, let him partake of gruel prepared of one handful of barley.

5. After seven (days and) nights he is freed from all minor sins (upapâtaka), whether they have been committed intentionally or unintentionally, after twelve (days and) nights (from all other sins) excepting the murder of a learned Brâhmaṇa, the violation of a Guru's bed, stealing gold, and drinking Surâ.

6. After twenty-one (days and) nights he overcomes even those (crimes) and conquers them.

5. 1. Vasish*th*a XXVI, 8.

2. Stha*nd*ila, 'an altar,' is a slightly raised mound of earth, which, according to Govinda, in this case must have the shape of the sun's disc. According to the same authority the hand of the performer must remain filled with water as long as the recitation lasts, and the performer stands behind the altar facing the east.

5. Regarding the pras*r*itiyâvaka, '(subsisting on) gruel prepared from a handful of barley,' see below, III, 6.

7. He overcomes everything, he conquers all, he obtains the reward of all sacrifices, he has bathed at all sacred bathing-places, he has performed the vows required for (the study of) all the Vedas, he becomes known to all the gods, he sanctifies a company (of Brâhmaṇas) by merely looking (at them), and his undertakings are successful. Thus speaks Baudhâyana.

PRASNA III, ADHYÂYA 6.

1. Now if a man feels his conscience charged with (evil) actions committed by himself, let him boil for himself (alone), when the stars have risen, a handful of barley, (and prepare) gruel (with that).

2. Let him not perform the Vaiśvadeva oblation with (a portion of) that,

3. Nor (shall) a Bali offering (be performed) on that (occasion).

4. Let him consecrate the barley before it is boiled, while it is being boiled, and after it has been boiled, with the (following) Mantras:

5. 'Thou art barley, thou art the king of grains, thou art sacred to Varuṇa and mixed with honey, the sages have proclaimed thee an expeller of all guilt and a means of purification.'

7. Govinda is of opinion that the words, 'thus speaks Baudhâyana,' indicate that this part of the work has been composed by a pupil or some other person.

6. 1. For the whole Adhyâya compare Vishṇu XLVIII.

5. According to Govinda, Vâmadeva is the *Ṛ*shi of these Mantras. The phrase, 'Thou art sacred to Varuṇa,' is to be explained, according to Govinda, by the fact that offerings presented to Varuṇa frequently consist of barley. 'Honey' means, according to some, 'sweet butter,' with which the dish is seasoned.

'Ye barley-grains are clarified butter and honey, ye barley-grains are water and ambrosia. May you remove my guilt and all my sins:'

'Those committed by words, by acts, and by evil thoughts; ill-fortune and the night of all-destroying time,—all that avert from me, ye barley-grains.'

'(From the sin of eating) food which had been worried by dogs or pigs, or which had been defiled by crows and impure men, from the sin of disobedience towards mother and father,—from all that purify me, ye barley-grains.'

'From the dreadful (guilt of) mortal sins and of the crime (of serving) a king, from the wrong done to infants or aged men, from (the guilt) of stealing gold, of breaking my vows, of sacrificing for an unworthy man, of speaking evil of Brâhmaṇas,—from all that purify me, ye barley-grains.'

'From (the sin of eating) the food of many men, of harlots and of Śûdras, of (partaking of) funeral dinners and of (the food given by) persons who are unclean on account of a death or a birth, of that given by thieves, or at a funeral sacrifice offered to one who lately died,—from all that purify me, ye barley-grains.'

6. (While the barley) is being boiled, he must protect it (and recite the text), 'Adoration to Rudra, the lord of created beings; pacified is the sky;' the Anuvâka (beginning), 'Give strength;' the five sentences (beginning), 'The gods who are seated in front, led by Agni;' the two (texts), 'Do not hurt

6. The Anuvâka meant is Taitt. Saṃhitâ I, 2, 14. The five sentences are found, ibid. I, 8, 7, 1. Regarding the text mâ nastoke, 'do not hurt our offspring,' see above, III, 2, 9. The last our offspring,' (and) 'The Brahman-priest among the gods.'

7. Having purified himself (by sipping water, &c.), he shall eat a little of the boiled (mess), after pouring it into (another) vessel.

8. Let him offer it as a sacrifice to the soul, (reciting the text), 'May the gods, who are born from the internal organ and joined to the internal organ, who are very strong, whose father is Daksha, protect us (and) guard us; adoration to them, to them Svâhâ.'

9. Let him who desires intelligence (subsist on such food) during three (days and) nights.

10. A sinner who drinks it during six (days and) nights becomes pure.

11. He who drinks it during seven (days and) nights is purified from (the guilt of) the murder of a learned Brâhmaṇa, of violating a Guru's bed, of stealing gold, and of drinking Surâ.

12. He who drinks it during eleven (days and) nights, removes even the sins committed by his ancestors.

13. 'But he who during twenty-one days (drinks gruel made) of barley-grains which have passed through a cow, sees the Gaṇas and the lord of the Gaṇas, sees the goddess of learning and the lord of learning.' Thus speaks the venerable Baudhâyana.

Mantra occurs Taitt. Saṃhitâ III, 4, 11, 1. Govinda says that material protection, too, in the shape of an iron platter or cover is to be given to the boiling barley.

8. The text occurs Taitt. Saṃhitâ I, 2, 3, 1. It consists of five sentences, and is addressed to the five vital airs, to each of which the eater offers one oblation.

PRAŚNA III, ADHYÂYA 7.

1. 'Let him who considers himself impure offer (burnt oblations), reciting the Kûshmâ*nda*s.'

2. 'He who has had forbidden intercourse, or has committed a crime against nature, becomes even like a thief, even like the slayer of a learned Brâhma*ṇa*.'

3. 'He is freed from any sin which is less than the crime of slaying a learned Brâhma*ṇa*.'

4. If, after wasting his strength except in his sleep, he desires to become free from the stain and holy,

5. He causes the hair of his head, his beard, the hair on his body, and his nails to be cut on the day of the new moon or of the full moon, and takes upon himself a vow according to the rule prescribed for students,

6. (To be kept) during a year, or a month, or twenty-four days, or twelve nights, or six or three nights.

7. Let him not eat meat, nor approach a woman, not sit on (a couch or seat, and) beware of (speaking an) untruth.

8. To subsist on milk (alone is) the most excellent mode of living; or, using barley-gruel (as his food), he may perform a K*rikkh*ra (penance) of twelve days, or he may (maintain himself by) begging.

---

7. 1–3. Taittirîya Âra*ṇ*yaka II, 8, 1–3.

6. Taitt. Âra*ṇ*yaka II, 8, 5–6. 7. Taitt. Âra*ṇ*yaka II, 8, 7.

8. Taitt. Âra*ṇ*yaka II, 8, 8. As the next Sûtra shows, these rules refer to Brâhma*ṇ*as. Regarding the K*rikkh*ra, see below, IV, 57.

9. On such (occasions) a Kshatriya (shall subsist on) barley-gruel, a Vaisya on curds of two-milk whey.

10. Having kindled the sacred fire in the morning according to the rule for Pâkayagñas, having scattered (Kusa grass) around it, and having performed (the preliminary ceremonies) up to the end of the Agnimukha, he next offers in addition burnt oblations, reciting the three Anuvâkas (beginning), 'What cause of anger to the gods, ye gods,' 'The debts which I contracted,' (and) 'May worshipful Agni give thee by every means long life.'

11. Let him offer with each Rik-verse a portion of clarified butter.

12. After having offered four oblations with (the spoon called) Sruva, reciting (the texts), 'That strength which lies in the lion, in the tiger, and in the panther,' &c., and the four Abhyâvartinîs (i.e. the texts), 'Thou, O fire, who turnest back,' &c., 'O Angiras,' &c., 'Again with strength,' &c., (and) 'With wealth,' &c., after having taken his position, with sacred fuel in his hands, in the place allotted to the sacrificer, he worships (the fire) with the hymn which contains twelve verses (and begins), 'To Vaisvânara we announce.'

13. Having placed the piece of sacred fuel (on the fire with the text), 'Whatever sin I ever com-

14. (The ceremonies) which begin with the muttering (of the texts) and end with the gift of a cow as a fee are known.

15. One (person) only (shall) perform the service of the fire.

16. Now (let him offer) at the Agnyâdheya full oblations (pûr*n*âhuti, with the texts), 'Whatever cause of anger to the gods, ye gods;' 'The debts which I contracted;' 'May worshipful Agni give thee by every means long life.'

17. Having offered (it), he who is about to perform the Agnihotra, (worships) with the Dasahot*ri* (texts); having offered (it), he who is about to perform the new and full moon sacrifices (worships) with the *K*aturhot*ri* (texts); having offered (it), he who is about to offer the *K*âturmâsya sacrifices (worships) with the Pa*ñk*ahot*ri* (texts); having offered it, (he worships) at an animal sacrifice with the Sha*ddh*ot*ri* (texts), at a Soma-sacrifice with the Saptahot*ri* (texts).

18. And it is declared in the Veda, 'Let him sacrifice (with the Kûshmâ*nd*a texts) at the beginning of the rites; purified (thereby) he gains the world of the gods.' Thus (speaks) the Brâhma*n*a.

16. From this and the next Sûtras it must be understood that the Kûshmâ*nd*ahoma is not only to be used as a penance, but may be offered at the beginning of the great Srauta sacrifices, in order to sanctify the performer and to secure special benefits.

17. The Saptahot*ri* and the other texts mentioned occur Taitt. Âra*n*yaka III, 1–5. I understand the verb 'worship' on account of Lâ*ty*âyana X, 12, 10.

PRAṢNA III, ADHYÂYA 8.

1. Now, therefore, we will explain the rule of the *K*ândrâya*ṇ*a (lunar penance).

2. Let him fast on the fourteenth day of the bright half of the month.

3. Having had the hair on his head, his beard, the hair on his body, and his nails, or his beard alone, cut, let him enter, dressed in new clothes and speaking the truth, the place where the sacrificial fire is preserved.

4. There a (common) fire, (which may be) fetched once (only, shall serve) him; or (the fire) must be produced by friction with the Ara*ṇ*is.

5. Let a student, who is a friend (of the performer), be ready at hand to (carry out his) directions;

6. And sacrificial viands (shall be his) food during the performance of the vow.

7. Having heaped fuel on the fire, scattered (Kuśa grass) around it, and performed (the ceremonies) up to the end of the Agnimukha, he offers burnt oblations, (cutting off portions) from the cooked food,

8. (The first) to Agni, (the second) to the lunar day whichever it may be, (the third and the fourth)

8. 1. For this chapter compare Gautama XXVII.

4. The meaning of the Sûtra is that the fire which has been carried into the âvasatha must be kept burning during the whole month which the *K*ândrâya*ṇ*a lasts. For a burnt oblation has to be performed at the end of the penance. Should it be extinguished, it must be rekindled by friction.

8. The text quoted occurs Taitt. Brâhma*ṇ*a I, 5, 8, 1.

to the lunar mansion together with its guardian deity, the fifth to the moon (with the verse), 'Atrâha gor amanvata,' the sixth to the sky and the earth, the seventh to day and night, the eighth to Rudra, the ninth to the sun, the tenth to Varu*n*a, the eleventh to Indra, and the twelfth to all the gods.

9. Now they mention (the following) other (oblations which are to be offered) to the points of the horizon and to their (guardian) deities, to the wide middle sphere and to its (guardian) deity.

10. Having offered (the oblation) to Agni Svish*ṭ*ak*ṛ*it (with the verse), 'Ever new,' &c., he then places the remainder of the sacrificial viands into a goblet (ka*m*sa) or a cup (*k*amasa), pours seasoning, that is fit for sacrifices, over them, and eats fifteen morsels of ordinary size,

11. The first (saying, 'I offer) thee to Prâ*n*a,' the second (saying, 'I offer) thee to Apâna,' the third (saying, 'I offer) thee to Vyâna,' the fourth (saying, I offer) thee to Udâna,' the fifth (saying, 'I offer) thee to Samâna.' If there are only four (mouthfuls, he eats) the first reciting two (texts); if there are three, (he eats) the first two reciting two (texts) with each; if there are two, (he eats) the first reciting two (texts and) the second reciting three texts; (if there is only) one, (he recites) all (the five texts) together.

12. Having drunk water (with the text), 'Thou

13. (The ceremonies) beginning with the muttering (of sacred texts) and ending with the gift of a cow as a fee are known.

14. He worships the sun with (three verses) addressed to Sûrya and the moon with (three verses) addressed to *K*andramas.

15. When he goes to rest, he mutters (the verse), 'O fire, keep thou good watch,'

16. When he awakes (in the morning, the verse), 'O fire, thou art the protector of vows.'

17. Let him not talk with women and *S*ûdras addressing them first; let him not look at urine and ordure.

18. If he has seen any impure substance, he mutters (the text), 'Unrestrained (was) the internal organ, wretched my eye; the sun is the most

20. Thus (he takes every day) one (mouthful) less up to the day of the new moon.

21. On the day of the new moon there is not (even) one mouthful (left to take).

22. On the first day of the first half (of the month) one (mouthful may be eaten), on the second two.

23. Thus he daily increases (his meal) by one (mouthful) up to the day of the full moon.

24. On the day of the full moon he offers a Sthâlîpâka to Agni, to the lunar day whichever it may be, and to the lunar mansions as well as to their (guardian) deities.

25. Having offered a burnt oblation to (the lunar mansion) Abhigit (which stands) before Śroṇâ, and to its (guardian) deity, he must give a cow to the Brâhmaṇas.

26. That is the ant-shaped lunar penance; (that which is performed in the) inverted (order is called) the barleycorn-shaped (lunar penance).

27. A sinner who has performed either of these two (penances) becomes free from all mortal sins (pâtaka).

28. They declare that the (Kândrâyaṇa) shall be performed for the sake of the fulfilment of wishes of all kinds.

29. 'Thereby man obtains every wish which he may conceive.'

30. 'Thereby the sages formerly purified themselves and accomplished their objects. That (rite) procures wealth, spiritual merit, sons, cattle, long life, heavenly bliss, and fame; it secures the fulfilment of all desires.'

31. 'He who studies this, becomes the companion of the lunar constellations, of sun and moon, and dwells in their world.'

PRAṢNA III, ADHYÂYA 9.

1. Now, therefore, we will explain the rule of the Anaṣnatpârâyaṇa (recitation of the whole Veda during a fast).

2. Let him wear a clean garment or a dress made of bark (or grass).

3. Let him desire food, fit for a sacrifice, or water and fruit.

4. Going forth from the village in an easterly or northerly direction, smearing a quadrangular sthaṇḍila, 'a bull's hide' in size, with cowdung, sprinkling it, drawing the marks on it, sprinkling it with water, heaping fuel on the fire and scattering (Kuṣa grass) around it, he offers burnt oblations to the following deities, to Agni Svâhâ, to Pragâpati

9. 2. M. and the MSS. of the commentary read *k*iravâsâ*h* instead of *k*iravâsâ*h*, 'clad with a garment of bark or grass,' and Govinda explains the var. lect. by 'dressed in old clothes.'

3. This rule refers to the case only where the performer of the vow is unable to bear the prolonged fasting.

4. A sthaṇḍila is the raised mound, four fingers high, which is used as the altar for the Gṛihya ceremonies. Regarding the term, 'a bull's hide,' see Vishṇu XCII, 2. The marks (lakshaṇa) are the lines which must be drawn on the altar; see e. g. Âṣvalâyana Gṛihya-sûtra I, 3, 1.

Svâhâ, to Soma Svâhâ, to all the gods Svâhâ, to Svaya*m*bhu, to the *Rik*as, to the Ya*g*us, to the Sâmans, to the Atharvans, to faith, to right knowledge, to wisdom, to fortune, to modesty, to Savit*ri*, to the Sâvitrî (verse), to Sadasaspati, and to Anumati.

5. Having offered (these oblations), he must begin with the beginning of the Veda and continuously recite (it).

6. Let him not interrupt (the recitation) by talking, nor by stopping.

7. Now if he converses in between or stops, let him thrice suppress his breath, and begin just there where he left off.

8. If he has forgotten (a passage), he shall recite for as long a time as he does not recollect it, what (he may know, Rik-verses) for Rik-verses, (Ya*g*us-formulas) for Ya*g*us-formulas, (Sâmans) for Sâmans.

9. He may (also) recite the Brâhma*n*a of that (forgotten passage) or (the passage from the Anukrama*n*î regarding) its metre and its deities.

10. Let him recite the Sa*m*hitâ of (his) Veda twelve (times). He thereby removes (faults committed by) studying on forbidden (days, by) angering his teacher, (and through) improper acts. His (knowledge of the) Veda is sanctified, is purified.

11. (If he reads) more than that, a cumulation (of rewards will be the result).

12. If he recites the Sa*m*hitâ of the Veda another twelve (times), he gains thereby the world of U*s*anas.

13. If he recites the Sa*m*hitâ of the Veda another twelve (times), he gains thereby the world of Bṛihaspati.

14. If he recites the Saṁhitâ of the Veda another twelve (times), he gains thereby the world of Pragâpati.

15. If, fasting, he recites the Saṁhitâ one thousand (times), he becomes one with Brahman, resplendent like Brahman (and) Brahman (itself).

16. If he subsists during a year on food obtained by begging, he gains (the power of) supernatural vision.

17. If during six months he subsists on barley-gruel, during four months on water and barley-flour, during two months on fruit, (and) during one month on water, or performs Kṛikkhra penances of twelve days, he (obtains the power of) suddenly disappearing, and sanctifies seven descendants, seven ancestors, and himself as the fifteenth, and (any) company (of Brâhmaṇas) which he may enter.

18. They call that the ladder of the gods.

19. By means of that the gods reached their divine station and the sages the position of Ṛishis.

20. The periods for beginning this sacrifice, forsooth, are three, the time of the morning libation, the time of the midday libation, and the last part of the night, (the Muhûrta) sacred to Brahman.

21. Pragâpati, forsooth, proclaimed this (rite) to the seven Ṛishis, the seven Ṛishis to Mahâgagñu, and Mahâgagñu to the Brâhmaṇas.

18. Govinda explains niḥsreṇîm, 'the ladder,' by niḥsreyasahetum, 'a cause of supreme bliss.'

21. The name of the Ṛishi who proclaimed it to the Brâhmans is not certain. The Dekhan MSS. read Mahâgagru and Mahâgagnu, M. Mahâgagñu, the I. O. copy of the commentary Mahâyagñu and Mahâgagñu, and the Telugu copy Mahâgagñu.

PRAŚNA III, ADHYÂYA 10.

1. The law of castes and of orders has been declared.

2. Now, indeed, man (in) this (world is polluted) by a vile action or acts wrongly, (e. g.) sacrifices for men unworthy to offer a sacrifice, accepts presents from those whose gifts ought not to be accepted, eats the food of those whose food ought not to be eaten, (and) practises what is forbidden.

3. They are in doubt if he shall perform a penance for such (a deed) or if he shall not do it.

4. (They declare that he shall not do it) because the deed does not perish.

5. (The correct opinion is) that he shall perform (a penance).

6. It is declared in the Veda, 'Let him offer a Punastoma; (those who offer it, may) again come to (partake of) the libations of Soma.'

7. 'He who offers a horse-sacrifice conquers all sin, he effaces the guilt of the murder of a Brâhmaṇa.'

10. 1. As stated formerly, Sacred Books of the East, vol. ii, p. li, this chapter is borrowed from Gautama XIX. I have therefore adopted the same division of the Sûtras as in the translation of the latter work.

2. I read, with the MSS. of the commentary, atha khalvayaṃ purusho yâpyena karmaṇâ mithyâ vâkaraty ayâgyaṃ vâ yâgayaty apratigrâhyasya vâ pratigṛihṇâty anâsyânnasya vânnam aśnâty akaraṇîyena vâkarati. M. reads yâgayitvâ, and the Dekhan MSS. yâgayitvâ and pratigṛihya.

5. The Dekhan MSS. read kûryâd ity eva, M. kûryâd eva, and Govinda kuryât tv eva.

6. All the MSS. of the text omit the word vigñâyate, 'it is declared in the Veda,' which is given by Govinda.

7. All the MSS. of the text give at the beginning of this Sûtra

8. Moreover, 'He who is being accused (of a heinous crime) shall perform an Agnishṭut sacrifice.'

9. Reciting the Veda, austerity, a sacrifice, fasting, giving gifts are the means for expiating such (a blamable act).

10. The purificatory (texts are), the Upanishads, the initial (verses) of the Vedas, the ends of the Vedas (vedântas), the Saṁhitâs of all the Vedas, (the Anuvâkas called) Madhu, (the hymn of) Aghamarshaṇa, the Atharvaśiras, (the Anuvâkas called the) Rudras, the Purusha hymn, the two Sâmans (called) Râǵina and Rauhiṇeya, the Bṛihat (Sâman) and the Rathantara, the Purushagati (Sâman), the Mahânâmnîs, the Mahâvairâǵa (Sâman), the Mahâdivâkîrtya (Sâman), any of the Ǵyeshṭha Sâmans, the Bahishpavamâna Sâman, the Kûshmâṇḍîs, the Pâvamânîs, and the Sâvitrî.

11. To live on milk alone, as if one were fasting, to eat vegetables only, to eat fruit only, (to live on) gruel prepared of a handful of barley-grains, to eat gold, to eat clarified butter (are the modes of subsistence) which purify.

12. All mountains, all rivers, holy lakes, bathing-places, the dwellings of Ṛishis, cowpens, (holy) plains and temples of the gods (are) places (which destroy sin).

athâpy udâharanti, 'now they quote also,' which Govinda omits, and which is inappropriate, because the following passages are taken from the Veda.

10. The word vedâdayaḥ, which occurs also in some MSS. of Vasishṭha (XXII, 9), must be explained, according to the analogy of karmâdi, 'the beginning of the sacrifices' (Sâyaṇa on Taitt. Âr. II, 7, 5), by 'the initial verses of the Vedas.' The Pâvamânîs are added on the authority of Govinda alone.

12. 'Kshetra, (holy) plains, e.g. the Kurukshetra.'—Govinda.

13. Abstention from injuring living beings, truthfulness, abstention from theft (or unrighteously appropriating anything), bathing in the morning, at noon, and in the evening, obedience towards Gurus, continence, sleeping on the ground, dressing in one garment only, and abstaining from food (are the various kinds of) austerity.

14. Gold, a cow, a dress, a horse, land, sesamum, clarified butter, and food (are) the gifts.

15. A year, six months, four (months), three (months), two (months), one (month), twenty-four days, twelve days, six days, three days, a day and a night, (and) one day are the periods (for penances).

16. These (acts) may be optionally performed if no (particular penance) has been prescribed,

17. (Viz.) for great crimes difficult (penances) and for trivial faults easy ones.

18. The K*rikkh*ra and the Atik*rikkh*ra, as well as the *K*ândrâya*n*a, are penances for all (offences).

PRASNA IV, ADHYÂYA 1.

1. We will separately explain the various penances for the several offences, both heavier and lighter ones.

2. Let him prescribe whatever may be befitting for each (case),—heavier (penances) for great (crimes) and easier ones for trivial (faults).

3. Let him perform the penances according to the rule given in the Institutes (of the Sacred Law in cases) where an offence has been committed with the organ or with the feet (and) the arms, through

3. The construction is certainly elliptical. I understand tatra with the first half-verse. Govinda separates the two half-verses, yad upasthakr*i*tam papa*m*, &c., from the first, and reads at the end thoughts or speech, through the ear, the skin, the nose or the eye.

4. Or, in (the case of) transgressions committed through the organ of vision, of hearing, of sensation, of smelling, and through thoughts, he also becomes pure by three suppressions of the breath.

5. In case (he commits the offences) of eating the food of a Śûdra or of cohabiting with a Śûdra female, severally, he must perform, during seven days, seven suppressions of the breath on each day.

6. For partaking of food unfit for eating or drinking, and for selling forbidden merchandise, excepting honey, meat, clarified butter, oil, pungent condiments and bad food, and for similar (offences), he must perform, during twelve days, twelve suppressions of the breath on each day.

7. For other transgressions excepting mortal sins (pâtaka), crimes causing loss of caste (patanîya), and the minor faults (called upapâtaka), he must perform, during half a month, twelve suppressions of the breath on each day.

8. For other transgressions excepting mortal sins of the half-verse prâṇâyâmân samâkaret, 'one should perform suppressions of the breath (in even or equal numbers).'

5. Govinda tries to reconcile this rule with the one given above, I, 1, 2, 7, by assuming that the word Śûdra denotes here a Brâhmaṇa who lives like a Śûdra and neglects his sacred duties.

6. I read, conjecturally, dvâdaśâham, 'twelve days.' The MSS. of the text have dvâdaśa dvâdaśâham, or corruptions pointing to this reading, and C. I. reads ardhamâsam. Regarding avarânna, 'bad food,' see note on Âpastamba II, 6, 15, 16.

7. I read, conjecturally, ardhamâsaṃ, 'half a month;' D. has ardhamâsân; K. dvâdaśâhaṃ; M. dvâdaśârdhamâsam; C. I. dvâdaśârdhamâsân, which is explained by shaṇmâsân.

8. I read with M. dvâdaśa dvâdaśâhân. D. K. have dvâdaśâham. The commentary omits the Sûtra altogether.

and crimes causing loss of caste, he must perform, during twelve periods of twelve days, twelve suppressions of the breath on each day.

9. For other transgressions excepting mortal sins he must perform, during twelve half-months, twelve suppressions of the breath on each day.

10. But for mortal sins he must perform, during a year, twelve suppressions of the breath on each day.

11. Let him give his daughter, while she still goes naked, to a man who has not broken the vow of chastity and who possesses good qualities, or even to one destitute of good qualities; let him not keep (the maiden) in (his house) after she has reached the age of puberty.

12. He who does not give away a marriageable daughter during three years doubtlessly contracts a guilt equal to (that of) destroying an embryo.

13. Such will be the case if anybody asks her in marriage, and also if nobody demands her. Manu has declared that at each appearance of the menses (the father incurs the guilt of) a mortal sin.

14. Three years let a marriageable damsel wait for the order of her father. But after (that) time let her choose for herself in the fourth year a husband (of) equal (rank). If no man (of) equal (rank) be found, she may take even one destitute of good qualities.

15. If a damsel has been abducted by force, and has not been wedded with sacred texts, she may lawfully be given to another man; she is even like a maiden.

9. I read with D., K., and M., dvâdaśârdhamâsân. The commentary omits also this Sûtra.

11. Vasish*th*a XVII, 67–71, and above.

15. Vasish*th*a XVII, 73.

16. If, after (a damsel) has been given away, or even after (the nuptial sacrifices) have been offered, the husband dies, she who (thus) has left (her father's house) and has returned, may be again wedded according to the rule applicable to second weddings, provided the marriage had not been consummated.

17. He who does not approach, during three years, a wife who is marriageable, incurs, without doubt, a guilt equal to that of destroying an embryo.

18. But the ancestors of that man who does not approach his wife who bathed after her temporary uncleanness, though he dwells near her, lie during that month in the menstrual excretions (of the wife).

19. They declare that the guilt of the husband who does not approach his wife in due season, of him who approaches her during her temporary uncleanness, and of him who commits an unnatural crime (with her), is equally (great).

20. Let him proclaim in the village a wife who, being obdurate against her husband, makes herself sterile, as one who destroys embryos, and drive her from his house.

21. But for the transgression of that husband who does not approach a wife who bathed after temporary uncleanness, (the performance of) one hundred suppressions of the breath is prescribed (as a penance).

16. Vasish*th*a XVII, 74.

21. The MSS. of the text read, *ri*tusnâtâ*m* tu yo bhâryâ*m* niyatâ*m* brahma*k*âri*n*îm | niyamâtikrame tasya prâ*n*âyâmasata*m* sm*ri*tam. The commentary omits the first half of the verse altogether. The latter, as read in the MSS., gives no sense. It seems to me that

22. Seated with Kuśa grass in his hands, let him repeatedly suppress his breath, and again and again recite purificatory texts, the Vyâhṛitis, the syllable Om, and the daily portion of the Veda.

23. Always intent on the practice of Yoga, let him again and again suppress his breath. (Thus) he performs the highest austerity up to the ends of his hair and up to the ends of his nails.

24. Through the obstruction (of the respiration) air is generated, through air fire is produced, then through heat water is formed; hence he is internally purified by (those) three.

25. Through the practice of Yoga (true) knowledge is obtained, Yoga is the sum of the sacred law, all good qualities are gained through Yoga; therefore let him always be absorbed in the practice of Yoga.

26. The Vedas likewise begin with the syllable Om, and they end with the syllable Om. The syllable Om and the Vyâhṛitis are the eternal, everlasting Brahman.

27. For him who is constantly engaged in (reciting) the syllable Om, the seven Vyâhṛitis, and the three-footed Gâyatrî, no danger exists anywhere.

28. If, restraining his breath, he thrice recites the Gâyatrî together with the syllable Om and with the (text called) Śiras, that is called one suppression of breath.

29. But sixteen suppressions of breath, accompanied by (the recitation of) the Vyâhṛitis and of the syllable Om, repeated daily, purify after a month even the slayer of a learned Brâhmaṇa.

30. That is the highest austerity, that is the best description of the sacred law. That, indeed, is the best means of removing all sin.

Praśna IV, Adhyâya 2.

1. We will separately explain the various penances for the several offences, both heavier and lighter ones.

2. Let him prescribe whatever may be befitting for each (case),—heavier penances for great (crimes), and lighter ones for trivial (faults).

3. Let him perform the penances according to the rule given in the Institutes of the Sacred Law.

4. He who is about to accept gifts, or he who has accepted gifts, must repeatedly recite the four Ṛik-verses (called) Taratsamandîs.

5. But in case one has eaten any kind of forbidden food, or that given by a person whose food must not be eaten, the means of removing the guilt is to sprinkle water (over one's head) while one recites the Taratsamandî *Ṛik*as.

6. But we will, hereafter, declare another rule for (the expiation of) the murder of a learned Brâhmaṇa, whereby (men) are freed also from mortal sins of all (kinds).

7. Let him (perform), during twelve nights, sup-pressions of the breath (and) mutter purificatory texts, the Vyâhṛitis, the syllable Om, (and) the Aghamarshaṇa hymn, (living) on milk;

8. Or (he becomes) pure if he bathes, and during three (days and) nights subsists on air and (remains dressed) in wet clothes.

9. But if he has repeatedly committed forbidden acts of all kinds, and has (afterwards) worshipped reciting the Vâruṇî (texts), he is freed from all sin.

10. Now a student who has broken his vow (avakîrṇin) shall heap fuel on the fire on the night of the new moon, perform the preparatory ceremonies required for a Darvîhoma, and offer two oblations of clarified butter (reciting the following texts): 'O Lust, I have broken my vow, my vow I have broken, O Lust, to Lust Svâhâ;' 'O Lust, I have done evil, I have done evil, O Lust, to Lust Svâhâ.'

11. After he has made the offering, he shall address the fire, closely joining his hands and turning sideways, (with the following texts): 'May the Maruts grant me, may Indra, may Bṛihaspati, may this fire grant me long life and strength, make me long-lived.' The Maruts, forsooth, give back to him the vital airs, Indra gives back to him strength, Bṛihaspati the lustre of Brahman, Fire all the remainder. (Thus) his body is made whole, and he attains the full length of life. Let him next address (the gods) with three (repetitions of the texts).

9. 'Upasthâna, "worshipping," i.e. sprinkling one's head with a handful of water.'—Govinda.

10. A repetition of the rule given above, II, 1, 1, 34; see also III, 4.

For the gods are trebly true. (All that) has been declared in the Veda.

12. He who considers himself defiled by minor offences (upapâtaka), will be freed from all guilt if he offers burnt oblations according to this same rule;

13. Or if he has partaken of food unfit to be eaten or to be drunk or of forbidden food, and if he has committed sinful acts or performed sinful rites either unintentionally or intentionally, and if he has had connexion with a female of the Śûdra caste or committed an unnatural crime, he becomes pure by bathing (and reciting) the Abliṅga (verses) and (those called) Vârunîs.

14. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'If he has partaken of food unfit to be eaten or to be drunk, or of forbidden food, and if he has committed forbidden acts or performed forbidden rites, he will, nevertheless, be freed from (crimes) committed intentionally which are similar to mortal sins, nay, even from mortal sins (pâtaka).'

15. Or let him fast during three (days and) nights, bathe thrice a day, and, suppressing his breath, thrice recite the Aghamarshaṇa. Manu has declared that that is equal (in efficacy) to the final bath at a horse-sacrifice.

12. Gautama XXV, 6.

13. Govinda gives, like Haradatta on Gautama XXV, 7, as an instance of a doshavat karma, 'a sinful rite,' the abhiśâra or 'magic rite in order to harm enemies.' The expression has, however, in our Sûtra, a wider sense.

14. I. e. if he performs the penance prescribed in the preceding Sûtra.

15. Vasishṭha XXVI, 8; Gautama XXIV, 10.

16. And it is declared in the Veda, '(That is) the ancient purificatory rite, which is widely known (in the Institutes of the Sacred Law); purified thereby man conquers sin. May we, sanctified by this holy means of purification, conquer our enemy, sin.'

PRAŚNA IV, ADHYÂYA 3.

1. We will explain the (secret) penances which are not prescribed (by others, but by the offender himself, and) particularly what shall be done in (case) faults (have been committed) by men who, with concentrated minds, (are) intent (on the performance of their duties).

2. (Such a man) may sip water, (in order to atone) for all mortal sins, reciting the syllable Om and all the Vyâh*ri*tis.

3. When he sips water the first time, he gladdens the Rig-veda, the second time the Ya*g*ur-veda, the third time the Sâma-veda.

4. When he wipes (his lips) the first time, he gladdens the Atharva-veda, the second time the Itihâsas and Purâ*n*as.

5. When he sprinkles water on the right hand, the feet, the head, the heart, the nostrils, the eyes, the ears, and the navel, he gladdens the trees and herbs and all deities. Therefore he is freed from all sin by sipping water.

3. 1. Vasish*th*a XXV, 1–2. The whole Adhyâya is left out in the Dekhan MSS., including K. The omission may have been caused by the circumstance that the initial verses of Adhyâyas 3 and 4 are identical.

3–5. See the rules for sipping water, given above, I, 5, 8, 19–26.

6. Or let him offer in the fire eight pieces of sacred fuel, reciting (the following) eight (texts): 'Thou art the expiation of sin committed by the gods, Svâhâ;' 'Thou art the expiation of sin committed by men, Svâhâ;' 'Thou art the expiation of sin committed by the manes, Svâhâ;' 'Thou art the expiation of sin committed by myself, Svâhâ;' 'Thou art the expiation of the sin which we have committed either by day or by night, Svâhâ;' 'Thou art the expiation of the sin which we have committed either sleeping or waking, Svâhâ;' 'Thou art the expiation of the sin which we have committed either intentionally or unintentionally, Svâhâ;' 'Thou art the expiation of every sin, Svâhâ.'

7. When he has offered (these eight oblations) he will be freed from all guilt.

8. Now they quote also (the following verse): 'The Aghamarshaṇa, the Devakṛita, the Suddhavatîs, the Taratsamâs, the Kûshmâṇḍîs, the Pâvamânîs, the Virâǵâs, the Mṛityulâṅgala, the Durgâ (Sâvitrî), the Vyâhṛitis, and the Rudras (are texts) which are very efficacious for effacing sin.'

3. He who, standing in water, thrice recites the verse, 'This spotted bull,' &c., will be freed from all guilt;

4. He who, standing in water, thrice recites the verse, 'Freed from the post as it were,' will be freed from all guilt.

5. He who, standing in water, thrice recites the verse, 'A swan dwelling in purity,' will be freed from all guilt;

6. Or, he who, standing in water, thrice recites the Sâvitrî, foot by foot, half verse by half verse, and afterwards entire, will be freed from all guilt;

7. Or, he who, standing in water, thrice recites the Vyâhṛitis, both separately and altogether, will be freed from all guilt;

8. Or, he who, standing in water, thrice recites the syllable Om alone, will be freed from all guilt.

9. Let him not teach these Institutes of the Sacred Law to one who is neither his son nor his pupil, nor has resided (in his house) less than a year.

10. The fee (for teaching it) is one thousand (paṇas, or) ten cows and a bull, or the worship of the teacher.

2. Having purified his body by muttered prayers, burnt oblations, Ish*t*is, restraints, and the like, he will accomplish all his objects. He will not attain success in any other way.

3. A Brâhma*n*a, who is going to mutter prayers, to offer burnt oblations or Ish*t*is, or to practise restraints, shall, first, during the bright half of the month, on a lucky day and under a lucky constellation, cause his hair and beard to be cut.

4. Let him bathe in the morning, at noon, and in the evening; let him beware of anger and untruth; let him not address women and *S*ûdras; let him be continent, and subsist solely on food fit for offerings.

5. Avoiding to sleep in the day-time, let him worship cows, Brâhma*n*as, manes, and gods. As long as he is engaged in muttering prayers, offering Homas and Ish*t*is, and practising restraints, let him stand during the day and sit during the night.

The K*rikkh*ra (penance) revealed by Pra*g*âpati lasts twelve days, (which are divided into four separate) periods of three days; (during the first period of three days he eats) in the day-time (only, during the second) at night (only, during the third he subsists on) food given without asking, (and during the fourth) finally (he lives on) air.

8. (If) one eats one mouthful only at each (meal), following, during (three) periods of three days, the rules given above, and subsists during another period of three days on air, that is called the Atik*rikkh*ra penance.

9. (If) during those (first) three periods of three days one partakes of water only, and subsists afterwards (during three days) on air, that third (variety) must be known to be the most efficacious K*rikkh*râtik*rikkh*ra penance.

14. He who subsists during five (days and) nights on cow's urine, cowdung, milk, sour milk, and clarified butter will be purified by (that) Pañkagavya (the five products of the cow).

16. If he subsists on cow's urine and the other (substances named above), one day on each, and continues (this mode of life) during thrice seven days, the theologians call that a Mahâsâṁtâpana Kṛikkhra.

17. If he daily adds to his food one mouthful during the bright (half of the month) and diminishes it daily by one mouthful during the dark (half of the month), and keeps two fasts in the two halves of the month, that is called a Kândrâyaṇa.

20. But a Brâhma*n*a who eats anyhow, during a month, thrice eighty mouthfuls of food, fit for a sacrifice, goes to the world of the moon.

21. As the rising moon frees the world from the fear of darkness, even so a Brâhma*n*a who performs a *K*ândrâya*n*a removes the fear of sin.

22. He who lives one day on (rice)-grains, three days on oil-cakes, five days on buttermilk mixed with water, seven days on water, and (one day) on air, (performs) the guilt-destroying Tulâpurusha.

23. Living on barley-gruel (yâvaka) removes the guilt of corporeal beings after seven days, and so does a fast of seven days; that has been recognised by wise men.

24. By dressing in wet clothes, by living in the open air, and by exposing himself to the sun during the light halves of the months Pausha (December–January), Bhâdrapada (August–September), and *G*yesh*th*a (May–June), a Brâhma*n*a is freed from (all) sin excepting crimes causing loss of caste (patanîya).

20. Vish*n*u XLVII, 9. Govinda places this verse before Sûtra 19.

22. Vish*n*u XLVII, 22.

24. The meaning is that the performer is to stand in wet clothes during the first half of the month Pausha, in the cold season; to live in the open air during the first half of Bhâdrapada, in the rainy season; and to allow himself to be broiled by the sun in *G*yesh*th*a, the hottest time of the hot season.

27. He who lives on alms obtained from Agnihotrins is purified in one month; (he who obtains his food) from a Yâyâvara, in ten days; he who receives it from a hermit in the forest, in five days;

28. (He who lives) on food given by a person who has a store sufficient for one day only, will be purified in one day; he who drinks water given by a person subsisting by the Kapota-vritti (pigeon-life), is purified in three (days).

by yavâgûḥ) saṃyuktam, 'mixed with barley-gruel,' is correct. All the MSS. of the text have yavânâm ekasaṃyukto, which I do not understand. Govinda has Brahmakrikkhraḥ instead of Brahmakûrkaḥ. But see the Petersb. Dict. s. v. brahmakûrka.

28. Regarding the Kapota-vritti, see above, III, 2, 15.

30. Vasishṭha XXVII, 17. Govinda adds after kartum, 'to finish,' 'the rites connected with the Vedas' (Sûtra 1).

32. He who distributes food, speaks the truth, and has compassion on all living beings, is more (holy) than all those who have been purified by the restraints mentioned above.

PRAŚNA IV, ADHYÂYA 6.

1. The (eleven Anuvâkas called) Rudras together with (the ten hymns) seen by Madhuk*kh*andas, the Gâyatrî with the syllable Om, and likewise the seven Vyâhr*i*tis (are the texts) which should be muttered (and) which remove guilt.

2. The Mr*i*gâresh*ṭi*, the Pavitresh*ṭi*, the Trihavis, the Pâvamânî are the Ish*ṭi*s which efface sin, if they are (each) combined with the Vaiśvânara (Dvâdaśa-kapâla).

3–4. Learn, also, the following most excellent secret; he will be freed from all sins of all kinds who sprinkles himself with water, reciting the Pavitras, who mutters the eleven (Anuvâkas called) Rudras, who offers burnt oblations of butter, reciting the Pavitras, and gives gold, a cow, and sesamum (to Brâhma*n*as).

5. He who partakes of boiled barley-gruel, mixed with cow's urine, liquid cowdung, sour milk, milk, and butter, is quickly freed from sin.

6. Both he who has begotten a child on a Śûdra woman and he who has had connexion with a female,

6. 1. The hymns are Rig-veda I, 1–10.

2. Regarding the Mr*i*gâresh*ṭi*, see Taitt. Sa*m*hitâ IV, 7, 15. In explanation of the term Trihavis, Govinda adds the word Savanesh*ṭi*.

5. Yâvaka, translated, as usually, by barley-gruel, can also denote, as Govinda points out, other dishes made of barley.

6. See above, II, 1, 2, 7, 10, 13–14.

intercourse with whom is forbidden (agamyâ), are purified (if they live) according to this rule during seven days.

7. (That is likewise) the remedy when one has swallowed semen, ordure, and urine, or eaten the food of persons whose food must not be eaten, (and also) when a younger brother has kindled the sacred fire, has offered a Śrauta sacrifice, or taken a wife before the elder.

8. He who has committed even a great number of (wicked) actions, excepting mortal sins, will be freed (by that rule) from all guilt. That is the statement of the virtuous.

9. But (this) ordinance, which is based on the authority of the sacred texts, is stated (to be that) through which Bharadvâga and others became equal to Brahman.

10. Through the performance of these rites a Brâhmaṇa, whose heart is full of peace, obtains whatever desires he may have in his heart.

Praśna IV, Adhyâya 7.

1. The wishes of a Brâhmaṇa who has left off evil deeds and is (ever) engaged in holy works are fulfilled even without (the practice of) restraints.

2. Upright Brâhmaṇas quickly accomplish what-

7. See above, II, 1, 1, 21, 39–40. I follow the reading of M. and of the commentary, paryâdhânegyayor etat parivitte ka bheshagam. The reading of the Dekhan MSS. is etat patite kaiva bhoganam, 'that food must be eaten . . . . , and when one has become an outcast.'

ever they wish in their hearts, if they are purified by honest actions.

3. Thus a wise man should practise those restraints until he has purified his bodily frame.

4. He who has been purified by those restraints should, after fasting three (days and) nights, begin the performance of that sacred rite through which he wishes to gain the fulfilment of his desires,—

5. (Reciting) the Kshâpavitra, the Sahasrâksha, the Mṛigâra, the two Ganas (called) Amhomuk, the Pâvamanîs, the Kûshmândîs, and the Rikas, addressed to Vaisvânara,

6. (And) offering with (each of) these (Mantras) boiled rice and clarified butter during seven days, in the morning, at midday, and in the evening, keeping a rigid silence, living on food fit for a sacrifice, restraining his senses and his actions,

7. He is freed from all crimes, even mortal sins, after looking on a cross-road at a pot filled with water, (and reciting the text), 'Simhe me manyuh.'

8. He is freed from the multitude of sins, committed unintentionally in old age, in youth, and in infancy, and even from those belonging to former births;

9. After feeding at the end (of the seven days) Brâhmanas with milk and rice, well mixed with

5. According to Govinda the Kshâpavitra, or as the Dekhan MSS. read, Kshmâpavitra, occurs in the Sûtrapâtha of the Taittirîyas, consists of six verses, and begins 'Agne naya.' The text meant must be similar to Taitt. Samhitâ I, 1, 14, 3. The Sahasrâksha is the Purushasûkta. The Mṛigâra consists of the Yâgyânuvâkyâs of the Mṛigâreshṭi, Taitt. Samhitâ IV, 7, 15. The two Ganas called Amhomuk are found Taitt. Samhitâ II, 3, 13, 1, 'yâ vâm indrâvarunau' and 'yo vâm indrâvarunau.' The verses addressed to Agni Vaisvânara are the first eight of Taitt. Samhitâ I, 5, 11.

butter, and distributing to them after their dinner cows, land, sesamum, and gold,

10. A Brâhmaṇa becomes internally pure, his guilt being consumed like fuel, and fit for the performance of rites which secure the fulfilment of wishes and of rites like the kindling of the sacred fire.

PRAŚNA IV, ADHYÂYA 8.

1. He who, through excessive greed or carelessness, performs this rite for others, is tainted by sin, and perishes like one who has swallowed poison.

2. A Brâhmaṇa who performs this rite for his teacher, his father, his mother, or for himself is resplendent like the sun. Therefore this rite may be performed for those (persons).

3. Ka (Pragâpati) purified by means of this rite the god with a thousand eyes (Sahasrâksha), Fire, Wind, the Sun, Soma, Yama, and other lords of the gods.

4. Whatever there is in these three worlds, famed as possessing a holy name, Brâhmaṇas and the rest, (all) that was produced by Ka through this rite of sanctification.

5. This sin-destroying secret of Pragâpati was first produced; thereafter thousands of purificatory rites came into existence.

6. He who performs those eight Gaṇahomas on the (first) day of the year, of a half-year, of a season, or of a fortnight, sanctifies ten ancestors and ten descendants of his line;

7. And, while still on earth, he is known to the

8. 5. I. e. those mentioned V, 7, 5.

gods in heaven as a holy man, and (after death) that virtuous man rejoices for a very long time in heaven like a god.

8. If a Brâhmaṇa is unable to offer those eight Gaṇahomas, let him offer one; thereby his guilt is effaced.

9. He, also, whose sons or pupils offer those eight Gaṇahomas, is freed from his sin which is bought off by his having instructed (them).

10. Through a desire of removing one's guilt one even may cause (these oblations) to be offered by men who have been engaged for money, in case oneself is unable (to do it); a man need not torment himself.

11. Even among the virtuous a distribution of wealth is made (for the success) of holy rites; sometimes a man who is free from debt is (thereby) freed from guilt.

12. Liberated according to this rule from the ocean of guilt and debt, he considers himself pure and able to successfully perform the sacred rites.

13. But in the case of that pure mortal who, freed from all sin and debts, begins the sacred rites, they will succeed without any effort.

14. Let him daily (study and) teach this holy (rule) of Pragâpati, which the sage has proclaimed, let him remember it or hear it. (By doing that) he is freed from all guilt and will be exalted in Brahman's world.

10. The meaning is that in case a wealthy man is unable to bear 'the restraints,' he may hire others to perform the Homas. Though the hired performer will be guilty of a serious offence (Sûtra 1), the person who causes them to be performed will derive benefit from them.

15. Let him mutter during twelve days those sacred texts through which he wishes to accomplish (his desires), eating once (a day) at night boiled rice with clarified butter, with milk, or with sour milk.

16. (Let him offer) ten times a burnt oblation and sprinkle clarified butter. (That is) the preliminary worship (which must be performed) when one desires to accomplish one's objects through those sacred texts.

PARIŚISHṬA.

PRAŚNA VII, ADHYÂYA 5.

1. We will explain the rule for the adoption of a son.

2. Man, formed of virile seed and uterine blood, proceeds from his mother and father (as an effect) from its cause.

3. (Therefore) the father and the mother have power to give, to abandon, or to sell their (son).

4. But let him not give nor receive (in adoption) an only son;

5. For he (must remain) to continue the line of the ancestors.

6. Let a woman neither give nor receive a son except with the permission of her husband.

7. He who is desirous of adopting (a son) procures two garments, two earrings, and a finger-ring; a spiritual guide who has studied the whole Veda; a layer of Kuśa grass and fuel of Pâlâśa wood and so forth.

5. 1. This chapter has been translated by Mr. Sutherland, Dattaka Mîmâṃsâ V, 42, and Dattaka Ḳandrikâ II, 16, and by myself, Journal Bengal Br. Roy. As. Soc., vol. XXXV, p. 162.

2–6. Identical with Vasishṭha XV, 1–5. The best MS. omits the particle tu, 'but,' in Sûtra 6, while others have it.

7–8. Vasishṭha XV, 7. The translation of madhye by 'in their presence' rests on the authority of the Saṃskârakaustubha 47 b, 11, where it is explained madhye [a] iti bandhusamaksham. The other explanation 'in the middle (of his dwelling),' to which the interpolated text of the Dattaka Mîmâṃsâ and Dattaka Ḳandrikâ refers, is, however, also possible.

8. Then he convenes his relations, informs the king (of his intention to adopt) in (their) presence, feeds the (invited) Brâhmaṇas in the assembly or in (his) dwelling, and makes them wish him 'an auspicious day,' 'hail,' (and) 'prosperity.'

9. Then he performs the ceremonies which begin with the drawing of the lines on the altar and end with the placing of the water-vessels, goes to the giver (of the child) and should address (this) request (to him), 'Give me (thy) son.'

10. The other answers, 'I give (him).'

11. He receives (the child with these words), 'I take thee for the fulfilment of (my) religious duties; I take thee to continue the line (of my ancestors).'

12. Then he adorns him with the (above-mentioned) two garments, the two earrings, and the finger-ring, performs the rites which begin with the placing of the (pieces of wood called) paridhis (fences round the altar) and end with the Agni-mukha, and offers (a portion) of the cooked (food) in the fire.

13. Having recited the Puronuvâkyâ (verse), 'He who thinking of thee with a discerning mind,' &c., he offers an oblation, reciting the Yâgyâ (verse), 'To which performer of good deeds, thou, O Gâta-vedas,' &c.

14. Then he offers (oblations, reciting) the Vyâhṛitis;—(the ceremonies) which begin the oblation to Agni Svishṭakṛit and end with the presentation

8. The ceremony alluded to is the so-called puṇyâhavâkanam.

15. And presents (to the spiritual guide) as a sacrificial fee those two dresses, those two earrings, and that finger-ring (with which he had adorned the child).

16. If after the performance of these (rites) a legitimate son of his own body is born (to the adopter, then the adopted son) receives a fourth (of the legitimate son's) share. Thus says Baudhâyana.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS

TO VOLS. II AND XIV.

VOL. II.

Page xxxii, note 1. Maitrâyaṇîyas still exist in Gugarât, see Report on Sanskrit MSS. for 1879–80; Schröder, Maitrâyaṇî Saṃhitâ, pp. xxii–xxiii.

P. xxxii, l. 1. Râo Sâheb V. N. Mândlik, Vyavahâra Mayûkha and Yâgñavalkya, p. 300, has challenged the accuracy of my statement regarding the prevalence of the Âpastamba Śâkhâ in Bombay. He, however, admits that some Deśasthas and Drâviḍas actually follow the Śâkhâ. His dissent really refers to the Koṅkaṇasthas, the division to which he himself belongs. Among the latter those who originally were Âpastambîyas have partly gone over to the Hiraṇyakeśas. But in the old list of the Koṅkanastha families (see Elph. Coll. collection of 1867–68, Cl. xii, no. 5) which I procured from Mr. Limaye of Ashṭe, the families which really are Âpastambîyas are carefully enumerated. Both in Puṇa and Bombay I have met with a number of Brâhmans, who called themselves sometimes Deśasthas and sometimes Koṅkaṇasthas, and were able and willing to recite portions of the Âpastamba Sûtras for a small consideration.

for pradâtâḥ the reading pragâtâḥ, '(newly)-confined women,' which seems to be the correct one. Owing to the peculiar Indian pronunciation of ga as a d mouillé, da sometimes occurs by mistake for ga in Sanskrit MSS. In Prakrit words da is also sometimes the representative of ga.

SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST

TRANSLATED BY VARIOUS ORIENTAL SCHOLARS

AND EDITED BY

F. MAX MÜLLER

 This Series is published with the sanction and co-operation of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

REPORT presented to the ACADÉMIE DES INSCRIPTIONS, May 11, 1883, by M. ERNEST RENAN.

'M. Renan présente trois nouveaux volumes de la grande collection des "Livres sacrés de l'Orient" (Sacred Books of the East), que dirige à Oxford, avec une si vaste érudition et une critique si sûre, le savant associé de l'Académie des Inscriptions, M. Max Müller. . . . La première série de ce beau recueil, composée de 24 volumes, est presque achevée. M. Max Müller se propose d'en publier une seconde, dont l'intérêt historique et religieux ne sera pas moindre. M. Max Müller a su se procurer la collaboration des savans les plus éminens d'Europe et d'Asie. L'Université d'Oxford, que cette grande publication honore au plus haut degré, doit tenir à continuer dans les plus larges proportions une œuvre aussi philosophiquement conçue que savamment exécutée.'

EXTRACT from the QUARTERLY REVIEW.

'We rejoice to notice that a second series of these translations has been announced and has actually begun to appear. The stones, at least, out of which a stately edifice may hereafter arise, are here being brought together. Prof. Max Müller has deserved well of scientific history. Not a few minds owe to his enticing words their first attraction to this branch of study. But no work of his, not even the great edition of the Rig-Veda, can compare in importance or in usefulness with this English translation of the Sacred Books of the East, which has been devised by his foresight, successfully brought so far by his persuasive and organising power, and will, we trust, by the assistance of the distinguished scholars he has gathered round him, be carried in due time to a happy completion.'

Professor E. HARDY, Inaugural Lecture in the University of Freiburg, 1887.

'Die allgemeine vergleichende Religionswissenschaft datirt von jenem grossartigen, in seiner Art einzig dastehenden Unternehmen, zu welchem auf Anregung Max Müllers im Jahre 1874 auf dem internationalen Orientalistencongress in London der Grundstein gelegt worden war, die Übersetzung der heiligen Bücher des Ostens' (the Sacred Books of the East).

FIRST SERIES.

VOL. I. The Upanishads.

Translated by F. MAX MÜLLER. Part I. The *Kh*ândogya-upanishad, The Talavakâra-upanishad, The Aitareya-âra*n*yaka, The Kaushîtaki-brâhma*n*a-upanishad, and The Vâ*g*asaneyi-sa*m*hitâ-upanishad. 8vo, cloth, 10*s.* 6*d.*

The Upanishads contain the philosophy of the Veda. They have become the foundation of the later Vedânta doctrines, and indirectly of Buddhism. Schopenhauer, speaking of the Upanishads, says: 'In the whole world there is no study so beneficial and so elevating as that of the Upanishads. It has been the solace of my life, it will be the solace of my death.'

[See also Vol. XV.]

VOL. II. The Sacred Laws of the Âryas,

As taught in the Schools of Âpastamba, Gautama, Vâsish*th*a, and Baudhâyana. Translated by GEORG BÜHLER. Part I. Âpastamba and Gautama. 8vo, cloth, 10*s.* 6*d.*

The Sacred Laws of the Âryas contain the original treatises on which the Laws of Manu and other lawgivers were founded.

The Texts of Confucianism. Translated by JAMES LEGGE. Part I. The Shû King, The Religious Portions of the Shih King, and The Hsiâo King. 8vo, cloth, 12*s.* 6*d.*

Confucius was a collector of ancient traditions, not the founder of a new religion. As he lived in the sixth and fifth centuries B.C. his works are of unique interest for the study of Ethology.

[See also Vols. XVI, XXVII, XXVIII, XXXIX, and XL.]

VOL. IV. The Zend-Avesta.

Translated by JAMES DARMESTETER. Part I. The Vendîdâd. 8vo, cloth, 10*s.* 6*d.*

The Zend-Avesta contains the relics of what was the religion of Cyrus, Darius, and Xerxes, and, but for the battle of Marathon, might have become the religion of Europe. It forms to the present day the sacred book of the Parsis, the so-called fire-worshippers. Two more volumes will complete the translation of all that is left us of Zoroaster's religion.

[See also Vols. XXIII and XXXI.]

A collection of legal aphorisms, closely connected with one of the oldest Vedic schools, the Kathas, but considerably added to in later time. Of importance for a critical study of the Laws of Manu.
